DIFFICULTIES OF MERCHANDISING

THERE are as many different grades of merchandising as there are different brands of whiskies, and observation has shown conclusively that the quality varies proportionately in both. In fact, if the number of failures be taken as a criterion, it would seem that a very large proportion of the merchants are sadly deficient in their ability to properly and successfully carry on a business enterprise.

Advice and suggestions to prospective merchants, and even to those already engaged in business, are seldom if ever followed. Experience is apparently the only teacher whose instructions are heeded, or at least it is only after one has made the trial which has demonstrated his inefficiency that he realizes the value of suggestions and advice.

The success of some business houses—viewed by employes who more frequently are unfamiliar with the inside workings and therefore ignorant as to whether the large volume of business bears a profit sufficient to cover the ever-increasing expense account in connection with the elements of loss and depreciation which forms a very decided addition to the expense account—has a tendency to cause employes to aspire to merchandising themselves, and in consequence they cut loose from their employers and with little if any experience, inadequate capital and credit, open up in busines and endeavor to compete with their former employers.

Competition Becoming Fiercer.

The old saying, "All is not gold that glitters," exactly covers the situation of merchandising as it should be viewed by the prospective merchant. Because some houses have established a reputation for a large and profitable business does not mean that all can be so successful. Then again it should not be accepted as a fact that all houses who may possibly be doing a large volume of business are realizing profitable returns. There was a time when any merchant could make money, but changed conditions have brought about circumstances which make it very difficult indeed for a merchant to receive satisfactory compensation for the large amount of money invested and for the time and care devoted to the business. Statistics show that business enterprises are constantly increasing, consequently competition is becoming fiercer—at least becoming more general every day. There was a time before railway facilities had been provided and before telegraphy in all its multiplied usefulness had been introduced that the local merchants absolutely controlled the local situation. At that time there were few if any trade papers, which now keep all classes fully posted as to prices and conditions; the local press made no effort at all to keep the trade familiar with such conditions, and in consequence the merchant could ask and obtain almost any price he asked. The customary profit in those times was the Dutchman's 1 per cent. In other words, an article costing $1 would be sold for $2. The expense of doing business many years ago was very small. The public did not awaken to a necessity for modern improvements and such other conveniences that necessitate at the present time such large outlays before a merchant is wholly equipped for business. Living expenses of employes was very much less than at the present time, and in consequence the labor situation did not assume such proportions as it does now.

Increasing Expense Accounts.

The effort which is being made by the up-to-date merchants at the present time to meet the changed conditions which modern invention and improvements have brought about calls for a constantly increasing expense account, and when one considers the declining profits which must in some way meet increased expenses, the merchant is asking himself the question, "Where am I at?" The question may arose in the minds of those who are anxious to enter into business, "Why do not the old merchants sell out if they are not obtaining commensurate returns from the time devoted to their business and the capital invested?" Many of them are endeavoring to get out of harness, but the difficulty lies in finding purchasers who will pay them for the amount invested. It is impossible for a merchant to keep his stocks clean and up-to-date without tying up money in unsalable stock. Goods will accumulate and become unsalable, especially at the present time. Styles are constantly changing, and frequently goods will remain on the shelf because of the fact that custom has changed and popular opinion demands some other article or some other style In consequence of this the merchant has on hand an ever-increasing stock of unsalable goods, and it is difficult to find a purchaser who will pay for such goods at anything like their cost.

Training of Employes.

One very serious drawback to the merchandise business is the necesisty of training employes to satisfactorily perform the duties assigned them. Young men who have been trained in the business have an attack of going into business for themselves, and when they leave their employers are compelled to obtain new material and train them for the work for which they are employed. It is quite natural for such training to result in unsatisfactory service, and frequently in actual loss to employers. Experience has shown that a very large part of the employes who enter into business for themselves frequently fail and often go back to their old employers wiser but poorer for the venture. If the loss of the business venture was confined to the parties themselves the damage would not be so great, but while in business they have endeavored to compete with their old employers and with other merchants, frequently at ruinous low prices and at terms both unsatisfactory and unprofitable. The established merchants must of necessity meet the competition of new houses, and when such new concerns are operated by inexperienced and inefficient management the result to all interested can be very well considered.

The Elements of Success.

As has been stated above, there was a time when anyone could make money in merchandising, but changed conditions now bring the merchandise business down to a practically scientific undertaking. The merchant who can conduct his business at the least possible expense consistent with a satisfactory and presentable display, one who has the intruition of selecting the proper employes to assist him in operating his business and who can educate them to the proper character of salesmanship, the one who can command sufficient capital and all the credit necessary to carry a sufficient stock and to take advantage of market conditions in buying goods ahead or in contracting for the same, and who has the tact and the nerve to secure from the manufacturers their best possible terms and prices—is the one who will succeed. The up-to-date merchant should be a student of human nature, should know how to approach the people personally and in an advertising way through newspapers and other advertising mediums, must command the respect of his customers and at the same time have the respect of his employes. It is as necessary for a merchant to carefully select his employes as it is for a general to have able officers under him. A large mercantile business at the present time and epoch has a lifelong campaign to follow up. It is the survival of the fittest in business as in other professions. Many young merchants seem to consider a supply of cash and fair credit is all the equipment they need in entering business. While both these requirements are very valuable in their place, at the same time there are other attributes for the business man which are of even greater importance.

Prospective Merchants' Qualifications

The history of many great men, especially in the commercial world, presents each one's qualifications, and it would be well for prospective merchants to carefully review the experience of these men and profit from their advice and suggestions. It is quite true that it is human nature to aspire to business ventures. Many young men are anxious to become their own boss, and they imagine that this can only be done by their going into business for themselves, and in reality bossing the entire business. Observation will show conclusively that it is not necessary for a young man to enter business to command the respect of his superiors, equals and inferiors. The man who properly and satisfactorily handles a department of any of the great merchants commands not only the highest respect of his employers, but also those working under him. There is always advancement with these lieutenants, and if they are successful in their work their future is assured. A great trouble with the average employe is that he is afraid he will work too hard, that he will put in too many hours, or that he will injure his brain in the interest of his employers. Such labor—for such it is—can never succeed in any undertaking. They over-estimate their ability and are constantly seeking the unattainable.

In conclusion, it would be well for all prospective merchants to very thoroughly consider the proposition before going into business. While it is practically impossible to convince such parties that the experience of others would assist them in reaching proper conclusions, yet some good may result by giving such suggestions and advice. There are some facts that can be truthfully substantiated by all successful merchants, that is, that the merchandise business is not a bed of roses, and many of these same merchants will urge young men to refrain from going in business for themselves, but instead to seek responsible positions with established merchants and thus demonstrate their usefulness.

Capital can always be placed to good advantage, and the young man who has a surplus had best invest the same with his employer or in some other enterprise where the security is good and prospects bright for good returns.

CANADIAN-MEXICAN STEAMSHIP LINE.

THE subsidized steamship line between Canada and Mexico is at last an established fact. The Elder-Dempster Steamship Co. have entered into a contract with the Canadian and Mexican Governments and will place two first-class steamers of 4,000 tons dead weight capacity and large passenger accommodation on the service. At first the boats will take the trip once a month, plying between Mexican ports and Montreal in Summer and Halifax in Winter. By the terms of the contract with the Mexican Government, the vessels may carry passengers and cargo from Canada to Cuba, cargoes and passengers both ways between Mexico and Canada, but on the north-bound trips no freight may be taken from Cuba to Canada, as the Mexican Government objects to subsidizing a line used to build up a trade between Cuba and Canada. Provision is made for calling at Charlottetown, Havana, Progresso, Vera Cruz, Tampico and other ports.

VISITOR FROM FRANCE.

Mr. Joseph P. Sgueglia, managing director of the English and Italian departments of the firm of Suout & Cie, Nice, and also representing A. C. Meukow & Co., of Cognac, France, was a caller upon the Montreal grocery importing trade during the week, in company with Mr. J. Russell Murray, local representative of above firms.

In conversation with The Grocer representative, Mr. Sgueglia stated that his firms are the largest producers of olive oil, and practically control the trade of this article in a number of European countries, and especially in Germany, where their products are generally accepted as standards. A large business is also done with the United States and England, and he hoped that Canadians would in equal measure realize the importance of dealing with his firms. Mr. Sgueglia is an Italian, but speaking English fluently, having received a thorough education in that tongue. Some interesting information was supplied The Grocer bearing on the olive oil industry, which will later be published. Mr. Sgueglia is completing his four on this continent, and sails from New York on the 11th inst. by the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse.

GERMAN DEPARTMENTAL STORES

According to U.S. consular despatch Germany is contemplating the establishment of large departmental stores in the United States and other countries, the object being the exploitation of German goods.

The cry now raised by export and trade papers in Germany and Austria is, "Start department stores abroad." One of these journals says that the Belgian export houses have established department stores in foreign countries, and that the United States Export Organization is acting upon the propaganda started by United States consuls for the establishment of American department stores abroad. Dr. Salomonsohn, a partner of the Disconto Bank of Berlin, who made a tour of investigation through the United States, says in his book, giving his impressions of the journey, that "the most efficient means of defence against the 'American danger' is the adoption (by the Germans) of American methods, and, above all, the combination of German business firms."

SILVER BUSINESS JUBILEE.

On the 23rd of June last Mr. John H. Magor, of Frank Magor & Co., Montreal, completed his twenty-fifth year as selling agent for Keen's mustard, Cadbury's cocoas, Lazenby's products, etc. On the very first day of landing in Montreal to join the late Mr. Frank Magor in developing the Canadian business of their English firms, Mr. Magor took to canvassing and secured his first order for Keen's mustard. Since that time Mr. Magor has had the privilege of covering the entire Dominion in the interests of the English houses represented by them and secured hundreds of orders from the trade, and to-day the name of Frank Magor & Co. is known throughout Canada in the grocery jobbing trade as one of the most enterprising commission houses in the trade. The Grocer wishes Mr. Magor another twenty-five years of prosperity and success.

PICKED UP ON THE ROAD.

Personal Impressions of The Grocer's Traveling Representative in the Maritime Provinces

TO one who has never before in his travels seen the Metapedia Valley and River from the windows of the Intercolonial Railway's fine train, the Ocean Limited, it is a revelation. This fast train follows the course of the river for many miles, and those who get up early enough are amply rewarded for their trouble, as you will go a long way before you find anything more pleasing to the eye, if you are a lover of nature.

Arriving at Campbellton, N.B., one is struck with the nice location of the town. It is situated on Parker Lake, with mountains in the background thickly covered with green foliage, making it a very picturesque spot.

The principal industry of this district is lumber, and some of the merchants in Campbellton, Newcastle and Chatham reported business a little quieter than usual, owing to the depression in the lumber business. The logs are held up in the streams, which makes it quiet at the mills, and, of course, this means a small cut. However, the merchants of these towns are very optimistic, and expect everything to be in running order shortly, and look forward to a good Fall trade in all lines.

A New Brunswick Grocery.

A very neat and attractive store is that of Miller Bros., Newcastle, N.B. They have a very complete and nicely arranged stock of groceries and provisions, and keep nothing but first-class goods in stock. They are located in the centre of the business district of the town. On branching out into the grocery business about a year ago they put in the most modern store fittings, and success has crowned their efforts from the start, owing chiefly to the fact that they pay strict attention to business, and keep nothing but the best at reasonable prices.

Among the Travelers.

Mr. A. H. McIntosh and Mr. F. J. Cheesworth are making a three months' tour of the Maritime Provinces, advertising and sampling every town and village for Church & Dwight, Limited, manufacturers of "Cow Brand Soda." The Grocer's representative had a chat with Mr. Cheesworth, who reports a big increase of sales in the east as a result of their efforts. After they have finished a town all you can see is "Cow Brand Soda" caps on the boys. They evidently believe in extensive advertising. Mr. Cheesworth mentioned in his conversation that he saw The Grocer everywhere he went. This speaks well for our circulation.

The Grocer's man met Mr. Percy Strong, traveler for Tucketts' tobaccos, in Campbellton. He was wearing "the smile that won't come off," and you can pretty nearly guess the reason. He had just booked a nice order for the famous Marguerite cigars. Mr. Strong reports big increase in business in the Eastern Provinces.

THE IRISH MARKET.

In a letter to the United States Department of Trade and Commerce, Alfred K. Moe, consul at Dublin, says: "The superior packing of American apples, and their low price, as compared with a similar quality of fruit grown in Ireland, together with a favorable demand for such apples here, should lead our American exporters to renewed energies in the matter of securing a market in Ireland. Heretofore this has been accomplished through Covent Garden in London, but there is an excellent opportunity for the establishment of a central distributing station in Dublin, thus avoiding delays of transportation, resales, and middlemen's profits. It is unnecessary to point out that if this market is not secured now the active and intelligent methods of the Irish department of agriculture will very soon make it impossible to compete successfully with the Irish product. Pears should also find a ready market in Ireland, as the fruit is in demand, but can not be successfully cultivated here."

Frenzied Business

It is about three years since the Six Nations up under the Hamilton Mountain formed themselves into one band. Ever since that time there has been rumors of war and an attack on the small band of Pale Faces opposed to them. At the very start of the organization it is said the young braves in the lodge have had their war paint on and have been eager to draw the tomahawk and the scalping knife, but have been restrained up to a short time ago by the Elder Chiefs who know what an expense a war of this kind means. The common sense of the Elder Chiefs it is said would have prevailed if it had not been for the influence of their Chief Medicine Man who is a great organizer from east to west, being thrown in with the young party. It is said he has advised them that the organization was complete and the time was ripe for attack, so the result is we have the whiz of the tomahawk throughout the land and we have 60c. peas. One of the biggest Pale Faces opposed to them is the Quaker Chief at the head of his community and it is said they have given him the choice of surrender and join their nation, or a fight to the death. The Quaker has refused to do either, and the fight is on. The Six Nation Chiefs claim that not many moons will pass before the Quakers' scalp will hang on their wampum belt. Whether it will or not time will tell. The Quaker in ordinary life is a very modest and unassuming gentleman, entirely opposed to war, and likes to pursue his way peaceably through life. This is his disposition if left alone ; but if attacked it is believed there is another side to his nature. It is possible these Chiefs of the Six Nations have put their foot into it and and when they pull it out of the hole they may think it dropped into a combination nest of hornets and rattlesnakes.

THE TRADE PAPER.

That a trade paper can be of great worth to the line of business it represents goes without comment and its worth can be measured in proportion to its use. By this is not meant the total issue printed and circulated altogether, but the total number of its interested readers. This information cannot be easily obtained, but it is a well-known fact that a trade paper has vastly more readers than subscribers. There are several reasons for this. One reason is that a tradesman who thinks he cannot afford to subscribe for one of his trade papers will borrow of his neighbors. He is like a man without a watch. He wants to know the time, and to learn it he must consult the watch of another man. Another method by which extra readers are gained is through the proprietors or managers of establishments. They realize the worth of a paper akin to their business, and will often pass their trade papers around among their employees. Some of the firms go further and will subscribe for a dozen or more of these papers and distribute them among their employes. They do this because they want keen, bright, well-read men behind their line of business, and the trade reviews sharpen these virtues. The public libraries also realize their value and are among the great patronizers of the trade press issues, and supply their shelves liberally with them. There they are read and reread by a large number of trade people. Many expert tradesmen who have risen from the ranks will admit that they owe their success, in a large measure, to the keen interest with which for years they have followed the progress and policy outlined by the leading papers of the trade of which they were a part.—Trade Press List.

DEMAND FOR BEEF IN JAPAN.

Alex. MacLean, Canadian commercial agent in Japan, writing to the Department of Trade and Commerce, says there is a great demand for beef at the present time in Japan. The war has caused a great scarcity and prices have advanced from $9 to $13 per 133 lbs. The Japanese are endeavoring to procure beef from other countries, particularly Australia.

Not only are cattle in great demand for food purposes, but as beasts of burden, the horses having almost entirely been requisitioned for war purposes. The rice crop is about in need of cultivation and when there are no horses, cattle must be substituted. Under ordinary circumstances the number of cattle slaughtered annually in Japan for food purposes was about 500 head, but since the war about 1,000 head per day have been required.

Fresh and Cured Fish

NORWEGIAN CATCH LIGHT.

THE Norwegian Spring codfishery yielded 34,600,000 individual cods, as against 39,100,000 last year, but it is thought the greater weight of this year's fish will counterbalance this shortage and make this year's output about equal to that of last year. Fishing has shifted from Lofaten to Finmarken. Prospects are still quite good, but, however the Finmarken fisheries will turn out, the final output of this season's fisheries no doubt will have to be characterized as very bad, and prices will be correspondingly high, probably higher than those of last year. because of the fact that no old stock exists.

CAN-MAKING COMPLETED.

Preparations on the Fraser River this year have ben made for a pack of between 750,000 and 800,000 cases of fish, and it is thought the latter figure will be exceeded. Practically all the canneries have finished their can-making operations. Many fishermen are already locating on the Fraser, and it is expected that several thousand fishermen will be at work by the middle of July.

FISH NOTES.

Reports from Louisburg, C.B., indicate that a strong east wind last week drove many of the lobster traps ashore, which means a serious loss to the fishermen in the locality.

The Department of Marine and Fisheries states that Mr. Cowie and his Scotch experts for herring curing are meeting with great success in the Maritime Provinces. This Fall they will go to British Columbia.

Hon. Dr. Reaume, Minister of Public Works, Toronto, was in Sault Ste. Marie last week investigating commercial fishing conditions. His purpose was to gather information which would assist in framing an Act to be introduced at the next session for the revision of the fisheries regulations of the province. He intends to visit all the principal points in Ontario where commercial fishing is carried on.

Salmon fishermen at St. John, N.B., are making small fortunes these days, it is said. It is no unusual thing for two men in a boat to make fifty or sixty dollars in a night, and this has been going on for some time, so that numbers of fishermen in the past three weeks cleared from three to four hundred dollars. Such a run of salmon has not been known for years. In the early nineties salmon were plentiful in one season, and the men caught just as many as they are doing now, but the price was not nearly as high.

Acting on a petition setting forth the grievances of the citizens of Sault Ste. Marie against Booth & Co., the alleged "fish trust," Hon. J. O. Reaume refused the company a license to fish in the Canadian waters of Lake Superior. When it was found that this would result in two hundred or more men being thrown out of employment, a counter-petition was signed asking that the company be given fishing rights west of Pancake Bay. To study the situation Hon. J. O. Reaume visited the Sault and as a result the alleged fish trust has surrendered to the people.

There is likely to be trouble over the erection of the various salmon traps down the Straits, according to the Victoria, B.C., Times. The trouble arises over the locations. The Government requires a distance of 2,000 feet between traps. This regulation would prove satisfactory if the traps at either end of the coast line conformed with a certain rule, but it so happens that in this instance, this is not the case. All the traps are on the western sides of the various sites and thus conform with the law, except the trap at the end, owned by Todd & Munsie. This being on the eastern side of the site, the owner of the adjacent site is unable to set a trap to suit requirements.

LONDON PRODUCE LETTER

By Our London, Eng., Correspondent.

IN spite of the fact that the price of French butter, as hinted some weeks back, is stiffening, London importers are still unwilling to buy Canadian at present quotations. Yesterday (June 22) 98s. landed, without any counter offers was refused by a leading house. As a matter of fact, business is not so brisk as was hoped, and, although a little Canadian butter, ranging from 90s. to 98s., has been sold this week, there is a general tendency to leave it alone until prices are more reasonable.

According to statistics, imports into London for week ending June 10 from Canada and the United States are as follows:

	Canada	U.S.A.
Butter	4,257 pkgs.
Cheese	10,384 cwt.	325 cwt.
Bacon	1,101 pkgs.	210 pkgs.
Canned Meats	543 pkgs.	1,905 pkgs.
Lard	978 cwts.	3,193 cwts.
Hams	910 pkgs.	5,778 pkgs.

The egg situation is peculiar. As stated last week, Hungarian eggs, together with others from Galicia and the adjacent districts, are likely to be scarcer than usual owing to small supplies. Consumers on the continent are therefore drawing from other sources, and prices are ruling high. This accounts for the fact that Russian eggs are in good demand on the London market, and, although the quality is not so good as last season, large consignments continue to be reported. Irish eggs, also, are gradually becoming more popular on the London market. and Irish exporters are devoting special attention to the requirements of the trade here.

London is not the chief market for Canadian butter, the reason being that Manchester, Liverpool and Bristol, being more accessible, freight rates are cheaper than to London. In addition to this, the demand for white butter, such as comes from Canada, is not so great in London as elsewhere. As a matter of fact, very little white butter is sold in London except in the Jewish quarter of the Metropolis, popular taste being in favor of yellow butter, which, it might be said, is very frequently colored. In Manchester, on the other hand, the whiter the butter the better.

While amongst the butter and cheese salesmen of Smithfield and Central Markets, The Grocer correspondent was asked whether it is possible for the smaller buyers to deal direct with Canada. It should be explained that Central Markets and Smithfield consist for the most part of salesmen of good standing and extensive connections amongst the retail trade and the public. Nearly all these salesmen buy Canadian produce from the larger importers on arrival in London. While it cannot be denied that there is considerable competition amongst these large importers, which tends to keep prices within a reasonable limit, at the same time it is a fact that these comparatively small buyers are to a certain extent in the power of the larger importers, and if they could get into communication with Canadian concerns who are in a position to ship quantities suitable for their requirements, they would be glad to enter into negotiations.

Of course there are difficulties in the way. Whether these difficulties can be overcome is a problem, the solution of which rests to a great extent with Canadians themselves. Just as over here in London, the bulk of Canadian butter and cheese gets into the hands of the larger concerns, who in turn distribute to the smaller men, so in Canada there are big exporters who collect from the smaller makers and ship to the big houses over here. Could the smaller Canadian makers, instead of leaving the export business to certain big concerns, establish a connection with such firms as these salesmen of Central Markets and elsewhere? Perhaps, as a general class, they find it safer and surer to leave the export trade alone, but there are some who get into correspondence with importers over here, and, on the other hand, there are men on this side who are anxious to get into touch with Canadians who are in a position to ship regular consignments of a thousand or so cases.

The first obstacle is that each small shipper would in all probability send over a different quality stuff, so that it would be difficult for the public to know exactly what they were going to get for their money, and the second obstacle is the banking arrangements for these small accounts. The first difficulty might be overcome in the same way as the Danish people have overcome it, and by the adoption of the grading system, such as is in existence in New Zealand. Of course, it is factory butter that is required in London. The quality of Canadian cheese does not vary to such an extent as to offer serious hindrance. The question of accounts could only be settled by private arrangements between the exporter and importer. To some this would perhaps be an insurmountable obstacle, but not to all. One thing is quite clear. If the smaller men could do business with each other without having to rely upon the big concerns, a great deal of unhealthy speculation would be avoided.

SPECIAL CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN.

Montreal, July 6, 1905.

THE local dealers and exporters in cheese and butter have for some years been quite accustomed to work their business at a loss at the beginning of the season, or say from the time that the first product of new milk arrives on the market until the second half of May, otherwise called the "Fodder Make," but when full grass goods come around everybody expects to get at least a small profit on the goods he handles.

This year it seems different; here we are well on with the June make, and so far it takes a very strong magnifying glass to discover any profit between the cost of the goods in the country markets and the selling prices in Great Britain. The reasons given are various, and all of them may have something to do with this strange situation. It may be a keener competition in both buying in the country and selling over the cable. Certainly there are more country buyers this year, and there is also an increased number of exporters. Then, again, the argument is used that the business is getting more and more speculative, the cold storage facilities are ever increasing on both sides of the Atlantic to prevent perishable goods from deteriorating in quality; then there is a desire by some to do a large business, and sales for future delivery are being made; this is called "selling short," and as these sales become known here and the goods must in time be bought to fill these contracts, others, perhaps with a little grudge against their neighbors, may try to prevent the filling of these contracts at a price which would show a profit to the sellers by bidding up prices in the country.

However, the result is that so far nobody is making any money for his labor, judgment, capital invested, risk in shipping goods over 3,000 miles away, etc., and the conservative dealers and exporters are commencing to ask how long is this going to last? The season is a short one, and if the merchants cannot get a profit during the season what will the end be? The farmer is doing well; he gets good prices for his product. The English importer is getting his cheese and butter at a comparatively low figure, but the middleman, who pays his money to the farmer, stands all the expenses of handling the immense quantities of dairy products, and is finally compelled to sell his goods at less than cost price to the British importers. What is to become of him?

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

TORONTO.

Provisions—There is a good demand for all lines of smoked meats, and prices are consequently firm. The call for barrelled is fair. Lard is firm at quoted figures. In dressed meats mutton and lamb have eased off to the extent of a cent, and dressed hogs are also slightly easier. We quote:

Butter—Receipts are reported fairly large and quality generally very good owing to the fine meadows. Demand keeps strong both locally and in Old Country. Prices are as a result firm. We quote:

Dairy prints	0 15	0 17

Cheese—There is little change in the cheese situation, with perhaps a little firmness noticeable abroad; there is a better demand, but dealers say the price locally is still above that in England. Quality reaching this market for consumptive requirements is reported very good. We quote:

	Per lb.

Provisions—Firmness is the prevailing characteristic of the provision market. The short supply of live hogs has tended to hold prices high, and as the demand is good there is little likelihood of any downward change. No change is noted in fresh abattoir-killed stock, which has held strong at $9.50 to $9.75 under fair demand. Hams and bacon are selling well, being seasonable, and an active business is passing.

Butter—Butter holds up firm. The demand for both foreign and local account is satisfactory from all reports. There is strong complaint on part of exporters that the high prices they have to pay prevents doing a large export trade, but strange to say, a very large foreign trade was done during the past week. Creamery is held at 20c. at country points, and 20 1-4 to 20 1-2c. is asked locally. Choice creamery is quoted at 20c., and good at 19 3-4c. Shipments from this port last week were 40,004 packages, or 24,525 more than same week last year, and since the opening of the season 104,036 packages were sent out, or 36,449 more than same period last year.

Medium	0 18½	0 19
Fresh rolls	0 17	0 18
Fresh dairy tubs	0 16½	0 17

Cheese—The cheese situation is showing up well, and export business last week was the enormous amount of 100,544 boxes, or 16,803 more than same time last year. There exists an active demand. This week finest Ontario is held att 10 1-8c., though 9 7-8 and 10c. is as often accepted. Townships 9 3-4 to 9 7-8 and Quebecs 9 5-8 to 9 3-4. Since the opening of the season 491,885 boxes have been shipped abroad, or 70,707 boxes more than same period last year, while New York shipments have been 9,754 boxes less than last year same period.

Eggs—Egg market is steady, demand locally very good. Straight gathered quoted at 16c., though in many cases 15 to 15 1-2c. is accepted for 5 to 10-case lots. Receipts are light, and this tends to keep market firm.

in Denmark thought of exporting eggs, and poultry-keeping was only given little attention. Since that time there have been made energetic efforts to bring this trade up, and in the year 1895, there was formed an association for egg export known as the Danish Egg Export Co-operative Association.

In the following year the export of eggs from Denmark reached a value of kroner 7,400,000 or $1,973,300, and in 1902 it had grown to kroner 22,500,000, or $6,000,000. At present the association has about 33,500 members and 500 local branches. Every branch gathers the fresh eggs within its district and sends them to a certain export harbor. From the moment the eggs leave the branch, where they are gathered, all expenses are paid by the association, which also guarantees the freshness of the eggs. Every branch has at least 10 members.

The eggs gathered must be shipped inside of four days. At the central export place the eggs are weighed and assorted in groups according to the size, and they are also there tested to determine their freshness, after which they are packed in cases bearing the mark of the association and an inscription, showing the number and quality. It will be easily understood that this method is far to be preferred instead of the storekeepers buying up the eggs and letting them lie around their stores and warehouses for weeks before they are shipped. The English market, therefore, takes all the eggs which Denmark can produce, and the very highest prices are always obtained.

CANADA IN FRANCE.

At a luncheon recently given by the Trade and Industry Union of France, at Ledouen, Mr. Poindron, commercial agent for the Canadian Government to France, gave an interesting address on the "Economical Future of Canada." After he had given a rapid sketch of the geography of this country, Mr. Poindron stated that Canada was divided into three great regions, east, west and extreme west. He pointed out the principal resources of these three regions and showed that, notwithstanding the immense area of the country, there were ample means of communication with other nations.

The national resources, he pointed out, were most abundant, and unlimited water power made their development possible. Coal was worth in Sydney three dollars; in Alberta less than two; and in Vancouver from two to two and a half. The speaker attributed the consistently good crops to the amount of snowfall. One hundred and fifty thousand immigrants entered the country each year.

Mr. Poindron, in speaking of New Ontario, referred to the impression in some quarters that this was a poor land. On the contrary he showed that it was rich in minerals and would experience a wonderful industrial development.

Without considering the future at all, Canada had reached figures beyond expectations. In seven years the foreign trade had doubled. From about $1,300,000,000 in 1897 it rose in 1904 above $2,370,000,000, which represents a per capita trade of two and a half times as much as in France. Everything, he said, should encourage France to take an active part, why not a leading one, in the development of Canada, instead of being headed by European nations. This was for France not only a question of interest and profit, but also of dignity.

"Illegitimate, Cut-throat, Less than Cost" is what an advertiser in last week's "Grocer" terms the Canadian Canners Co.'s prices on Peas, for the season of 1905.

If a careful comparison is made between prices since the organization of the Canadian Canners, Limited, and prices prior to that date, it will be found that prices generally are on a lower scale with the exception of one or two lines where prices have ruled high owing to partial crop failures. The policy of the Canadian Canners from the first has been, and will continue to be, highest quality at lowest prices.

PEAS IN PARTICULAR—When prices are "less than cost" it is a good time to buy, as the probability of loss is practically nil, and the possibility of gain is very great, even if the goods have to be carried over into another season. The law of demand and supply holds true in the canned goods business as in all others, therefore buy while prices are "less than cost."

Make sure, however, that the quality of the Peas you buy is strictly first-class. The only way to make "absolutely sure" of the quality is to buy brands controlled by the Canadian Canners, Limited. These are

PULL DOWN THE FENCES.

IN these days when benevolence and philanthropy are talked about so much and when thousands of dollars are being spent to provide fresh air and amusements for the poor, it is surprising to find how many simple means of attaining these ends are being overlooked. It would appear that nothing is worth doing unless it costs money.

In passing through any city or town, one is always sure to notice a great deal of vacant property. In a few cases this property stands bare and open to the public and forms a splendid playground for the children. But in most cases it will be found that the vacant property is fenced in and guarded from intrusion by such familiar notices as "Trespassing strictly prohibited." Why should this be so? Will the value of the property be diminished if the fences are pulled down, the signs burned and free access given to the public?

We would urge the philanthropically-inclined aldermen of our cities and towns to turn their attention in this direction. It is all well enough for them to appropriate thousands of dollars for purchasing and maintaining parks. But the same object could be secured in some measure in a much cheaper way by compelling the owners of vacant property lying useless to tear down their fences and allow the public to enter. The same restrictions which prevent rowdyism and abuses in the public parks could as easily be enforced in these vacant lots and proprietors be safeguarded from the destruction of their property.

No one can minimize the importance of fresh air and breathing space in the lives of our children, and the children of the poor should receive as much consideration as the children of the rich from the authorities. In their interest we advocate this measure.

INDICTED THE BEEF TRUST.

LAST Saturday afternoon the Federal grand jury, before whom the investigation of the charges made against the United States beef trust was carried on, brought in their report. The investigation, it may be explained, had been conducted for several months, at a cost in the neighborhood of $300,000, and the finding of the jury was awaited with keen interest.

The result has been that seventeen men and the corporations of which they are the chief officers, have been indicted for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. The corporations are: Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Nelson, Morris & Co., the Cudahy Packing Co., and the Fairbank Canning Co.

The indictments in each case are identical, and consist of eight counts. Of these the first and second counts pertain only to beef sold in domestic trade. The third count charges a conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce among the states and with foreign countries. Competition in the buying of cattle at stock yards was to be prevented and destroyed by the defendants, who required their purchasing agents to refrain from bidding against each other. Competition in the selling of commodities was to be prevented and destroyed by the defendants fixing non-competitive and unreasonable prices. Supplies were to be curtailed and restricted whenever necessary to maintain prices so fixed. There was to be a division of territory. Certain corporations were to be given exclusive contracts for the supply of materials.

The fourth count charges that the same dealings mentioned in the third count as being in restraint of trade and commerce, constituted an offence on the part of the packers to monopolize such trade and commerce.

The fifth count specifically covers the handling of the by-products and describes a conspiracy in restraint of trade to be effective in the same way as set forth in the third count with reference to all of the products mentioned.

The other counts refer to the dealings of the National Packing Co. The persons indicted will have to appear shortly before the court to plead to the indictments.

THE LAST SHALL BE FIRST.

SLOWLY and surely Canada is wresting from the United States supremacy as an exporter of dairy produce. To-day the export trade in cheese and butter is almost exclusively in the hands of Canadians. A reference to the table in our London letter this week amply proves the truth of this assertion.

From statistics recently published, it is shown that the shipments of butter from the port of Montreal up to June 28 totalled 65,791 packages. Over the same period last year shipments were 56,208 packages, or 9,083 packages less than this year. Compare this with New York. From the United States port there were shipped this year the insignificant total of 1,209 packages, which is considerably less than the amount shipped last year, viz., 4,156 packages.

In the export cheese trade the same diminution is to be noted. Up to June 24, 17,705 packages of cheese were shipped from New York, whilst during the same period last year 57,855 packages were despatched to European markets. This decrease is not due in any case to a reduced production. It is rather owing to a rapidly increasing home demand, which threatens to become so extensive as to require relief from Canada in the near future.

AMBITIOUS SASKATOON.

THE rivalry of Calgary and Edmonton and the dispute as to the capital of the new Province of Alberta have been given considerable prominence in all parts of Canada, but it is not so well known that Saskatoon has ambitions to be capital of Saskatchewan, an honor which Regina considers rightly hers as the old Territorial capital. Saskatoon is ambitious, and in the language of the sporting fraternity, is determined to give Regina "a run for her money." When it was found that the celebration in Regina, which had been set for Dominion Day in honor of the creation of the twin provinces, had to be postponed because of the delay in passing the Autonomy Bills, Saskatoon citizens decided upon an enterprising step. The delegates and press representatives at the Board of Trade convention at Regina were invited to visit Saskatoon on Dominion Day, attend a banquet that night and remain over until Monday for the Dominion Day celebration. A special train was provided for the accommodation of the guests and everything possible was done to provide for their comfort, the object being to show the business men of the west what manner of place is the enterprising town which aspires to be capital of Saskatchewan. Without expressing any opinion as to the respective merits of Regina and Saskatoon, we must at least pay our tribute to the enterprise of the ambitious new aspirant for capital honors.

A SUCCESSFUL CONVENTION.

IN view of the full account which appears elsewhere in this issue of the convention held in Regina last week by the Associated Boards of Trade of the Northwest Territories, it is unnecessary to make extended editorial reference to it. Our readers can form their own conclusions from the report. Its length is justified by the importance of the gathering, the personnel of the convention, which was composed of the best business men of the west, and the nature of the topics discussed. The functions of such a convention are purely advisory, but they are rash politicians and legislators who think they can afford to ignore the soberly-expressed opinions of representative business men who feel the responsibility of all their utterances. The Legislatures of the new provinces will, if they are wise, pay serious heed to the various pronouncements of the convention.

One suggestion we desire to make to the Executive. The bill of fare this year was too long and the delegates were not given sufficient notice of the subjects which were to come up for discussion. This should be remedied next year by insisting strictly that the various boards should submit their resolutions at least a month in advance, in order that copies may be distributed before the convention.

A noticeable feature of the convention was the popularity of the principle of Government ownership of public utilities. Opinions may well be divided as to the wisdom of the policy, but if these business men who were delegates to the convention represent the sentiment of the business men of their communities—and there is no reason to doubt that they do—the west is strongly in favor of public ownership. It is a significant sign of the times.

At one time it seemed likely that the convention would decide to separate into two distinct provincial bodies, but what we feel was the wiser policy ultimately prevailed, and a strong united association was formed to be known as the "Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada." A bright future seems to be in store for this organization and we do not doubt but that it will have a powerful influence in moulding the legislation of the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

QUEBEC'S COMMERCIAL TAX.

MUCH misunderstanding and unfavorable comment is resulting from the recently adopted law assessing travelers of foreign houses doing business in the Province of Quebec the sum of $300 annually. A large number of Canadian manufacturers and wholesalers are, according to Mr. J. F. Stewart, of the Manufacturers' Association, still under the impression that the tax applies to them. As has been pointed out in these columns, a strict reading of the wording of the Act would consider residents of other provinces in Canada to be foreigners in Quebec, but the Quebec law-makers are not interpretating the Act so closely, and Canadians are, therefore, not liable to the tax as it is being at present enforced. In this respect, Quebec is more friendly to her sister provinces than British Columbia, whose tax of $50 semi-annually is imposed on Canadians as well as "foreigners."

In the United States the impression also seems to be held by many that the new law is a piece of Dominion legislation. An item emanating from the Boston News Bureau, headed "Canada's New Business Tax," is being copied extensively throughout the east. It reads as follows:

"Boston commercial travelers en route from Toronto to Montreal were surprised to learn that if they went farther east they would be subject to a new tax of $300 as representatives of commercial houses having no place of business in Canada.

"The law became effective Wednesday last and the penalty is very severe; ranging from $500 to $1,000. The Boston men immediately returned home after notifying their customers in the Province of Quebec that they must send their orders direct to the home office or arrange a meeting at Toronto or elsewhere in Ontario."

The feeling of American commercial men on the subject can be judged by an extract from a letter sent by a large association of manufacturers in the United States to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, as follows:

"This would appear to be a matter for Dominion legislation, and not for that of a province, seeing that it is to some extent an interference with international trade. It is conceivable that if it is constitutionally correct for one province to pass legislation of this kind others could do the same, and might perhaps place the license at so high a figure as to absolutely prevent any traveler from Europe or the States soliciting business in Canada, if that should be the object."

Little has been heard from Great Britain as yet, but it is certain that the commercial press there will strongly condemn Quebec's action as tending to destroy imperialistic sentiment and as being altogether out of harmony with the friendly commercial feeling between Canada and the Mother Country, which has been developed during the past few years.

As stated last week, it seems likely that the Quebec legislators will find the Act to be a boomerang, and on account of the loss of trade will find it necessary to reduce the amount of the tax or abolish it altogether.

THE CHINESE BOYCOTT.

IT would be practically impossible to over-estimate the importance of the boycott declared by the Chinese people on all goods of American origin. The movement has become so general that it is bound to attract a great deal more attention than it has so far done. Not only in the coast cities of British Columbia has the action been taken, but all down the coast the Chinese communities in such cities as Portland and San Francisco have taken up the cudgels. Recent events in China and other points across the Pacific are detailed at length in papers received the other day by the Empress of China, which arrived from Hong Kong. The determined action of the Chinese has been given force by the proposal to exclude from the United States even Chinese merchants and students. The protests of the Chinese against the signing of the proposed Act by the president took the form of a convention in the Canton Guild Hall at Shanghai, on May 12. This was one of the most notable and largely attended meetings ever held in Shanghai. Bankers and Chinese merchant princes from every province in China were present, and the utmost decorum was observed in the calm deliberations of the distinguished body of business men. Business-like resolutions were adopted briefly setting out the action to be taken to emphasize the protest. Not only will all American goods be boycotted, but every servant will leave his employ if American, and no coolies or other laborers will aid in discharging cargo from any ship loaded, in part even, with American goods. It was also decided to urge upon the Imperial Chinese Government not to grant passports to the interior to Americans, or to grant any concessions to them should the proposed new Exclusion Act of the U. S. Congress go into effect.

THE B.C. RAILWAY WAR.

VERY keen interest is being displayed in the Province of British Columbia in the fight being made by the V. V. & E. Ry. Co., which is practically the Great Northern, to secure amendments to the charter in the Dominion House. Importance attaches to the progress of the negotiations because on the result in large measure depends the immediate opening of the Similkameen district and its being placed in direct touch with the coast section of the province by means of the line which will be built. The fact that at first the connection will not be direct, but by means of connections with the Hill system in Washington State, has had some adverse influence, but the desire to see rapid development of this rich and favorably located portion of the province has predominated.

The opening of the Nicola Lake section, the northern portion of the Similkameen district, by the building of the line of railway from Spence's Bridge on the main line of the C.P.R. to the head of Nicola Lake, has doubled the impetus the district has received from the prospect of transportation being supplied. Many people are making their way into the district, and the rapidity of its development promises to equal that which opened the Kootenays in the early days of Rossland. Like the Rossland district the Similkameen is being taken stock of by the progressive western American cousins. They are to be met with in large numbers, and as none know a good thing better than they, there is every assurance that Brother Jonathan is going to be a lively competitor with Jack Canuck for the riches that are part of the Canadian cousin's birthright, but which he may lose to the smart Yankee cousin, as he did in the Kootenay and in the Yukon. Pessimism has no place in western philosophy. The above remark is plain statement of hard fact. See how much the future will bear out the statement.

AFTER MANY YEARS.

The advantages of subscribing to The Canadian Grocer sooner or later are brought home to the mind of the trade. As a usual thing a glance through its pages is sufficient to win a subscriber; with others time for consideration is required. This fact was brought to mind recently when, on June 13th last a subscription card was received at this office that had been sent out in 1894. After giving the matter mature consideration, looking at it from every side, and resolving every doubt, the inevitable conclusion was reached, after eleven years of deliberation, that the only reasonable thing to do was to subscribe for The Canadian Grocer, and keep up with the times.

IN NEW HANDS.

THE assets of the manufacturing confectionery firm of A. J. Stewart, Limited, have been sold to Mr. Stewart, who for some months previous to the recent assignment had not been connected with the firm. Mr. Stewart has secured strong financial backing, and is organizing a new company, to be called the Stewart Co., Limited, which will be able to develop the business in a strong manner. Mr. L. J. Applegath will be president of the new company, and Mr. A. J. Stewart superintendent.

The manufacturing end of the business will be under the full charge of Mr. Stewart, whose experience and reputation as a manufacturer of high grade chocolates and confectionery will insure the success of this department.

The plant of the company on Duncan and Adelaide is located in a fine pressed brick building 90 x 48 feet, and four storeys high. On the lower flat are located the dipping, packing, stock and boiler rooms. On the next above the offices occupy the front, with packing rooms to the rear and a fine shipping room opening on the company's own roadway to the south. On the third flat are placed the cream rooms and boiling rooms, and on top the ornamenting stock and men's dressing rooms.

The building is so situated as to have light from all four sides, is fitted out with a 'phone system, but what strikes the visitor very forcibly is the marked neatness and cleanliness everywhere apparent.

With the capital now available Stewart's chocolates should take a strong position on the Canadian market as their quality warrants.

Factory where Stewart's Chocolates are Made, Duncan and Adelaide Streets, Toronto.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. John Anderson, of Chase & Sanborn, Montreal, has been away on a few days' holiday at Lake L'Achigan.

Mr. W. P. Downey, Montreal, went to New York on a business trip last Friday and is expected in town early next week.

Mr. J. M. Kerr, general manager Deerfield Water Co., Deerfield, Ohio, was a visitor to Montreal during the past week, and called upon the trade in company with Mr. J. H. Maiden, Montreal agent. He expressed himself as satisfied with the reception Deerfield water had received and orders for several carloads more were booked.

Mr. D. J. Rattray, of D. Rattray & Son, Montreal, was on a business trip to New York during the past week.

Mr. William Taylor, merchant, Dunedin, New Zealand, was a caller at the Montreal offices of The Grocer last week. Mr. Taylor is making a tour of Canada and the Old Country. He expressed himself as more than surprised at the vastness and business, as well as agricultural and manufacturing progress of Canada and takes home with him very pleasant recollections of his visit to his country's great sister colony.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

E. D. Marceau, Montreal, reports the arrival of fifty half chests of Condor V tea, which he quotes at 25c. per lb. in spite of the advance on May teas.

Strawberries are much firmer in price this week and it is thought the bulk of the crop has been marketed. White & Co., Limited, were amongst the heaviest receivers on this market this week.

White & Co., Limited, are handling enormous quantities of California peaches, plums, apricots, etc., having sold eleven cars so far with the season just fairly started.

A shipment of "Phonograph" pines, sliced, grated and whole, is to hand with L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal.

Real connoisseurs and amateurs of fine high-grade new crop Japan teas will find their requirements at L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal. Prices range from 35c. to 45c. per lb. Cup fine; style perfect.

Orders are coming in freely with L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal, for new pack canned salmon, fruits and vegetables. Prices on these goods are very attractive, and the assortment is very large.

ADULTERATED MILK.

Dr. Pearson, medical health officer of Brantford, has brought before the provincial health authorities the serious condition of the milk business. Adulteration seems to be very common. The doc,or thinks there should be a thorough investigation.

MONTREAL G.C.A.'S PICNIC

THE annual picnic of the Montreal Grocery Clerks' Association was held on Sunday, July 2, at Plattsburg, N.Y., and proved to be a success, notwithstanding the bad weather. The train, composed of eleven crowded cars of the Grand Trunk Railway, left Bonaventure Station amidst the cheers and songs of the gay excursionists at 8.45 a.m. A car had been reserved by the organizers for their invited guests. Among these were Mr. P. Daoust, president of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association, and Mr. J. E. Ethier, of the firm of Laporte, Martin & Co., of Montreal. This car was also occupied by the officers of the association, the members of the different committees and their fair companions, together with the newspaper representatives. From the start to the finish the officers, and specially Mr. J. C. Marchand, the president, and Mr. J. A. Jacob, president of the reception committee, did their utmost to make their guests comfortable.

The arrival at Plattsburg was the occasion for more cheers. The weather had not much improved, but every one felt happy. The majority of the travelers went to the New Cumberland Hotel, a very modern house. Dinner was served at 12 o'clock sharp, and was welcomed by all the hungry guests. The newspaper representatives were invited to dinner at the association's expense. A very substantial and copious meal was served.

It was late in the afternoon when the weather cleared up but, owing to the ground being too muddy, the races were postponed.

The "voyageurs" then separated to visit the town. The journalists, three in number, representing La Patrie, La Presse, both of Montreal, and The Canadian Grocer, went to visit the military grounds.

Back at the New Cumberland it was learned that it had been decided by the officers to hold a "fete champetre" at some popular Montreal park when the games, etc., will be run off, the date to be announced later.

During the afternoon a few ladies and gentlemen, members of the excursion, gathered in the cosy parlor of the hotel, and spent some charming moments in music and singing.

At 6 p.m. a hearty supper was served and welcomed by all the hungry excursionists. At eight o'clock the train left for Montreal.

After a most joyful trip the gay excursionists arrived home at 11.45 p.m. The guests and the members of the press parted after hearty thanks to their hosts.

The officers of the association are as follows: J. C. Marchand, president; J. N. Walker, 1st vice-president; O. Bergeron, 2nd vice-president; B. Guenette, secretary; A. Gauvreau, assistant secretary; J. B. E. Poirier, treasurer; H. Sauriol, auditor; J. O. Levesque, J. P. Lalande, collectors; A. Mercure, E. Normandin, commissioner-orderer; G. N. Desaulniers, F. Dubord, Z. Martineau, O. Dionne, E. Turgeon, directors; M. St-Pierre, M. Bonhomme, visitors to the sick; Dr. Bergeron, doctor.

A DOUBLE PROFIT

Royal Baking Powder Pays a Greater Profit to the Grocer Than any Other Baking Powder He Sells.

Profit means real money in the bank. It does not mean "percentage," which may represent very little actual money. A grocer often has the chance to sell either:

1. A baking powder for 45c. a pound and make a profit of 5c. or 6c., or,
2. A baking powder for 10c. a pound and make "20 per cent profit," which means only 2c. actual money. Which choice should you take?

Royal Baking Powder makes the customer satisfied and pleased, not only with the baking powder, but also with the flour, butter, eggs, etc., which the grocer sells.

This satisfaction of the customer is the foundation of the best and surest profit in business—it is permanent. Do not take the risk of selling a cheap alum baking powder; some day the customer may find out about the alum, and then your best profit in the customer's confidence is gone.

Royal Baking Powder pays greater profits to the grocer than any other baking powder he sells.

Second Convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of the Northwest Territories

Held at Regina, June 29th and 30th.

IN attendance and enthusiasm, in the amount of trained intelligence brought to bear upon public questions, in the quality of its members and their serious determination to deal with business questions in a serious, business-like way, the convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of the Northwest Territories, held in Regina during the last two days in June, was a pronounced success. The delegates were serious business men and, for the most part, they settled down to the work of the convention in a business-like way. It is true that two or three men had their hobbies to ride and their fads to exploit, but, upon the whole, the discussion was intensely practical. These men are the leaders in their respective communities and one cannot help feeling that the future of Western Canada is assured while its affairs are under the control and guidance of the shrewd, capable, practical, and withal high-minded men who were delegates to this convention. Canada is a young man's country, and that this is particularly true of the west was evidenced by the personnel of this representative gathering of business men. The average delegate was in his thirties, if one may judge from appearances, and there were a few still in their twenties. Clean-shaven, aggressive, well-built, athletic-looking men, these residents of the western towns show themselves men well able to grapple with any problem, no matter how difficult. It is not hard to understand the secret of the rapid growth of the western towns when one has seen their business men.

History of the Convention.

The Associated Boards of Trade of the Northwest Territories are a young organization, this being only their second convention. Early in January of 1904 the Calgary Board of Trade, through their secretary, sent out a circular letter to the various Boards of Trade of the Northwest Territories suggesting a general convention. The suggestion met with favor and a convention was held in Calgary on June 15 and 16, which was attended by 68 delegates representing 29 Boards of Trade. It was then decided to hold another convention in Regina in 1905, but the question of permanent organization was left over for decision this year. The following resolution was also passed at the same convention:

"That at future conventions, Manitoba and British Columbia be represented by invited delegates who shall have the privilege of making motions and amendments and of taking part in debate, but not of exercising voting powers."

Accordingly, President A. L. Johnson, of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, was present the first day and took an active part in the discussions.

At one time there was a danger that the convention would split up into two bodies, one for each of the two new Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. Division found a number of ardent champions who argued that the distances were too great in the new provinces to allow delegates from all boards to attend conventions. It was also urged that the main function of the convention was to influence legislation and that accordingly the political division of the Territories into two provinces rendered necessary a similar division of the convention. In the end, the champions of a united convention for the two provinces carried the day, the speech of Premier Haultain at the Thursday night banquet, in which he strongly counselled unity in spite of imaginary lines dividing the west, probably having a great deal to do with the result. A permanent organization was decided upon the name chosen being "The Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada." The Executive hope to have large representation at the next convention from the Provinces of Manitoba and British Columbia.

The citizens of Regina made every effort to entertain the delegates, and the two days of the convention were one continual round of business and pleasure. On the afternoon of the first day the ladies of the city entertained the delegates at a garden party in the city park, and that same night, after a long session of the convention, the delegates were the guests of the Regina Board of Trade at a highly successful dinner held in the Windsor Hotel. Friday evening his Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Madame Forget entertained at a garden party in the Government House grounds.

OPENING SESSION.

The convention opened on Thursday morning, June 29th, in the Court House, which would be held as a Territorial body; it was for the convention to decide whether or not separation along the lines of the two new provinces was advisable. His closing words were a strong plea for the dropping of all sectional differences and for united work for the good of a united west.

Division or Union.

As the first order of business was the election of officers, the question of division or union at once presented itself for discussion. Judge McGuire, of Prince Albert, and Wm. Short, of Edmonton, strongly advocated the maintenance of the status quo for at least another year. R. J. Hutchings, of Calgary, argued that division must come some time, as the principal function of the convention was to advise the legislatures. Finally the question was shelved for discussion later, and it was decided to proceed with the election of officers, the understanding being that the officers would hold their positions for a full year, unless it was decided before the adjournment of the convention to divide on provincial lines.

President's Address.

President Tweed gave expression to the pleasure which it afforded him to welcome the delegates to the annual convention. The large attendance was the best evidence of the interest taken in the convention by the various Boards of Trade throughout the west, and proved conclusively the wisdom of the City of Calgary in starting the movement last year. One result of last year's meeting had been an immediate increase in the number of Boards of Trade throughout the Territories, and in the interest and activity of existing boards. It was true that Boards of Trade are merely advisory and in no sense legislative bodies, but no Parliament or Legislature could afford to ignore the formally expressed opinions of such a body, and it would be difficult to over-estimate their influence. The present convention was the last Officers Elected.

Officers were then elected as follows:

President—Thomas Tweed, of Medicine Hat.

First Vice-President—R. J. Hutchings, of Calgary.

Second Vice-President — Justice McGuire, Prince Albert.

Secretary-Treasurer—Wm. Trant, Regina.

Mayor Welcomes Delegates.

Mayor H. W. Laird then welcomed the delegates to Regina and tendered them the freedom of the city. Regina's mayor is an energetic young business man, a clear incisive speaker, and an excellent type of the enterprising, progressive young men who are building up the west.

He said it had come within the scope of his duties many times in the last 18 months to welcome to Regina visiting conventions, but not while he had been mayor, and probably never before in the history of Regina, had such a large and influential body of business men gathered in the city. There was plenty of scope for the convention, and he had no doubt they would take full advantage of their opportunity.

"Our plans for your entertainment have been upset by Jupiter Pluvius. The heavens have been shedding tears of joy in anticipation of a bountiful harvest, and the water and Regina soil make a combination of which you are likely to carry away very many mementoes. Time was when we were touchy about our mud. We were told that a man might travel

'From Greenland's icy mountains and nowhere find anything to compare with Regina mud. But we are wiser now and we are proud of Regina mud and the harvests which it produces. In the west we are all enthusiasts about our own localities, so you can not find fault with me for sounding the praises of Regina. Our population and assessment have increased three-fold in the last four years. Our assessment is now $4,000,000, and our population is in excess of 7,000. We have just completed a gravitation system of water works and an electric light plant (owned by the municipality) at a cost of $300,000."

His worship then outlined the programme of entertainment provided by the city Board of Trade, the ladies of the city, and by the Lieut.-Governor and Madame Forget. He concluded with the hope that the time might soon come when Regina could again welcome the convention, and drew a roseate picture of what the city will be in another three or four years.

Committees Appointed.

Two committees were then appointed. The committee on resolutions and procedure was composed of the following gentlemen: Justice McGuire, Prince Albert, (convenor); T. H. Blacklock, Weyburn; J. A. MacCaul, Indian Head; W. B. Willoughby, Moose Jaw; Wm. Short, Edmonton; H. F. Mytton, Regina; R. J. Hutchings, Calgary, and Jas. Clinskill, M.P.A., Saskatoon.

The committee on credentials was composed of T. W. Lines, Edmonton; W. T. Finley, Medicine Hat, and Wm. Trant, the secretary, Regina.

The convention then adjourned.

SECOND SESSION.

At the afternoon session the committee on credentials reported that a number of boards had not complied with all the regulations, but recommended that their delegates be received. Report adopted.

The committee on resolutions and procedure also presented a report which, after some discussion, was adopted.

Salaries of Provincial Ministers.

R. J. Hutchings, of Calgary, then introduced the following resolution:

"That it is expedient and in the public interest that the salaries of Cabinet Ministers in the new Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberts should be on the same scale as is paid by the Province of Ontario."

Speaking to the resolution, Mr. Hutchings pointed out that the salaries of Ministers in the Northwest Territories have been ridiculously inadequate. An ordinary country merchant could easily make a larger income than a Territorial Cabinet Minister. The Calgary Board of Trade were of opinion that the matter of an increase of their salaries is a delicate question for Ministers to touch, and they believed that a pronouncement on the subject by the convention would help solve the difficulty. It was eminently a fit subject to be dealt with by a Board of Trade convention, and it should not be allowed to become a party football.

The reso,ution was seconded by C. W. Rowley, of Calgary, who said he was a strong believer in the principle that if you want good men you must be prepared to pay them well. Money making opportunities in the west were very great, and it was ridiculous to ask men of sufficient ability to be Cabinet Ministers to serve for salaries which were only a small part of what they could earn in business pursuits.

H. F. Mytton, of Regina, supported the motion strongly. "We need Cabinet Ministers in the west who are every bit as able as the Ontario Ministers, for we are just as good as Ontario, but if we want them we must pay them well."

Thos. Copeland, of Saskatoon, opposed the resolution. He was in favor of increased salaries, but did not see that they should necessarily be on the Ontario basis. Finally, after a discussion which threatened to become acrimonious, Mr. Hutchings amended his resolution and it was passed unanimously. The resolution as amended was as follows:

"That it is expedient and in the public interest that the salaries of Cabinet Ministers in the new Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta should be on a liberal scale and commensurate with the responsibility and dignity of the position."

Transient Traders.

W. Loree, of Moose Jaw, then introduced a resolution, which was seconded by P. McAra, of Regina, to the effect that the law relating to transient traders should be amended. Speaking to the motion, Mr. Loree pointed out that there were no restrictions on transient trades (hawkers and pedlars) in the country districts, and they were taking away money and trade which should belong to legitimate resident merchants who pay their taxes. After some discussion the motion was referred back to Mr. Loree for amendment as it was not sufficiently explicit. At a subsequent session, in the absence of Mr. Loree, a resolution dealing with the subject was introduced by G. K. Smith, of Moose Jaw, and seconded by P. McAra, of Regina. This resolution, which was passed unanimously, was as follows:

"That in the opinion of this convention the Ordinance relating to transient traders should be amended to make the fee for such traders $25 in each electoral district of the Northwest Territories, the license to be good for three months only, and that such fee shall not be deemed to cover or include fees imposed by towns, cities or municipalities."

Freight Rates.

A resolution referring to freight rates was introduced by the Davidson delegation; it called upon the Governments of the new provinces to take up the question of excessive freight rates in the N.W.T. with a view to having them reduced to a reasonable basis.

Wm. Pearce, of Calgary, pointed out that the matter should be brought to the attention of the Railway Commission, not of the new provinces. Mayor Laird also objected that the resolution was out of order, and after some discussion it was withdrawn and it was not heard of again.

Government Telephones.

Government ownership is popular in the west, as was shown in the action taken by the convention in regard to the Government ownership and operation of telephone systems. The following resolution was introduced by G. A. Love, of Red Deer and seconded by Wm. Abbott, of Maple Creek:

"That the time has arrived when the Government ownership and operation of all telephones forming a complete national system would be in the public interest."

Speaking to his resolution, Mr. Love emphasized the absolute necessity of telephone communication in modern business and pointed out that from its very nature the telephone business should be a monopoly. It was a nuisance in any town to have two systems. There must be monopoly; the only question is whether there should be a Government monopoly or a corporation monopoly.

"The Government at Ottawa have undertaken to consider the question in a practical business-like way, and as a result we have a commission now sitting and taking evidence at Ottawa. I am not sure that the scheme outlined by the Postmaster-General is as broad as that proposed in this resolution, but that does not matter. We want to establish the principle that the telephone system should be a national system corresponding to the post office.

"The Government need not run the system to make money. They can borrow the capital outlay at a low rate, and they require profits only to pay the interest. They could lower rates, as they would have no dividends to pay. The telephone system should be extended wherever the post office goes, and it should not be run to make a surplus."

Mayor McKenzie, of Edmonton, explained that that town has its own municipal telephone system. He would not want to see the Government take it over. He favored the Government ownership and operation of trunk lines with connections with municipal lines.

"My name is Ives, from Lethbridge," announced the next speaker, "also from Missouri, for I 'want to be shown.' This is a serious matter, a serious expression of opinion is expected from us, and we want some facts and figures as to cost, etc."

H. F. Mytton, president of the Regina Board of Trade, was the next speaker. "I am opposed to Government ownership for I want to stimulate private enterprise. Private ownership and individuality are the secrets of success. Very soon, if this kind of thing goes on, we shall all be working for a government and there will be no individuality in a new country. When that day comes, God help this new country!"

Justice McGuire, of Prince Albert, did not agree with Mr. Mytton. Since the telephone business is necessarily a monopoly, there can be no expression of individual effort in making it a Government monopoly. To give a monopoly to any individual or corporation is dangerous. If we are to be governed by a corporation let the corporation be a government which we can control.

G. A. Love, of Red Deer, then rose to present some facts and figures for the consideration of the "gentleman from Missouri." He gave the experience of the English and German Government-owned telephone systems. English rates are half the Canadian rates and the German rates are still less.

Frank R. Oliver, of Saskatoon, objected that comparisons with England and Germany are unfair. Canada is a country of greater distances and less population. He thought the subject should be shelved until after the report of the commission is at hand. He favored the abstract principle in case the lines could be made to pay, but not otherwise. "We want no telephone deficits; the Intercolonial deficits are enough."

C. W. Rowley, of Calgary, was also opposed. His experience in trying to get improved postal service south of Calgary was that the Bell Telephone Co. were more amenable to reason than the Post Office Department.

T. W. Lines, of Edmonton, urged that comparison with the Intercolonial Railway was unfair. "At all events we don't want to run the system to make a surplus. We can't get at the figures of the Bell Telephone Co., and it is not up to us to show that the proposition will pay. Suppose there is a deficit in the telephone system and in the Post Office Department, what of it? The important thing is cheap communication."

After some further discussion, the resolution was carried, not more than ten votes being cast against it.

Insolvency Legislation.

After a committee on permanent organization had been named, with Mayor H. W. Laird as its chairman, President A. L. Johnson, of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, who occupied a chair beside President Tweed, introduced the following resolution regarding insolvency debtors:

"That a committee be named by the president, consisting of a representative from each of the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, to act jointly with a representative of the Winnipeg Board of Trade to consider the question of insolvency legislation, the said committee to report to the president, and, together with him, to take the necessary steps towards securing the required legislation from the Legislatures of the new provinces to have the proposed Act made law.

In speaking to his resolution, Mr. Johnson pointed out that the subject had been raised in Calgary last year by William Georgeson, of Winnipeg, and that it had been left over for a year. Perhaps the term Insolvency Act was an unfortunate one, as the Dominion Parliament only could pass an "Insolvency Act," but since the Dominion Parliament would not take up the matter they wanted a substitute such as the Manitoba Act relating to the subject. In the N.W.T. there was no Act such as the Manitoba Act. The only requirement was an Ordinance to the effect that a debtor making an assignment must do so to a resident of the N.W.T. The Ordinance was inadequate for the assets of an insolvent debtor are by right and justice the property of the creditors and should be disposed of by them. The assignee in the N.W.T. was not necessarily bound by the wishes of the creditors; they could act only in an advisory capacity.

WHERE THE CONVENTION WAS HELD.

Regina the capital city of the Northwest Territories and the provisional capital of the new province of Saskatchewan, is a thriving city of over 7,000 inhabitants. There is an evident air of prosperity about the place, and a visitor cannot be long in the city before he is made acquainted with the fact that Regina has ambitions to be a distributing centre equal in importance to Winnipeg. Two years ago Regina was made a distributing railway centre with all the freight rate advantages the status implies. The result was soon seen. The big implement firms of Canada and the United States have erected there large warehouses that are well stocked. Wholesale houses are locating sites, while two foundries two planing mills, a furniture and fitting factory, a pork packing establishment, two brick yards and some minor undertakings form the nucleus of a manufacturing community. As a distributing centre, Regina has the advantage of being the only railway centre between Winnipeg and Calgary, a distance of 840 miles, being 360 miles from the former and 480 from the latter. The city is disected by the main line of the C.P.R., and is the southern terminus of the Regina and Prince Albert Railway and the western terminus of the Arcola Extension. In addition to these the C N.R. will soon pass through the city and the G.T.P. will tap the district.

Regina is the headquarters of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. It is, too, the usual place for the sessions of the Supreme Court. There are five schools in the city as well as a high school and normal school. There are four weekly newspapers and one daily newspaper, an active Board of Trade and five banks.

The convention was held in the court house.

Mr. Johnson pointed out the advantages of a uniform Act in the new provinces and Manitoba. He hoped to see the new provinces adopt the Manitoba law, which was copied from the Ontario Act.

"The necessity is obvious to business men," continued Mr. Johnson. "In Manitoba a debtor is required to assign to an official assignee, who must call a meeting of the creditors. At that meeting an inspector is appointed whose duty it is to see what is the best way to dispose of the assets. We usually wind up estates in Manitoba in 30 days or less."

R. J. Hutchings, of Calgary, seconded the resolution. The Manitoba Act was, in his opinion, the simplest and most inexpensive in the country. Calgary was vitally interested in the matter, as more than fifty houses there are doing a wholesale business.

After some further discussion by Justice McGuire, A. L. Johnson and Wm. Pearce, the resolution was amended to include the Vancouver Board of Trade, to whom an invitation will be sent, and the resolution as thus amended was carried unanimously.

Notice of Sale.

On Motion of President A. L. Johnson, of Winnipeg Board of Trade, and of T. W. Lines, of Edmonton, the following resolution was then submitted to the convention:

"That a committee be appointed by the president, together with a representative from the Board of Trade of Winnipeg, to prepare special legislation which it is desirable should be enacted by the Legislatures of the proposed new provinces, providing that in the event of any trader making a sale of his business he should give due notice of same to each of his creditors, allowing a fixed time to elapse for notice to be filed on the purchaser by parties interested before a good title to the goods so purchased can be made by the purchaser."

Mr. Johnson explained that the wholesale men of Winnipeg had had much bitter and costly experience with merchants who sell out their whole business and then go to Winnipeg offering so many cents on the dollar, which the wholesaler must accept or get nothing. This resolution could do no harm to any honest man, but it would put a stop to this dishonest practice.

Wm. Short, of Edmonton, opposed the resolution vigorously.

"No free people would submit to such a law," he declared. "There is no distinction made between the insolvent and the man who can pay his debts. Why should not a man be allowed to sell when and where he will without restriction? Why restrict 90 per cent. of the merchants because of a fraudulent 10 per cent.? Besides, the law deals with this now. A sale made within 60 days of insolvency may be set aside upon evidence of fraud."

Frank Oliver, of Saskatoon, opposed the resolution and Justice McGuire, of Prince Albert, supported it. J. A. MacCaul, of Indian Head, spoke vigorously in opposition.

"No legislation can make a man honest, and this law would cast an unwarranted reflection upon the merchants of the west. The motion should not be passed without further consideration."

Mayor McKenzie, of Edmonton, thought the proposed legislation would interfere too much with the honest man who had good reasons for wanting to sell out at once. Opportunities in business must be seized at once and delays would often hinder the sale entirely.

R. N. Weir, Balgonie, spoke as a retailer. He recognized that an evil does exist, but the protection proposed to be given the wholesaler against the retailer should also be extended to the retailer as against his customers.

H. W. Mytton spoke vigorously in opposition to what he thought a ridiculous proposal and an unwarranted interference with individual liberty, and after further speeches from Wm. Short and A. L. Johnson, the motion was lost by a very large majority.

Grain Shipments.

Hugh McKellar, of Moose Jaw, then introduced the following resolution regarding grain shipments westward bound:

"That the attention of the Dominion Government be again directed to the question of the inauguration of a system of inspection and weights for grain shipments to western markets."

Speaking to his resolution, Mr. McKellar said that the actual figures supplied by the grain men show that 1,000 cars of wheat are sent west every year. The output of Fall wheat in Alberta this year will be about 1,500,000 bushels and the natural market is in British Columbia and the Orient. The quantity was sufficient to warrant the Government appointing a man to grade this wheat and weigh it.

The motion carried and the convention then adjourned to attend the garden party tendered by the ladies of Regina.

THIRD SESSION.

The Thursday evening meeting was called to order at eight o'clock sharp, as the Board of Trade banquet was to follow, and there was much on the order paper. The first resolution referred to the surplus lands in the matter being brought to the attention of the gathering by Wm. Pearce, of Calgary, and W. T. Finley, of Medicine Hat, who moved and seconded the following resolution:

"Whereas large areas of land contiguous to prosperous towns and settlements throughout the Territories are at present unproductive on account of being occupied as Indian Reserves; and

"Whereas such Indian Reserves are generally unnecessarily large, frequently many times as extensive as demanded by actual requirements and larger than was ceded them when under treaty, and

"Whereas such surplus lands, if sold, would in many cases realize a large amount of money, which, if invested for the benefit of the Indians, would yield a considerable revenue;

"Therefore, be it resolved that this convention petitions the Dominion Government to exert the strongest influence possible with the Indians to have the said surplus lands disposed of to actual settlers and thus materially aid the development of the districts in the Territories at present contiguous to Indian Reserves."

Speaking to his resolution, Mr. Pearce said that the first clause might be passed over without comment, as no one would dispute the fact that the Indian Reserves are quite unproductive. In regard to the second clause, he would confine his remarks to Alberta, with the conditions of which he was familiar. The Indians are guaranteed one square mile of land for each family of five persons, but the census returns show that they have much more than the treaty guarantees them. The average population is about 1.5 persons to the square mile. The speaker quoted figures to show the conditions in the various reserves. In one reserve the land allowed is 30 per cent. in excess of that guaranteed by treaty; in another 93 per cent.; in another 105 per cent.; in another 135 per cent., and in another 104 per cent. The four reserves south of the main line have 127 per cent. more land than the treaty requires. The speaker urged that the Indians are shiftless and make no use of their lands. If they could be induced to sell a portion, and the money were invested for them by the Government, they would have a fixed and steady income more than ample for their requirements.

After some discussion the motion was carried.

Distribution of Government Institutions.

W. B. Willoughby, of Moose Jaw, then moved the adoption of the following resolution, seconded by J. R. Green, Moose Jaw:

"That in the establishment and locating of public buildings and institutions, and in the appointments to public office, by the Governments of the two new Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, the principle of decentralization be adopted as far as possible."

Mr. Willoughby prefaced his remarks on the resolution by the statement that the convention would appreciate his altruistic motives, as no doubt they all knew that Moose Jaw is to be the capital of Saskatchewan—a statement received with groans and laughter by the Regina and Saskatoon delegation.

In Ontario, he said, the public institutions and offices had been centralized to a very great extent, and the people of that banner province were now convinced of the mistake that had been made. A great number of institutions must soon be established in Alberta and Saskatchewan, and this was the opportune time to insist that they be distributed throughout the provinces and not centralized in the capitals. Registry offices should be distributed. There should be a dozen or more in the Province of Saskatchewan instead of one large central institution in the City of Regina. Appointments to office should be guided by the same principle.

"I would take away from the Provincial Government the power to appoint sheriffs and clerks of the court. Let these officials be appointed by judges."

J. R. Green seconded the resolution. He said the United States gives us a good object lesson in the benefits of decentralization, which had proved to be a safeguard to liberties. In very many respects the United States is ahead of Great Britain, and this is one of them.

H. F. Mytton, Regina, opposed the resolution.

"The principle is all right; I find no fault with it; but every government must do what is expedient under particular circumstances. I don't believe in hard and fast resolutions on such matters—they don't come within the scope of this convention's work. Policy must always be secondary to expediency in such cases. It is all very well to say that these good things should be distributed throughout the province, but the Government must settle each case on its own special merits, and it is the height of folly to say that Government patronage must be distributed in one, two, three order.

Thos. Copeland, Saskatoon, also opposed the resolution.

"It is none of our business," said he. "It is the duty of the Government to put an institution where it is most convenient for the purposes for which it is intended, and where it can be most economically managed. If these principles could not be followed in placing a Government institution in Saskatoon I would not want it there—not if it increased the value of my property 100 per cent." (Loud applause.)

Wm. Pearce, Calgary, here suggested that the resolution might be made acceptable to the convention by the addition of the words "having due regard to efficiency and economy." The suggestion was accepted by Messrs. Willoughby and Green, and the resolution was then declared carried.

Commercial Agency Reports.

Mayor Laird of Regina then moved, seconded by C. W. Rowley of Calgary, the adoption of the following resolution:

"Whereas the present system of daily commercial reports, as issued by the commercial agencies, contains no information as to whether the writs therein noted are for disputed accounts or involve counter claims;

"And, whereas, the credit of the defendant is thereby unjustly impaired,

"Therefore be it resolved, that in the opinion of this convention of the Associated Board of Trade of the Northwest Territories the commercial agencies should be prevailed upon to note in their daily reports the fact that such writs are for disputed accounts or involve counter claims, on being notified by the defendant to that effect."

Speaking to his resolution, Mayor Laird said that he introduced it because personal observation had convinced him that the matter is one of pressing necessity. The resolution had been carried in the Regina Board of Trade after a long discussion.

"When writs are issued," he explained, "the clerk sends a report to the mercantile agencies, which distribute them among business men in all parts of the country by means of their daily commercial reports. When a business man sees that John Jones, of Calgary, is being sued for $1,500 he presumes that John Jones is not financially sound, that he is being pushed into a hole, and that the only safe course is to press John Jones for payment. The business man does not know that there is a counter claim for $1,400, and that the liability of John Jones is only $100. He doesn't know this, and he and others press for payment of their accounts. John Jones may be perfectly solvent, and yet this sudden pressure upon him is very inconvenient, and the commercial agency report does him a great, although unintentional, injustice.

"This is not idle talk. I have personal knowledge of just such a case in which a perfectly solvent man was forced to make an assignment, and as his property was sold at a sacrifice he lost all that he had.

"I do not discourage the use of commercial agency reports, for they are absolutely essential to modern business; all that I do is point out one important respect in which they can be improved, thereby remedying a great injustice."

Frank Oliver, Saskatoon, objected that very few retailers take these reports, and they would not know that the agencies had published the news that they were being sued.

H. F. Mytten, Regina: Every intelligent man who has a writ served upon him knows that the fact will be published in the commercial agency reports, and he can write to the agency at once or he can enter a counter claim at once, and it will be reported. If he isn't intelligent enough to know that, I don't think it matters much whether he stays in business or not."

H. G. Dawson, Wakella: "There is just one objection to this resolution. Every defendant will be able to invent some plausible excuse, and the benefit of the report will be entirely nullified."

After some further discussion, in which Thos. Copeland, Saskatoon, took a prominent part, the resolution was carried without amendment.

Government Fire Insurance.

W. H. Cushing and R. J. Hutchings, of Calgary, then moved and seconded the adoption of the following resolution:

"Whereas, the fire insurance rates in towns and cities throughout the Northwest Territories are being increased from time to time to an alarming extent, principally in order to cover losses sustained in populous cities in the east; and

"Whereas systems of fire insurance under Government auspices have been successfully carried out elsewhere, notably in New Zealand; and

"Whereas the principle of Government Insurance has been adopted in the Northwest Territories in connection with losses in grain crops due to hail storms;

"Therefore, be it resolved that this convention most respectfully begs to submit for the consideration of the Governments of Saskatchewan and Alberta the desirability of causing enquiries to be made into the subject with a view of providing a system of Government fire insurance."

Mr. Cushing urged that there was nothing revolutionary in the motion presented. He thought there could be no difference of opinion that rates in the west are too high, mainly because they must help in the west to pay the big losses in the more populous centres in the east. He believed that Government fire insurance was working well in the Australasian sister colonies and all that the resolution asks is that the Government investigate.

Wm. Short, of Edmonton, made a determined effort to include the subject of life insurance in the resolution, moving an amendment to that effect. The amendment was lost and the original motion carried unanimously.

Fire Marshals.

President A. L. Johnson, of Winnipeg, then moved the following resolution, which was carried without opposition or discussion:

"That a committee of two be appointed by the president to consider the question of the appointing of a fire marshal in each of the new provinces and prepare the necessary legislation to be submitted to the Governments of the new provinces to be enacted."

Mr. Johnson explained that the object was to have the cause of every fire officially investigated, as he believed this would prevent a great deal of incendiarism and carelessness. The convention then adjourned to meet on Friday morning.

FOURTH SESSION.

In spite of the dissipation of the night before, at the banquet, several committees were at work shortly after nine o'clock in the morning, but the convention resumed its discussion sharp at ten o'clock. C. N. Bell, secretary of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, was present at this meeting and occupied a seat beside President Reed.

Timber Limits.

A. C. Fraser, of Edmonton, moved, seconded by W. H. Cushing, of Calgary, the adoption of the following resolution regarding timber limits:

"That it is considered highly undesirable that any timber limits in Western Canada should be sold, except under conditions requiring reasonable use to be made of such berths within not more than two years of the date of sale, and in the event of the purchaser failing to make use of such timber berth within two years from the date of the purchase, such berth revert to the Government to be available for sale to any parties desirous of utilizing the timber thereon. And that the Minister of the Interior be respectfully asked to give this matter his most careful attention."

Mr. Cushing explained that large areas of timber limits have been purchased by eastern speculators during the last five years and nothing has been done with them, the owners simply holding them in expectation of a rise in values. The Minister of the Interior has discretionary power enabling him to compel the erection of saw mills on pain of loss of the limits, but nothing had been done. Legitimate millers are being kept out of the country by speculators who hold their lands idle.

Mr. Cushing, of Calgary, seconded the resolution, covering much the same arguments as the mover.

Wm. Pearce, Calgary, said that he was surprised to find no reference in the resolution to the importance of preserving the forests from loss by fire. The loss by fire was greater than that from speculators.

"In this matter, the Government can go only so far as it is supported by public opinion, and it is our duty to educate public sentiment along the proper lines. Some of the regulations offer a big temptation to incendiarism. When a quarter section contains a certain amount of timber it is not open for homesteading. Consequently if the quarter section is desirable there is a strong temptation to start a fire in it."

Moreover there is a regulation that dead timber can be obtained without fees. Hence settlers often start fires in order that they may get the burnt timber for nothing.

T. W. Lines, Edmonton, brought the discussion back to the question of the speculators and finally it was decided to refer the whole question to a committee, instructing them to draft a resolution which would cover all phases.

The committee was composed of A. C. Fraser, Edmonton; Wm. Pearce, Calgary; G. A. Love, Red Deer, and B. P. Richardson, Grenfell. At the afternoon session they submitted the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"That owing to the scarcity of growing timber in Alberta and Saskatchewan, it is highly desirable that the same should be reserved for the use of the actual settler, made available for immediate use and preserved from falling into the hands of speculators.

"To this end it is recommended that the present timber regulations requiring actual operation by timber holders be rigorously enforced, that the timber not already disposed of be retained by the Government for the use of actual millers or settlers, that vigorous steps be taken looking towards the preservation of the timber from fire and towards reforestration."

Hospitals.

Hugh McKellar, of Moose Jaw, then moved the adoption of the following resolution:

"That the best interests of the new provinces would be served by having our hospitals built and maintained by the provincial authorities."

A long discussion followed, in which a great number of delegates took part. H. F. Mytton, Regina, and W. H. Cushing, of Calgary, opposed the idea of Government control quite vigorously.

"There is far too little "noblesse oblige" in this country," said Mr. Mytton. "If you throw the responsibility holus bolus on the shoulders of the Government you do away entirely with voluntary contributions. No one will contribute to the support of an institution for which a Government is responsible."

Finally the following amendment was adopted by the convention, on motion of Wm. Pearce, of Calgary, and A. E. Moore, of Raymond:

"That the Governments be requested to assist to a greater extent than at present the hospitals in the new provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan."

The convention then adjourned until 2 p.m.

FIFTH SESSION.

The fifth and concluding session of the convention commenced shortly after two o'clock, Friday afternoon. The first topic for discussion related to and was introduced by Mayor K. W. McKenzie, of Edmonton, who moved the adoption of the following resolution :

"That in the opinion of this convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of the Northwest Territories it is highly desirable, from the standpoint of economy as well as convenience, that the Governments of the proposed Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan endeavor, as far as possible, to adopt common text books for Public Schools and a common curriculum for High Schools, looking to the free interchange of teachers' certificates and other certificates of standing between the provinces, and that such a policy will best serve the highest educational interests of the said provinces."

Mayor McKenzie said that the uniformity which now existed in the Territories might well continue in spite of the imaginary line which was being drawn to divide the country into two provinces. He pointed out that there is a sparse population in the new provinces and much better terms could be obtained from the publishers if the same text books were used in both Alberta and Saskatchewan. It was also desirable to have "unrestricted reciprocity in teachers." He urged the adoption of the resolution because it was practicable and embodies business principles.

The resolution was seconded by R. J. Hutchings, of Calgary, and adopted unanimously.

Permanent Organization. — 1 c — —

Mayor Laird of Regina then presented the report of the committee on Permanent Organization. Constitution and By-laws. The report recommended that the association remain one united body and organize permanently as the "Associated Boards of Trade of Alberta and Saskatchewan." The committee also submitted a draft constitution and by-laws.

Mayor Laird moved that the report be adopted, and that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole to consider the constitution and by-laws clause by clause. The motion carried without discussion.

A Misunderstanding.

That there had been no opposition was due entirely to a misunderstanding, and this was soon made clear, for there was a strong minority in favor of separation on provincial lines.

When the first clause of the constitution referring to the name of the association came up it was quite clear that very many members had not understoon that the principle of permanency had been adopted. In spite of interruptions Mayor Laird, who was in the chair while the convention was in committee, proceeded to put the vote on clause 1 of the constitution.

Then up rose Frank Oliver (not Hon. Frank! the doughty scrapper from Saskatoon. Young, aggressive, clean shaven, with a determined, firm-looking jaw, he looked the part of one who "scents the battle from afar." He protested vigorously against the "railroading" of such a resolution through in such a manner, and moved that the question of permanent organization be reconsidered. He was promptly ruled out of order, as the convention was in committee of the whole, and he subsided for the moment.

H. F. Mytton moved in amendment to clause one of the constitution that the name of the association be "The Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada." This would allow the inclusion later of Manitoba and British Columbia if that were thought advisable. The amendment carried.

The constitution, as adopted in committee, provides that the association shall include all Boards of Trade in the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan which shall comply with the regulations. A Board of Trade with 60 members and upwards shall be entitled to 5 delegates; a board with less than 60 members and at least 40 members, shall be entitled to 4 delegates; a board with less than 40 and at least 30 members, shall be entitled to 3 delegates; a board with less than 30 and at least 20 members, shall be entitled to 2 delegates, and boards with less than 20 members shall be entitled to 1 delegate.

Union or Division?

When the committee rose and Mayor Laird had move the adoption of its report, Frank Oliver's chance had come. He moved in amendment that the question of permanent organization be reconsidered. His motion was defeated, but there was a strong minority in favor of division.

Immigration.

A harmless and meaningless resolution referring to immigration, introduced by the Moose Jaw delegation, was carried without discussion. It was as follows :

"That it would be to the best interests of the new provinces for the Legislatures to adopt a progressive immigration policy."

Law Amendments.

Justice McGuire, Prince Albert, then presented the report of the Law Amendment Committee. Perhaps the most important recommendations referred to exemptions, and these were as follows :

"That the Exemption Ordinances should be amended as follows :

(a) "To provide a classification for different classes of persons, e.g., one for a farmer and another for an artisan, etc.; the total exemption in no case to exceed $1,500, including the homestead.

(b) "That a time limit should be put on exemptions.

(c) "That voluntary transfers of exempted property (particularly from husband to wife) or like transfers, should be declared fraudulent as against creditors."

(d) "That protection should be given a debtor in the discretion of a judge against a clear sacrifice of property liable under seizure, e.g., the sale of immature or unready stock."

A committee consisting of Justice McGuire, Prince Albert; Wm. Short, Edmonton; H. F. Mytton, Regina, and R. J. Hutchings, Calgary, was appointed to present the report of the Law Reform Committee to the Legislatures.

Hudson's Bay Railway.

The following resolution, moved by H. F. Mytton, Regina, and seconded by Wm. Pearce, Calgary, was carried unanimously :

"That the president appoint a committee of five to formulate a resolution expressing the interest of the people of the Territories in the matter of the proposed Hudson's Bay route from Western Canada to the markets of Europe, and urging that every possible means be taken to determine the conditions of navigation in the Hudson's Bay and Straits;

"And, further, that the committee endeavor to arrange that the various business centres of the west express their desires regarding the Hudson's Bay route to the Dominion Government."

Accordingly the following committee was named by the president : Wm. Pearce, Calgary; Mayor K. W. McKenzie, Edmonton; W. B. Willoughby, Moose Jaw; P. McAra, Regina; Justice McGuire, Prince Albert.

Edmonton Next Year.

The claims of Edmonton, Prince Albert, Saskatoon and Lethbridge, as suitable places for the next convention, were urged by delegates from these towns, and finally it was decided by a large vote to meet next year at Edmonton.

Votes of thanks were passed to the officers and committees, etc., and the convention was closed with the National Anthem.

THE BANQUET.

The banquet tendered the visiting delegates by the Regina Board of Trade was in every sense of the word a striking success. It was held in the Windsor Hotel on Thursday night, and as it followed a night session of the convention. it was almost 11 o'clock when it commenced and after midnight before the toast list was reached. H. F. Mytton, president of the Regina Board of Trade, presided, and was ably assisted by the vice-chairman, H. W. Laird, the clever and popular young mayor of the city. To the chairman's right sat Thomas Tweed, president of the Associated Boards of Trade, A. L. Johnson, President of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, and Hon. G. H. V. Bulyea; to his left were Premier Haultain, F. W. Peters, general traffic manager of the C.P.R., and Hon. W. Elliott.

When justice had been done to a sumptuous menu, the following toast list was reached:

Toasts.

"There St. John mingles with my friendly bowl,
The feast of reason and the flow of soul."—Pope.

1. The King

"God save the King."

2. The Governer-General and Lieut.-Governor.

3. Transportation Interests.

4. The Parliament of Canada and Provincial Legislatures.

"For Forms of Government let fools contest, Whate'er is best administered is best."—Pope.

5. Our Guests.

One dish shall serve; and welcome make the rest."—
Hall.

6. Trade, Commerce and Agriculture.

"Ill fares the land to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates and men decay."—
Goldsmith.

God save the King.

The toast to the King was honored in loyal fashion and all joined in singing the national anthem. The chairman announced that he had a letter of regret from Lieut.-Governor Forget who was unavoidably absent and the second toast was honored without any speeches.

Transportation Interests.

F. W. Peters, general traffic manager of the C.P.R., responded to the toast to "Our Transportation Interests." Mr. Peters regretted that no representative of any other railway was present, for the time was past when the C.P.R. were the "whole thing" in the west. Other railways were extending in the west and would divide the traffic with the C.P.R.

In this connection, Mr. Peters told an amusing story of an Irishman who arrived in Canada a short time ago. Landing at Quebec from a steamer, which he had been told belonged to the C.P.R., his eye was caught by the graceful outlines of the Chateau Frontenac. "Who owns that house?" he asked.

"The C.P.R.," was the reply.

He traveled to Montreal on a railway line, which he was told was C.P.R., and he put up at the Place Viger Hotel, which, to his amazement, he found also belonged to the C.P.R. He traveled to Owen Sound by C.P.R. and boarded a C.P.R. boat which brought him to Fort William. Another C.P.R. hotel was there for his accommodation. Now Fort William is a divisional point; the time changes there. Meeting a man on the street Pat asked the time.

"C.P.R. time?" was the query.

"By Jabers, do they own time, too?" was the Irishman's exclamation.

Passing to the serious portion of his address, Mr. Peters referred to the great interest displayed in the United States and Canada in recent years in the question of the control of railway rates. "Two years ago the Canadian Government put on the statute books a law relating to the control of rates, a law framed with the very best object in view, viz., the prevention of discrimination in rates. They appointed a Railway Commission, in whom both the railways and the public have confidence, its chairman being a man of acknowledged legal ability.

"The railways and the general public should unite in an effort to give this commission a fair chance to solve the problems which come before it. So far it has done good work, and I am very hopeful as to the future. Of course not all of its decisions have been pleasing to the railways, and the public have not always been satisfied, but that is only to be expected.

"Let me make it plain that the railways do not object to this Act; we are willing and anxious to give the system a fair trial. We welcome every measure designed to protect the railways against the demands of selfish shippers who want discrimination in their favor. We need assistance for it is a hard matter to persuade the big shipper that he should not be given a better rate than the small shipper.

"All prospects point to a larger harvest than we have ever had before, and for that reason the people of the west are more than ordinarily interested in the transportation question. I may tell you that the C.P.R. are doing everything possible to handle the big crop quickly. Mr. Whyte has given the matter special attention and he has made some interesting calculations. You know he is a careful man, and what he says is usually correct. Provided the opening price is such that the crop will begin to move at once, Mr. Whyte estimates that 28,000,000 bushels can be moved before the close of navigation. We have put on 4,000 additional cars and 68 extra locomotives for the western lines. At Kenora a locomotive will pass every 22 minutes during the whole 24 hours in the busy season. The C.P.R. are doing everything possible to handle the big crop with the least possible delay." (Applause.)

Premier Haultain.

Chairman Mytton then proposed the toast of the Parliament of Canada and Provincial Legislatures, coupling with it the name of Premier Haultain. The storm of applause which greeted the name of the Territorial Premier caused the chairman to remark: "I never made such a popular speech before in my life."

Premier Haultain was greeted with prolonged cheers and "He's a jolly good fellow" renewed again and again, showing conclusively the strong hold which this gifted young statesman has upon the affections of his own western countrymen. After thanking the audience for their kind reception of his name, he proceeded to express his pleasure as a citizen of Regina in welcoming the delegates of the Board of Trade Convention. There was no need to waste time in dilating upon the advantages of such a convention as they are quite obvious.

"I am glad that if this is to be the last gathering of a Territorial convention, there is still to be a western convention. Somewhat unnecessarily in my opinion we are to be divided politically, but our interests are the same on both sides of the imaginary line, by means of which the Dominion Parliament intend to separate us, and I hope there will be no division of this association.

Premier Haultain.
Principal Speaker at the Banquet.

"Strangely enough my name is associated with the only toast with which I have nothing whatever to do. I am not a member of Parliament and I don't know very much about Parliament. Moreover, my recent acquaintance with it does not cause me to think very highly of it. (Laughter.) I am not a member of any Provincial Legislature, but as some one has said, 'I 'as 'opes.'

"It is in the Northwest Territories Legislature that my political experience has been gained, and of it I desire to speak a few words. We are told we should speak nothing but good of the dead, and perhaps the same rule should apply to the dying and practically dead. I may be pardoned for being proud of the record of that Legislature. Of course we made mistakes; we were human representatives of very human constituencies. But I believe that no body of men have ever met with a greater sense of their responsibilities or a more single-minded idea that there was important work to be done. This may sound like bombast, but you must allow the dying swan to sing his song.

"The growth of the Territories has been gradual and steady, and so has been the legislative and constitutional growth. A great change is coming and I only hope that the new Legislature will grapple with public questions as ably and honestly, as sincerely and as resolutely as the old.

"It was the glory of the old Legislature that we tried to do business with regard to that business alone; we did not draw the party lines. From 1888 until 1905, in a country where politicians are numerous and party feeling often is very strong, a body of men have been elected who set aside party traditions and worked together for the common good of the west. That was the glory of the old Legislature, and I hope it will be the praise of the new. We have no time here for party politics, for we have too much to do. In a material sense the transportation problem is the greatest question in this country. In my opinion the great project which is coming up for the consideration of the two new provinces and the old Province of Manitoba is that of a Hudson's Bay railway. I firmly believe that this road is coming and that when built it will revolutionize conditions here. It will not interfere with the railways we have already; they will still be necessary. This is the great question that is coming, but this is not the time or place to speak of it."

Our Guests.

Vice-chairman Laird now took charge of the toast list and proposed the toast to "Our Guests," coupling with it the names of President Tweed, of Medicine Hat, Mayor MacKenzie, of Edmonton, W. H. Cushing, of Calgary and A. MacCaul, of Indian Head.

Mr. Tweed, in a humorous address, begged to be excused as he had been sitting close to the chairman and was "under the influence of Mytton." The guests had all been delighted with their visit to Regina and could not say enough to express their gratitude for their kindly reception. Like Premier Haultain, he hoped they would meet again as a united body, and if, as was suggested, they meet next time in Edmonton, he did not doubt they would have a "capital time" no matter what Calgary might say to the contrary.

Mayor MacKenzie, of Edmonton, also claimed to be in a jaded condition, but made a "capital" speech. He was glad to hear Premier Haultain suggest that the Boards of Trade stay together in one association in spite of the imaginary line which was to divide the Territories into two provinces. Personally he hoped the association would extend its scope to include Manitoba, for the whole of the country between the lakes and the mountains has similar interests, and its Boards of Trade may well be united.

Messrs. Cushing, of Calgary, and MacCaul, of Indian Head, both spoke briefly along the same lines.

Trade, Commerce and Agriculture.

With the toast to "Trade, Commerce and Agriculture," Vice-chairman Laird coupled the names of Messrs. A. L. Johnson, president of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, Clinkskill, of Saskatoon, W. B. Willoughby, of Moose Jaw, and T. H. Blaicklock, of Weyburn.

Mr. Johnson spoke briefly and to the point. He was glad to see so little sectionalism in the proceedings of the convention. The Winnipeg Board of Trade was free from the spirit of sectionalism and in its deliberations he thought it considered only the general interests of the entire west.

"Our interests are mutual in the west," said the speaker, "and what builds up the Territories helps to build up Winnipeg."

In humorous vein Mr. Johnson disclaimed all knowledge of agriculture. The farmer, he knew, was the backbone of the country, for he wears the shoes which his (Mr. Johnson's) firm sell, and he rides on Mr. Peter's C.P. Railway.

Mr. Clinkskill dilated at considerable length upon the glories and advantages of his own town Saskatoon, which he hoped many of the delegates would visit. He also dealt very effectively with the immigration problem and the unoccupied homesteads which are held by speculators, thus hindering the development of the country, its trade, its commerce, and its agriculture.

Messrs. Willoughby and Blaicklock also spoke briefly to the same toast.

City of Regina.

R. J. Hutchings, of Calgary, then proposed a toast to the City of Regina, and took occasion to thank the mayor and the officers of the Board of Trade for their kindness and courtesy. The mayor replied briefly on behalf of the city.

The Ladies.

A toast to the ladies of Regina brought the gallant Premier to his feet to respond, and his rising was the signal for another ovation.

The gathering dispersed about 3 a.m. after singing "Auld Lang Syne."

CONVENTION NOTES.

Regina is a hospitable city.

Saskatoon has ambitions to be capital of Saskatchewan.

"Abbott from Maple Creek" was the wit of the convention.

Hon. Frank Oliver has a namesake at Saskatoon who was a delegate to the convention.

On Thursday afternoon the ladies of Regina entertained the delegates at an informal garden party in the park.

Delegates carried away many souvenirs of that fertile Regina mud, whose wheat growing properties are so well known.

Local jealousies cropped up occasionally, but upon the whole the convention was remarkable for the harmony displayed.

H. F. Mytton was a capable chairman at Thursday night's banquet. Those "under the influence of Mytton" seemed to enjoy themselves.

Saskatoon provided a special train and invited the delegates to visit the ambitious northern town and attend a banquet on Saturday night.

President A. L. Johnson, of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, was present at the convention on Thursday and Secretary C. N. Bell attended on Friday.

The delegates and the press were extended the privileges of the Assiniboia Club during their stay in the city, a courtesy which was much appreciated.

The noticeable feature at Thursday night's banquet was the wonderful popularity of Premier Haultain. Those who know him best apparently appreciate him most.

Secretary Trant was untiring in his efforts to provide for the wants and comfort of the delegates and very much of the credit of a successful convention is due to him.

On Friday morning there was on exhibition on the press table a sample of Spring wheat from the farm of Wm. Reddick, of Maple Creek. It measured 41½ inches in length.

William Pearce, of Calgary, is an old-timer who had probably the most intimate acquaintance of any man at the convention with conditions in all parts of the west. His opinions were always listened to with respect.

A strong sentiment in favor of government ownership of public utilities was a notable feature of the gathering. Messrs. Mytton and Cushing were the principal opponents of such ideas, but the majority of the convention were opposed.

The fire brigade gave a good exhibition on Friday night, throwing streams of water which Winnipeg would find it hard to equal. Regina has accomplished the seemingly impossible for a prairie city—she has an excellent waterworks system in which the pressure is supplied by the force of gravitation.

His Honor the Lieut.-Governor and Madame Forget entertained the delegates at a garden party on Friday evening at Government House grounds. The reception committee assisting Madame Forget consisted of Mrs. McCullough, Mrs. Peverett, Mrs. Ford Jones and Mrs. Bulyea.

During the convention the chairman wisely suggested that all speakers should give their name and Board of Trade on rising to address the meeting. This was a sensible request, but it was not always followed. "Coupland from Saskatoon" and "Mytton from Regina" created some merriment by always announcing their name and town.

Conceit and Ability

ARE as far apart as the poles. Conceit promises much without the ability to fulfil. Allow us to demonstrate our ability to produce the best line of goods in America. Peas are now receiving particular attention. It is a ten to one shot many dealers will load up with old stock, no need to say what that quality is. We have installed the most modern machinery in the world for canning peas and we know how to operate the same. Now, with a technical knowledge and practical experience of more than 25 years' canning peas, does it not stand to reason that we are able to produce the nicest canned green peas in this or any country. No section of the world is so specially adapted to the growing of delicious peas as Canada ; and by our special process we know that the consumer will buy 10 cans of "Autumn Leaf Brand" Frankford canned peas to one of any other if you have them in stock. We put up six grades of peas and label every grade true to name. It is very important to know what you are buying. Cut the tins, see the clear appearance of the syrup, taste the peas ; note they are young and tender, canned the same day as picked. No need to wash or rinse our peas, but warm them up in the same syrup they are canned in and you will have as delicious a pea as is possible to get picked in your own garden. Again, we say, it is to both your own and customer's benefit that you should demonstrate the facts mentioned above. If your Jobber does not handle our goods get on the line with us.

Are You Handling CELLULOID STARCH?

Live dealers realize that substitution doesn't pay. People enjoy being the judges of what is best for them and it is wise policy to give them what they want.

The extra profit made from trial sales of unknown brands is very insignificant compared with the continuous profit from repeated sales, sure to be the lot of any meritorious article aggressively advertised to the consumer.

Celluloid Starch does what is claimed for it and the present heavy demand is the result. Its success is a "continuous performance."

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

Quebec Markets.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, July 6, 1905.

THERE is a distinct improvement noted in the grocery trade, and jobbers report a better lot of orders, and reports from travelers are also more encouraging. Merchants who have been holding off buying their season's supply of sugar have come to the conclusion that this necessary article is now about as low as can be expected this season, and the preserving of early small fruits being in swing has forced them to buy. Refiners report larger busines from the jobbing trade. In teas a decided improvement has to be recorded, all lines and grades turning over better and in much larger quantities. The market, while somewhat higher than a month ago, is still in buyers' favor, and it is apparent from the amount of business turning that the trade is stocking up. China blacks, notably Pan Yongs low grades, have ben sold in large lots early part of this week. Ceylon greens and blacks are being disposed of by London houses at satisfactory figures. Japans also are in good favor. The latest cable from Yokohama gives a shortage of 8,000,000 pounds, an increase of 2,000,000 in shortage since our report of two weeks ago. Molasses has been reduced 1c. per gallon by the Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Guild, as applying to the Quebec district. No features of interest are noted, and business is not large. Corn syrups are holding their own, though this is hardly a good season for either syrups or molasses. Spices continue very strong, and cloves particularly are slated for an advance. Coffees unchanged. In canned goods business has been quiet, with exception that jobbers have placed all their orders with the Canadian Canners', Limited, for lines quoted in first circular. The low opening prices augar well for a large busines this season. Canned salmon orders also have been placed, and as prices have been decided on by the Guild in the four lines usually grouped, the retail trade is in a position to place its orders. In foreign dried fruits there is nothing of striking interest to record. Local fish dealers express themselves as satisfied with business turning over, considering that this is not the fish season. The arrival of fruits (fresh) always has a tendency to check trade in fish. Flour has shown a decided firmnes, and the leading millers have put up prices 10c. per barrel, owing to strong and advancing wheat markets. Feed is dull on acount of available pastures. Rolled oats is advancing in sympathy with higher prices in oats. There are no changes to note in maple products, honey or evaporated apples. The provision market is strong and steady all round.

Sugar—Jobbers report better business in sugar from country merchants. Everyone has been holding off as long as possible for sugar to reach the bottom, but the arrival of small and early fruits has forced the trade to stock up. Refiners also report good business. The foreign beet market is still unsettled and fluctuating.

Tea—Business in teas shows a decided improvement. Some good-sized parcels of Congous have been sold at prices of 9 to 9 1-2c., principally Pan Yongs. Cable quotations from Shanghai say Ping Suey market opened up with short supplies. Ceylon greens have shown good business, some heavy orders being put through London houses. Blacks also are receiving good attention. Latest cable report from Japan give shortage this year of 8,000,000 pounds, and heavy rains prevailing. Local trade in Japans is reported as good. Jobbers are buying more freely, and this is being reflected from outside points.

Coffee—No change in coffee. Market report of Watt, Scott & Goodacre below gives satistical position of crops for the past four years, and from all appearances the physological moment to stock has arrived.

"The 'coffee year' begins on July 1. The visible world's supply at that date in the last four years is stated as follows: 1905, 11,100,000 bags; 1904, 12,361,000 bags; 1903, 11,900,000 bags; 1902, 11,261,000 bags. Thus the consumption for 1904-05 was 1,261,000 bags in excess of production.

"Whereas consumption is incrasing, there can be no ncrease in production for two or three years, even if new planting were contemplated in the large exporting countries. But, on the contrary, cultivation is decreasing ownig to labor troubles arising from reduction in wages, occasioned by higher exchange. For instance, the Brazil out-turn for 1904-5 was 400,000 bags less than the previous year.

"Although Santos and Rio new crop arrivals continue to increase, shippers cannot cover offers on he basis of New York markets. In the meanwhile, stocks are accumulating in Brazil, and if roasters continue to sit on the safety valve long enough we will have even cheaper coffees to offer."

Spices—Spice market continues very strong in sympathy with New York market. Cloves are particularly interesting, and higher prices are looked for. Peppers are held firm, and grinders apnear to have bought available stocks. It would not be a surprise if the spice grinders should feel it necessary to make an advance in these staples shortly.

Canned Goods—Business during the week has been good, particularly for Summer canned meats and company picnic supplies. The new prices of canned goods are meeting with pleasurable acceptance by the trade, and it is to be hoped that corn and tomatoes will receive equal reduction to peas. All orders are in hands of the Canadian Canners' agents. Salmon orders being booked at quotations under special heading.

Shelled Walnuts have slightly receded in price, as usual at this season of the year, naturally without inducing import orders.

Malaga Raisins—Quotations have been received for new crop pack, and same are about on same parity as last year's figures.

Currants are sluggish with only a hand to mouth demand and without any change in price.

Fish—Wholesale fish dealers report a very good demand for all sorts of fresh fish. Receipts of same are ample for requirements, but dore and halibut are very scarce at present. It is expected that in a week or so supply will be better. Brook trout is pretty nearly finished, in fact there is hardly any to be found on the market. The quality of the new stock arriving is of the fines. There has been an extra demand for Gaspe salmon during the past week, owing to the Independence Day across the border, where on such occasions much of our salmon is used. On account of this, salmon has a tendency to advance in price. There is a fair demand for salt, boneless and smoked fish, but dealers do not look for any material improvement before September. There are very little changes in prices, which seem to be firm. We quote:

Evaporated Apples — Evaporated apples continue very dull. They sell with a poor demand at from 6 1-4 to 6 1-2c. However, we hear of some cutting in prices by some dealers, though such hopes of easier prices are promptly denied by some authorities, who have received advices that the price might go up to 8c. this Fall. Dried apples with little doing, 3 to 3 1-2c.

Flour Feed, and Meal.

Flour—An interview with the principal dealers shows little change in the flour market, which is strong owing to prevailing good demand. Wheat continues very firm, and the Manitoba crop, according to last advices, promises a very large yield.

Very little is done in export to England, while very substantial shipments are made to South African ports. In general this week's market lacks in any new feature, except that some millers have advanced their prices. We quote:

Royal Household		5 70

Winter wheat patents	5 30	5 50

Straight rollers, bags, 90 per cent	2 40	2 50

Feed—The steadness n feed is wearing off a little. Bran is weak, and but small sale sof it are made. This is due to pastures being very rich this year, and will be the cause of little doing for some time. Mouillie also in limited demand. In fact there are no important changes to note. Prices are as under:

Manitoba bran, in bags, per ton	16 50	17 00

Ontario bran, in bulk	15 00	16 50
" shorts	19 00	20 00
Mouillie	24 00	27 00

Rolled Oats—The market in rolled oats is strong, owing to oats being very firm. Oatmeal has been particularly dull last eek, and exports were purely nominal. Sales are made easily as per quotations below:

Fine oatmeal, bags	2 85	2 90
Standard oatmeal, bags	2 90	2 95

Hay—There is not much change this week. The demand is good enough, but dealers entertain hopes for better business when the farmers will start harvesting. No. 1 particularly scarce, though all stocks generally are much lighter than those of last year. The hay crop, especially in new prairies, promises a good yield. No change in prices to report.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, July 6, 1905.

THERE is the usual seasonable slackness on the street this week, but considering the time of the year on the whole things are satisfactory. A number of houses report good full orders coming in. The crop prospects throughout the country are good, and a fine Fall business is anticipated. There is some more interest being manifested in sugar of late, buyers heretofore holding off on account of the unsettled conditions. Canned goods are the centre of much interest both in vegetables and fish. A rise in U.S. tomatoes have been followed by corresponding advance here, while peas are being bought freely at prices named. The price committee having announced the price for salmon one would have expected more interest than is being manifested, especially in view of the closed season for the next two years.

Molasses is firm and meeting very fair seasonable demand, with some inquiry for syrups.

Coffees are quiescent with only a few lines of milds changing hands. Tea is without feature. Rice and tapioca are firm with advancing tendency noticeable in the latter. Spices are quiet locally, but on the New York market indications are for higher prices. In dried fruits prunes are firm and other California dred fruits scarce and high. It is early yet for Mediterranean, but some buying for importation is being spoken of in a quiet way. Evaporated apples are strong and slightly higher. There is little of interest in other country produce, with eggs probably a little weaker. In grain and flour we have the northwest millers reducing prices, while on Toronto market Manitoba wheat shows an advance over last week's quotations of 1 1-2 cents.

Up to going to press there was no further change in sugar, with the exception that acadia is now 10 cents below Montreal granulated.

Canned Goods—Canned goods are still absorbing the attention of the street, and at the low price made for peas this line is receiving no little attention. Speculation is rife as to the probable price for corn and tomatoes. Some predict that the canners will make a price relatively as low as for peas, while others take the opposite view. In the meantime the market is pretty well cleaned up, so far as these staple vegetables go, and the new crop will have a clear show. A rise has been recorded in American tomatoes, and as a result prices here have firmed up, and no more are offered for $1.25. The price for salmon has been made on a basis of $1.57 1-2 per dozen for 1 lb. talls in one to four-case lots. This applies to Horse Shoe, Maple Leaf and Clover Leaf brands. Arrow brand is fixed at $1.50. A concession of 2 1-2c. per dozen is allowed on orders of five cases and up. These prices are good for new pack, only delivery to be made in the Fall around September 15th. The prices are about on a level with five years ago. Last year was the highest in many years. The trade do not seem to be taking hold very briskly, but if the order in Council closing the fishing for the next two years be adhered to it would be well to give the salmon situation serious thought, especially as it is understood that the English market is practically bare and can take care of large quantities. Sugar—The course of the sugar market for the present week has been disturbed by the holidays, both here and in the United States. At the close of the week there was no change since last advice and the market is without special indications for the immediate future. Europe has continued its downward course, and latest quotations for 88 test was 10s. 11½d, which is equivalent to parity of 4.31c., duty paid, N.Y., for 96 test centrifugals, in which recent transactions have been at 4.25c. Latest advices indicated that holders of cane sugars might accept offers of 1-32 less, but buyers continued their indifferent attitude. However, as we have entered upon a new month we shall probably see more business doing with American refiners in raw sugars, and there are those who think that refiners' necessities will compel them to pay more money for their supplies, as stocks of available raw sugars are light. The margin between raw and refined sugars in New York is now 1c. per lb., as compared with the recent high difference of 1.35c.

The recent decline in beet sugars is attributed to the favorable weather for the growing crops that has prevailed on the continent for some time past, and it was also expected that the large difference of over 3s. between quotations for August and October beets would sooner or later be wiped out. This is gradually taking place, consequent upon the expectations of a large yield during the next campaign, which have been based upon the increase in the sowings and the favorable growth which has since developed. Within the past ten days there has been a decline of over 1s. per cwt. in beets. The difference between old crop and new crop is now about 1s. 5d per cwt., and there appears no good reason at the moment why there should be a decline in next crop quotations unless they should be sympathetically affected by the present demoralization in actual sugar.

A much better demand for refined sugar has developed during the week and this is the hope of the situation both in Canada and the United States for the immediate future. Only light stocks are held by merchants throughout the country, as most have pursued the hand-to-mouth policy for some time past.

Combined stocks for Europe and America for latest uneven dates are 2,158,918 tons, as compared with 2,554,381 tons same period last year, the decrease being 395,463 tons. U.S. refiners continue to melt 39,000 tons per week, according to Willett & Gray, and total stocks in all hands at Atlantic ports showed decrease for week ending June 29 of 83,359 tons.

Teas—The quality of Ceylon black tea on Colombo sale is much better than was the case a month or six weeks ago, but supplies are not so plentiful and the combined circumstances have caused an advance of a farthing to ½d all round in quoted figures, but as a matter of fact, the value is equally good in all grades above commonest, as the better quality has more than compensated for the increased cost. In Japans there is less activity or interest at this date than at corresponding date in any past season. The value offered from Japan is very good and lower prices could hardly be expected in view of the undoubtedly short crop, and yet orders are few and small. Evidently the wholesale trade feel quite uncertain as to the probable Canadian demand for Japans and it looks as if Ontario is fast becoming an exclusively black tea market.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

KWinnipeg, July 4, 1905.

BUSINESS continues very active, and there is a heavy movement of all lines of groceries. Price changes are not very numerous, but there are some new quotations to record. The interest of the trade centres just now in the new prices of canned goods announced by the Canadian Canners. There will be found below some particulars regarding a new grouping of the different brands.

Sugar—The market is still in a very uncertain state, and as further declines are expected merchants are buying in small quantities. The situation is very annoying, as this is the season of increased consumption. Prices are quoted now as follows:

Montreal granulated, in bbls	5 65
" " in sacks	5 60
" yellow, in bbls	5 15
" " in sacks	5 10

" " in small quantities	6 50
Lump, hard, in bbls	6 35
" " in ½-bbls	6 45
" " in 100-lb cases	6 35

Canned Goods—The canners are this year dividing all canned goods into three different groups Nos. 1, 2 and 3. Group No. 1 is quoted five cents. higher than groups 2 and 3, which are the same price. The difference between group 2 and group 3 is that the price of the former is fixed by the Canadian Canners, while in No. 3 the jobbers arrange their own prices. Group No. 1 is supposed to have the finest quality of goods, but some of the best known and most popular brands are included in the lower groups. Group No. 1 includes the following brands: Aylmer Canning Co., "Canada First"; A. C. Miller & Co., "Little Chief"; Miller & Co., "Log Cabin"; Canadian Canners', Limited, "Auto." and Bowlby's "Horse Shoe." Group No. 2 comprises the following brands: "Lynn Valley," "Maple Leaf," "Kent Brand," "Lion," "Thistle," and "Grand River." Group No. 3 comprises the following brands: "Jubilee," "Globe," "Stag" and "White Rose." Most of the prices given below are for last season's goods. In all cases it should be understood that the prices quoted are for groups 2 and 3, and for group 1 the price is 5 cents higher.

Canadian corn has been reduced to meet the price of the American brands, which have been offered on this market lately. New prices for "Clover Leaf" salmon for Fall delivery are announced, and will be found below. We quote:

WHY SOME GROCERS ARE FAILURES.

IT is interesting to note the number of changes in the grocery business that are constantly occurring, and it has been said that at the end of ten years not more than ten per cent. of the same grocers will remain in business.

The causes for these continual changes are many, says the Interstate Grocer, but are due principally to incompetency, and lack of capital. To incompetency should be attributed at least 85 per cent. as there is usually sufficient capital on hand to run the business at the time it is started. When financial embarrassment comes the almost invariable cause is found to be bad management.

The grocery business seems to be the only avenue to riches, for every carpenter, shoemaker, crippled railroad employe or any man who has laid by a few hundred dollars. For some unknown reason they seem to think it is a life of ease, a business requiring no very great amount of ability or previous experience, and a stepping stone to greatness.

As a result of this blindness the aspirant for wealth, either buys out some grocer already in business at a cheap price, or puts in a small stock and establishes a new store. He has enough money to carry on the business for a time, but soon discovers that trade is not as brisk as anticipated nor profits as good. If he should be fortunate enough to get a good line of customers he shortly discovers that credit has been given with too free a hand and that collections are hard to make. Then comes financial troubles, due of course, to his incompetency.

In addition his previous lack of experience makes him a fit subject for all kinds of schemes that are forced on him by unprincipled salesmen who sell him goods that are unsalable. He then has a lot of stock on which no money can be realized, and lack of money again begins to trouble him. Incompetency, however, was the cause of the distress.

Then, again, having had no experience, such men are not aware that frauds are perpetrated on them daily through their being short counted, over-weighted, over-gauged and over-measured on many of the purchases which they make. In other words they are easy prey for dishonest houses, who know of their inexperience and as a consequence they "do" them. Having confidence in all the world they shortly begin to realize that although they have handled a good business, no surplus of profits are visible. Again here is a shortage of funds with which to meet the bills of the jobber, and they finally quit because of their inability to cope with their more wide-awake and experienced brother merchants.

Of course some of these carpenters, shoemakers and railroad men become shrewd merchants and make successes, but it is only the exceptional one who does. The exception on close inspection will prove to be a man of tact, observation and a close student of the requirements of the business, who watches every detail and who is a good listener and a reader of all information that comes to him relating to the groceries. He is a man who, while he supposes everybody is honest, takes no chances, but carefully checks up deliveries of groceries made to him by concerns that he buys from and he will not say "it's too much trouble" to count a barrel of pickels or of mackerel. Neither will his store be the dumping ground for a lot of unsaleable groceries, nor will he extend credit indiscriminately to whoever asks for it. On the contrary, he will figure that every dollar's worth of groceries leaving his store on credit is so much cash loaned out without interest, and no security other than the honesty of he debtor, and he can be relied on to investigate pretty thoroughly the chances for getting back the money for this goods, and will not hesitate to say "No" to a credit applicant if his chances are the least doubtful.

FINANCE

FRATERNAL life insurance companies have been coming in for much severe criticism recently at the hands of financial journals and experts. The rates which have been in force in most cases have been entirely inadequate. Actuaries were apparently neglected in striking a rate which would be sufficient to meet the death claims as they fell due. Sane life insurance is based on one absolute principle, that the average man shall pay in enough to cover his claim, with an additional percentage for expenses, etc. This is the only common-sense theory of insurance. If this has not been done, arguments based on the number of members and the increase of business are deceptive. There is no strength in numbers where each member is a losing proposition. If the rates have been fixed so low that the average man in his lifetime does not pay as much as his beneficiaries will receive, then the more the members, the bigger will be the crash.

The worst feature of it is that where a bad start is made, it is practically impossible thereafter to rectify the mistake. If a company admits members for a number of years at an insufficient rate, the only means of equalizing matters is by charging later members a sum in excess of what they ought to pay. Since no one is prepared to pay for other men's mistakes, practically no one would come in at what was then an exorbitant rate. As a matter of fact, most of the fraternal companies have not raised their rates to meet the requirements, but have gone on blindly trusting to pay the claims out of the fees from new members. At best, this device can only stand off the enevitable a short time. When the mass of men who entered the company some years ago as young men reach the age where life is insecure, and begin dropping off in increasing numbers, the sinking funds will disappear with disastrous rapidity. An authoritative English financial paper recently reckoned that one Canadian fraternal society, which had a surplus of about six million dollars, in reality should have shown a rest fund of over fifty million dollars to secure its liabilities. The prospect is ominous when these liabilities shall become pressing.

The increase in investment is the most remarkable feature of the report. It far exceeds that of the United States when account is taken of the difference in populationtion. At the present rate of development it will not be many years till the whole country is honeycombed with steel rails. The Grand Trunk Pacific is one of the greatest enterprises ever undertaken on the continent. A line is being pushed up towards James Bay, to connect with that great waterway. In the far west the whole development of the mineral resources is waiting on an increase of railway facilities. To meet this the C.P.R. and the Great Northern are vieing with each other to see

Make Change Without Loss

Mistakes that occur in making change are avoided by system. A customer gave this reason why she trades with Mr. Hardy:

"Mr. Hardy's National Cash Register counts the money that is taken in, and if a mistake is made in making change you can always have it corrected.

"I once made a 10-cent purchase and handed the clerk $5. He handed me 90 cents. I did not notice the error until I reached home. I called Mr. Hardy's attention to it and he opened his National Cash Register and balanced his cash. It showed that there were four dollars more in the drawer than called for by the sales record."

A National Cash Register accurately records each transaction, whether cash, credit, money received on account, money paid or money changed, and shows the clerk's initial.

Let our representative call and explain our system to you.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Green Fruit.

Toronto, July 7, 1905.

THE fruit market is full of activity these days, with California fruits absorbing the principal interest. Strawberries are only in medium supply and, having come in late, it is a question how long they will last. Raspberries from Leamington made their first appearance on the market Tuesday. Red brought 18 and black 12½c. Larger supplies and lower prices will shortly be in order. Florida pines are practically done. Valencia oranges are meeting satisfactory sale. Lemons are higher, and it is even hinted that $6 lemons are in sight. Bananas are meeting active demand. Watermelons are good sellers just now and some fine Rockyford jem melons are having a ready sale at $4 to $4.50. Our quotations are as follows:

Florida pines, per case	3 50	4 00
Oranges, late Valencias	4 75	5 00

Vegetables.

The domestic vegetables have almost entirely supplanted the imported on the market now. The quality is good and prices in a number of lines becoming more popular. There are some fine new potatoes appearing. The demand is satisfactory and, on the whole, a brisk market. We quote:

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

Montreal, July 6, 1905.

The fruit market is a little dull this week owing to the holidays of the past week. Dealers have provided themselves with large quantities of fruits. Stocks are plentiful and generally moving slowly.

There are large stocks of strawberries, which sell well between 5 and 12c. Navel oranges, owing to a limited demand, are moving slowly; prices are higher, in fact between $4 to $4.75, and even $5. Bananas are strong and supplies much smaller than requirements. About 40 cars of them arrive weekly, and are taken up, while last week only 23 cars came in. However, as more are coming prices will probably lower in a few days. They enjoy good demand.

Sufficient stocks of California plums and peaches are on the market. Lemons, owing to a scarcity and to a good and steady demand, are known to sell as high as $4.50 a box. Lemons have ruled very high this past week in new York, and the highest prices of the season have been realized.

The prospects of the pear and apple crops are poor both in Western New York and in the Hudson River Valley. However, some authorities claim that the pear crop will not be bad in Hudson River Valley, but will average some of the late years good outputs.

Montreal dealers expect to see some home-grown apples on the market about the first of August. The crop is very promising. Some American apples are arriving in small lots from California. They are of a fair size and sell well. There are also some spys, but they are scarce.

California peaches and plums, which are in fair lots, are coming daily in car lots, and sell well owing to good demand.

Prices are generally firm this week. In fact there are hardly any changes. We quote:

Plums, crate	1 50	1 80
Peaches, box	1 50	1 80
Apricots, crate	1 25	1 40
Apples, bbl.	5 00	6 50
Dates, per lb		0 04½
California cherries, box		3 00
Bananas	1 75	2 00
Cocoanuts, per bag of 100	3 00	3 25
Pineapples, 24 to case		3 75
" 30 to case		3 00
Jamaica grape fruit, per box	5 00	5 50
Florida grape fruit, per box		5 00
California navel oranges, per box	4 00	4 75

Sweet potatoes, per bbl.		6 00
Tomatoes, Floridas, crate		2 75
Strawberries	0 10	0 12
Canteloupes, per crate		6 00
Watermelons, each		0 35

Vegetables.

Vegetables, as usual, are in a very good demand. Cucumbers, cabbage, young onions, beets, green peas, in quite large quantities, are selling very well. Stocks in general are moving fast, owing to low prices. However, it is believed that next week will see still lower figures.

Texas onions are much lower. The best that can be said of them is that they are of but a very ordinary quality. In New York the supply is so large that the very best of them do not sell higher than 85c. The best onions in New York are coming from the east shore of Virginia. They average from 80 to 90c.

The crop of Louisiana onions is said to be so large as to threaten an over supply. They are of the finest quality ever seen. Very large lots of home-grown vegetables are coming daily. Cabbages, asparagus, cucumbers, arrive very freely. Florida celery is out of the market, and Charleston cucumbers also.

Prices are easier this week. We quote:

Mississippi tomatoes, 4 lb crate		1 25
Florida tomatoes, crate		3 00
Bermuda onions, per box		2 25
New cabbage, per crate		1 25
Green and wax beans		3 00

NEW FRUIT COMPANY.

The Georgian Bay Fruit Growers, Limited, have been incorporated by Ontario charter with a share capital of $25,000, and with headquarters at the town of Thornbury, in the County of Grey. The purposes of the company are: (a) To deal wholesale and retail in all kinds of fruit; (b) to build and own fruit houses and cold storage plants, and (c) to own and operate evaporators, canning factories, cider and pulp mills, factories for the making of barrels, boxes, baskets, crates or any other packages required in the handling of fruit. The directors are Grey farmers.

FRUIT DIVISION REPORT.

Last week's report from the Fruit Division, Ottawa, indicates a medium to full crop of apples in the Maritime Provinces, except for early varieties, which do not promise more than a light crop. The prospects are for a medium to full crop in most sections of Ontario. A full crop of pears is indicated.

There are excellent prospects for plums in almost every section. Allowing for the Winter killing of 1899 and 1903, the prospects for peaches are promising. Indications are that cherries and bush fruits will be an abundant crop in nearly every district. Some losses occurred to the strawberry crop from the late frosts.

WILL OPEN IN TORONTO.

Mr. Charles Niechia, representing Fratelli Sacca, fruit importer, New York, has been in Toronto and vicinity the last week calling upon the fruit trade. Mr. Niechia's specialty is lemons, the head office of the firm being in Messina with branches at Hamburg, Leipsig, Melbourne and New York. Mr. Niechia expects to return shortly and open a branch in Toronto.

Halifax, N.S., July 3, 1905.

SOME improvement is noted in the grocery markets, and a fair jobbing trade was done during the week. Orders from some parts of the province are coming in more freely, and trade generally is brightening up. Prices on most articles remain unchanged, and collections are about the same. According to information received here the tea markets are improving, recent advices showing advances in Japans of 1½ to 2c. per pound. Dealers also say that there is a shortage in the crops of ginger, pepper and nutmegs, and in consequence of this the tone of the market is very firm.

Recent advices from Barbadoes indicate that the molasses market is now over at the island. The season was one of the best in years, and the prices were well maintained throughout, the shipments to Canada and Newfoundland being unusually heavy.

The demand continues good for canned stock of all kinds, and also hams and bacon. Smoked might be considered very scarce, though the dealers have not advanced the price on their present holdings.

The sugar market is steady and the wholesale price is unchanged. The retail dealers have dropped the price half a cent per pound, the article now selling at six cents. During the week brokers were taking orders for new pack canned on the usual conditions.

Fruits and green truck continue in good supply. American cabbage advanced 50c. per crate during the week, but it is expected that it will drop again when the next shipment arrives. Good oranges are scarce, and there was a shortage of bananas at the week's end, but the fruit steamer is now due. California cherries, plums, apricots and peaches found good sale during the week. Old stock potatoes are disappearing from the market, and American tubers are coming in more freely. They are quoted at $3 per barrel. The receipts of Ontario strawberries during the week were quite large. These berries are late coming to the market this year, and now will have to compete with the native berry. Ontario berries are quoted at 15c. per box. The native berry sells more freely, as it has the advantage of both color and flavor. Reports from the fruit-growing centres say that the recent wet weather has injured the crop, and that there will be a shortage.

Dairy butter is a little easier, being quoted at 19c., and the best creamery at 20 to 21c. The receipts are not up to expectations. The scarcity of small tubs of choice butter for family use is unusual for this season of the year. Eggs are steady at 17c. for Nova Scotia, and 16 for Prince Edward Island. Advices from the island say that there is a prospect of the price becoming a little easier this week. Cheese continues in good demand at last quotation.

The only change worthy of note in the fish market is a drop of 50c. per quintal in Bank cod at the end of the week. The receipts of dry fish are coming in more freely, and foreign shipments are not very brisk.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by Our Ad. Expert, TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send our Expert specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

"YELLOW EYE BEANS" is an attractive line in a small advertisement. No doubt it caught the eye of many who, as a result, were drawn on to read the rest of the advertisement. The type is well suited for a "special," though the firm name should have been set larger.

Armstrong Brothers' advertisement is nicely balanced, typographically speaking, and the display lines are set with taste. As a salutatory advertisement this one is well worded, it being essentially general in tone. There might, however, have been an improvement in the structure of one or two of the sentences.

The advertisement of Dixi H. Ross & Co. belongs to the "itemized" order.

B. C. Granulated Sugar, 20 pound sack - - - - - - - $1.25

Royal Household Flour, sack - - - - - - - $1.60

Dixi Brand Pastry Flour, sack - - - - - - - $1.40

DIXI H. ROSS & CO.

The Progressive Grocers.

It hits out direct, mentioning nothing but names and prices. This class of advertising always appeals to certain people, even though there may be no particular reason why the goods should be advertised. A heading would, undoubtedly, have advanced the attractiveness of this advertisement.

In advertising a retail store, especially, there is a great deal in studying the people to whom you are advertising—their tastes, whims, location, standing, etc. Failure to give this phase of advertising attention accounts for many of the paradoxes in publicity. A certain grocer whose trade is principally made up of farmers and market gardeners will perhaps run an advertisement on such a line as pickles, when the chances are that two-thirds of the readers of the advertisement have a supply of home-made pickles, and generally will have a supply. Another grocer again, will, perhaps, advertise a line of goods for which at no time is there a big call, say, canned mackerel. The same grocers would not bank much on this trade, from this sourse, in their stores. Why, then, in their advertisements?

While the purpose of one class of advertising is to build up a business on a particular line of goods, and then, when built up, to let that line of goods look after itself, this is not the purpose of advertising in a town. In the first place, the advertising appropriation of a town merchant is necessarily limited; in the second place, patronage is confined. Knowing this, it would be unwise to attempt to boom goods for which, at the best, there would never be much more than a one-day-a-week call. Your competitors might at the same time boom staple lines and get some of your customers when your attention was divided.

In a town the best policy for a merchant seems to be that of announcing "special" lines or regular lines, when the latter, by the price you are able to sell them at, or by the quality of your stock, deserve attention. When there ordinarily appears to be nothing to say about a regular line of goods, you may ingeniously discover some point worth mentioning, something about the packing, shipping, manufacture, etc.—that is the secret of profitable advertising. By thus occasionally advertising merchandise, for which there is a steady call, you have a rejoinder for any moves on the part of your competitors—cuts in prices, sales days, etc.—whereas if you had spent the same money on an advertisement having a solitary reference to an uncalled-for line, even though it was selling at a special figure, the other stores would, perhaps, have got the business by drawing the people's attention to a larger attraction. The uncalled for line can be advertised in the store and cost nothing.

While a grocer advertising in a city should be just as judicious in this respect as if he were advertising in a town, he can advertise on a broader basis, because of the dissimilarity of his trade, and because not being able to gauge his field as well as the town grocer, he must indulge in some problematic advertising. While a city grocer might turn over a nice business on goods that sell but sparsely in the country, he should have no more reason for advertising goods on which there is but a small profit—goods largely carried as accessories—than the town grocer, unless in either case it was advisable to clear out a stock.

After a grocer feels that he has weighed pretty well what he is chiefly called upon to supply to his patrons, he should next adapt his advertising to market days if he has a large country trade. Farmers generally peruse the papers the evening preceding the day they go to town. It is obvious that if your advertisement is to be effective it must be in the paper at the time when it will be most read. Of course, if you are able and have a reason to advertise every day this does not apply, outside of the fact that your advertisements should be especially strong on the evenings preceding market days.

The catalogue of E. D. Smith, Winona, comprises 128 pages of nicely-gotten-up matter on fruit and ornamental trees, set off with a tasty cover design. The catalogue opens with some valuable hints to planters, then passes on to descriptions of the chief fruits, the smaller fruits, miscellaneous fruits, and closes with the ornamental department. The details, which are alphabetically arranged, and in most cases double leaded, are clear and ample throughout. Illustrations adorn the pages. In the preparation of this catalogue Mr. Smith shows a thorough grasp of the subject and a full appreciation of the value of informative literature.

A NEW FIRM.

ATTENTION is called to the announcement in another column of Monteith, Nixon & Co., who have just opened a fully-equipped factory at the head of Macdonell avenue, Toronto, for the manufacture of office, warehouse and factory trucks.

In addition to the ordinary lines of these goods they also manufacture special lines of drying trucks, with steel or wood frames, and with glass or woden shalves, as may be required, which are of use in many manufacturing processes in the confectionery trade. They look forward to meeting the requirements of those who want trucks out of the ordinary for special purposes, and invite inquiries for these goods.

Both members of the firm are experienced in this trade, and can be depended on to satisfactorily fill any orders entrusted to them.

HINTS FOR HUSTLERS.

Show your clerks what hustle is by hustling yourself.

A smiling clerk is a better advertisement than a gilt sign.

A clean show window is a better trade drawer than a surplus stock of soap.

Unfailing politeness will do your store more good than daily bargain sales.

A bright gossipy handbill with some real bargains on it will do a lot of talking for you.

Remember that so far as your store and stock are concerned, your customers prefer cleanliness to Godliness.

Keep your promise to deliver goods on time. If you don't you will spoil some dinners and lose some good trade.

Never get wrathy either with customers or clerks. If you do you're sure to sour something.—From the Retailers' Journal.

THE U.S. RICE INDUSTRY.

THE rice industry of the United States is discussed by E. Seymour Bell, British commercial agent at Chicago, in a report to the British Foreign Office.

The report is of especial importance in view of the fact that the United States in 1904 became a rice exporting, instead of a rice importing nation, increasing her exports 50 per cent. and decreasing her imports 20 per cent., as compared with the transactions of the preceding year. In the calendar year 1904 the importations of rice into the United States amounted to 137 million pounds, as against 178 millions in 1903, a decrease of 41 millions; while the exports of rice (including the shipments to Hawaii and Porto Rico) were 138 millions, as against 92 millions in 1903. In 1903 the purchase of foreign-grown rice by the United States exceeded its sales of that staple abroad by 86 million pounds, whereas in 1904 the sales abroad slightly exceeded the importations of rice.

During the fiscal year 1899 the production was 250,280,221 pounds, the land under rice cultivation was 343,218 acres. This year it is calculated that the yield will be about 470,000,000 pounds, the land planted with rice being 643,400 acres. Notwithstanding this large increase it is still insufficient to meet the home demand.

"Before 1860 the rice production in the United States was practically limited to the alluvial lands of the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida and Louisiana. When labor conditions were altered after the civil war the production in the Eastern States decreased considerably. When machinery was adapted to rice production and it was discovered that the prairie lands of South-western Louisiana and Southern Texas, with their impervious subsoils, would dry before the rice harvest sufficiently to support machinery, there was a revolution in the rice industry.

"Fifteen years ago there was scarcely a barrel of commercial rice produced in what is now known as the prairie rice section of Texas, which extends 400 miles along the Gulf coast, and contains some of the most fertile lands on this continent. These lands were then valued at 25 cents to $1.50 per acre. To-day improved lands are worth on an average $12.50 per acre. Within the territory there are about 30 rice mills with a daily capacity of over 20,000 barrels of rice.

"By 1898 the canal and the deep-well system of irrigation had been satisfactorily tested, and the rice industry was rapidly extending along safe lines. At this date it was found that too large a percentage of the machine handled rice was liable to breakage in milling. The attention of the United States Department of Agriculture was called to this fact, and measures were immediately taken to remedy the defect and to overcome the difficulty by the introduction of new varieties. The department's work resulted in the introduction of a variety from Japan known as Kiushu, which has given very satisfactory results.

"The Kiushu variety is known for its short, thick kernels and thin hull. It takes on but little polish, and the percentage of bran is small.

"Japanese growers consider the following points important for the successful growing of rice:

"1. The seed should be pure bred, of even quality and size of grain.

"2. Any light or imperfect grains should be removed. This is done in Japan by soaking the seed rice in water several days till it is about ready to sprout, when it is thrown into salt water of 1.3 specific gravity and allowed to remain two minutes, being gently stirred meanwhile. The light grains will float, the others are removed, washed in cold water and planted. When a seed drill is to be used the damp seed it first dried by being rolled in the ashes of rice straw.

"3. Even sprouting of the grains is very essential to even ripening of the crop. This is accomplished by previously soaking the seed as above stated.

"The seed is sown in March and April. A later crop is sometimes sown in June. For this the white seed is used on account of early maturity.

"In a report issued by the Census Bureau, June 23, 1902, and covering 80 establishments, it is shown that since 1880 the number of rice mills in the United States increased 264 per cent., capital 363 per cent., and value of products 178 per cent. This report noted that the increase in Louisiana and Texas was very marked, their production having advanced from 75,753,856 pounds in 1890 to 179,919,203 pounds in 1900. The statistics indicated that the industry is being transferred from the South Atlantic States to Texas and Louisiana, and later reliable statistics have pointed out a continued change in this respect."

CEREAL NOTES.

The huge elevator of the Goderich Elevator and Transit Co., at Goderich, was destroyed by fire on Monday. The elevator was worked in conjunction with the G.T.R., and had about 320,000 bushels of grain stored in it at the time of the fire. It was valued at $130,000.

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

VACATION SPECIALTIES.

FOR Summer business many retailers are making a specialty of packages of cigars and tobacco suitable for taking away to the country or wherever the person is going to spend his holidays. Such packages, being put up for a specific occasion, are likely to arouse a real demand for them by their suggestiveness. The trouble with most tobacco departments lies just in that, that there is a monotony of display, and there is absolutely nothing to hold the attention. In nine cases out of ten a man buys tobacco because he goes into the store with that intention, not because it has been suggested to him.

Opportunities such as holiday occasions should be seized to brighten up the department. Special boxes of a smaller size than the ordinary fifty lot are dis- by many retailers with good effect. They catch the eye and are something out of the ordinary.

Special lines of pipes, too, may be stocked and sold at a close figure, thus familiarising your regular customers with the idea of buying their smoking supplies from you. A good pipe sold at a low figure is often the means of selling many a package of tobacco at a good fair profit.

Tobacco in quarter and half pound tins is good stock for holiday sales. Men become accustomed to particular brands, and when they a.. away for a week or two they can easily be persuaded to lay in a supply to cover their needs.

These are just some of the many possibilities of using the season to increase sales. No occasion should be overlooked for featuring special lines. That is the way to keep the department new and fresh. It is by having something new to show a man every time he comes into the store, or by showing the same things in novel, striking, and varied ways, that the grocer forces his customers to take an interest in this part of his store. It is worth the effort.

THE ORIGIN OF STOGIES.

"This species of cigar known as the Stogie," remarked a tobacconist, holding up one of those long, pencil-like rolls of tobacco known by that name, "had rather a curious origin. It is distinctly an American form of cigar making, and if it obtains in any other country was copied from our model.

"It was a good many decades ago, I think along about the time of the Revolution, that it came into being. There is a strong grade of Tobacco grown in Lancaster County, Pa., near Conestoga, and the town was virtually supported by the freightage business to Philadelphia. The teamsters on the Conestoga wagons were fond of smoking their native Lancaster tobacco, but found it difficult to manage pipes, teams and heavily laden wagons at the same time, so they took to rolling up the natural leaf in forms roughly similar to the Stogies of to-day.

"It was easy just to roll a few leaves together, twist them at the end, and the result made a smoke possible without much trouble, such as that attending the pipe. Gradually the rolls were better made, and soon the strong smoke of the teamsters came to be known in Philadelphia and in the west as far as Pittsburg.

"Men who liked such smokes began to place orders with the teamsters, and for want of a better name the cigars were known as Conestogas, which soon came to the abbreviation of 'stogas,' and the transition from that to 'stogie' was very easily made. The wagoners and Lancaster people generally called them 'rat tails' however, and by that name they are known in the county and town of their origin even to this day."

CIGAR MANUFACTURERS ASSIGN.

Maddocks Bros., cigar manufacturers, 246 Spadina avenue, Toronto, have assigned to J. P. Langley. The business, which was started some eighteen years ago by the father of the present members of the firm, had expanded in the hands of the sons, who had, however, insufficient capital to carry it on. They employed about twenty hands, and it is understood owe their workmen considerable back wages. The failure to meet the wage bill was one of the reasons for the assignment. No statement has been prepared by the assignee, but the trade liabilities are not likely to be heavy.

BLACK CIGARS NOT STRONG.

Probably there is not one smoker in a thousand who would not be surprised and, in fact, incredulous if he were told that the color of a cigar is absolutely no guide to its strength. Yet such is the case, and a fact well known to cigar manufacturers and importers, says the Tobacco Leaf. The belief of smokers that cigars of dark color are strong and those of a lighter shade are milder is, in point of fact, as fallacious as it is general. This is but one of many delusions harbored by consumers of tobacco, and which practical cigar men have smiled at and indulged from time immemorial.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS

SHIPPING of all descriptions is very active. Ocean, as well as lake tonnage is abundant and of very interesting proportions. The like and river rates have not changed, and business is first rate. On the outgoing ocean boats large grain cargoes continue to go forward, and the dairy produce is increasing every day. Hay is going forward in large quantities also, and the work of hay pressing as a business has received an impetus.

Large cargoes have been booked from Port William to Buffalo, and it is likely that copious quantities of these will come through Montreal. Provisions and frozen meats are also being shipped by the Laing Co. and other Canadians.

The South African service has not been short of Canadian produce, yet amazing quantities of American provisions and meats have gone through Montreal to Durban, Port Elizabeth and other South African destinations.

Peabody & Co. seem to be the large consignees for the American goods, and it is again a subject for wonderment that Canadians have not more agents on commission representing them in all the colonies.

The big Canadian flour mill companies continue to export their products, and ready sale is found for them.

A number of sailing ships are now in the Port of Montreal awaiting cargoes, principally lumber, for the United Kingdom, and some for the Argentine Republic.

These rates are for general information only, and are subject to change at any time without notice; it is therefore important that all contracts must be reported by wire and confirmation obtained before closing with shippers, and unless specifically stated to be prompt shipment, or shipped within ten days after date of contract from the west.

The above rates are exchanged on basis of $4.80 to £1 Stg., excepting that when freight is prepaid, the ocean proportion of the through rate must be col'ected on basis of $4.86 to the pound sterling.

If freight is offered other than specified above, on which steamship connections are accustomed to quote a weight or measurement rate at their option, prompt replies will be facilitated by giving, when applying for rate, the relative weight and measurement of the merchandise.

It is understood that when reporting Sack Flour engagements, a carload is considered 28,000 lbs.

It is also important that shipper's name be given for every engagement made.

TWO GREAT EVILS.

OVERMEASURE and overweight are difficult to control in every store, says an exchange.

The statement is true, and the merchant needs to be on the lookout all of the time for these deviations from good business rules. Many people who lack good sense and good principle are forever tempting the clerk to do the wrong thing.

They ask him for overweight and overmeasure as a premium for their business. Once they find that he will succumb to the temptation they give him to understand that he is holding their trade because he is more liberal than others in the store.

There are many small people who think that an extra quarter yard or an ounce or two overweight is worth walking around the block after.

You have seen them in your store. They hang around until some certain clerk can wait on them. He is the clerk who gives the down weight and an extra measure.

Watch for those weak spots? When you find them, handle the situation diplomatically. You can handle it so as to drive the grafting trade away from the store, or you may be able to handle it so as to hold these customers.

But above all things drive overweight and overmeasure out of your store system. Here is where constantly coaching the clerks will accomplish a great deal.

"ENTERPRISE" PAYS

The buzz of customers—the ring of the cash register—the clink of coin increase in a grocery store that is Enterprising in methods and equipment. An "Enterprise" Electrically Driven Coffee Mill decreases expense, increases business. A novelty a few years ago, now a necessity in every grocery. :: :: :: :: :: ::

The illustration shows our mill No. 83 fitted with ¼ H.P. motor, furnished for either direct or alternating current. It is 30 inches high, 22 inches long, 14 inches wide and weighs 115 pounds.

The nickel-plated hopper has a capacity of 4 pounds of coffee. It will granulate 1 pound of coffee a minute or pulverize ¼ pound a minute. Each machine is equipped with pulverizing grinders and can be regulated for fine or coarse grinding while running.

We will be pleased to send prices and practical suggestions; also our catalogue showing complete line of Mills, Food Choppers and other "Enterprise" grocers' specialties.

IF VINEGAR WAS USED to a large extent in the household, there would have been a tremendous uprising when acid vinegar had sway. The small consumption by each person saved this vinegar from the fate it deserved, until pure fruit vinegar came as the result of the best researches and the most stern tests, to show that the human system was being shattered by adulterations.

GOLDEN RUSSET BRAND

was the pure fruit vinegar that came—came to stay. Its consumption increases every year—but never a complaint. Where do you stand?

"THE FAIRBANK PLAN"

LOOK INTO IT

.and see just what "The Fairbank Plan" is. While we spend hundreds of thousands of dollars every year advertising the six great Fairbank specialties:

Gold Dust Washing Powder
Fairy Soap, Copco Soap
Fairbank's Glycerine-Tar Soap
Fairbank's Scouring Soap

and educating the public regarding them; and while we intend to continue doing this, we realize fully that advertising alone has not accomplished the splendid results we have enjoyed in the sale of these goods, but that "the man behind the counter" has been an important factor in extending and increasing our trade. It was the realization of this fact that gave birth to "The Fairbank Plan," as a method of rewarding the retail clerks for their earnest co-operation in selling these goods and, consequently, a portion of our immense advertising appropriation is now set aside for the recognition of the dealer and his clerks.

"The Fairbank Plan" is an absolutely fair method of rewarding the clerk in direct proportion to the interest displayed in pushing the six specialties, as each package of these goods is couponed in such a manner that the coupon can be easily removed before the goods pass into the hands of the consumer. For these coupons we offer many valuable articles.

If you will send for an illustrated premium list of "The Fairbank Plan" it will convince you that this is no cheap trading-stamp scheme.

Winnipeg as a Wholesale Centre

IT is a commonplace to indulge in high-flown generalities concerning the wonderful growth of Winnipeg during recent years as a wholesale distributing centre for Western Canada, and it is not the intention of the present article to repeat a multitude of platitudes and generalities which are now as an oft-told tale. At this day no one doubts the prosperous present and still more roseate future of Winnipeg and the great fertile prairie country lying west of the lakes. It is no longer fashionable to doubt it; the westerner is outdone in his praises of the newer Canada by the eastern man, who probably knows the country only by hearsay. Business men in all parts of Canada are looking to the west for the expansion of their trade, and the interests of the country west of the lakes occupy about three-quarters of the time of the Dominion Parliament. It is not necessary to occupy any valuable space explaining in a general way the wealth and potentialities of the west.

But, while no one now is brave enough to cast any doubts upon the prosperity and bright prospects of Winnipeg, it is nevertheless the case that very few visitors on their first arrival in Winnipeg are prepared to see the immense warehouses in which the merchant princes of the western city transact their business. The man from Montreal or Toronto who pays his first visit to Winnipeg is not prepared to find warehouses as large as those he has known in the large eastern cities and many that are larger. He is not prepared to find in a city of about 80,000 inhabitants serving a country whose population is not much in excess of one half million, warehouses larger than he has known in eastern cities of larger population serving a constituency with a much larger population. But this is exactly what he finds. In spite of all that he has heard the reality surprises him

Aim of This Article.

This article attempts to sketch the history of the leading jobbing and manufacturing firms of Winnipeg, and to show by illustrations to what proportions the Winnipeg firms have grown. Winnipeg's business history is yet in the making and there are few firms here which have been in business in Winnipeg for twenty years. The number who have commenced doing business in Winnipeg or have built large warehouses during the last four or five years is astonishing. New establishments are being opened out with astonishing rapidity, and the number of eastern firms sending representatives to Winnipeg and establishing branch warehouses and sample rooms to cater to the western trade is legion.

Nevertheless there are few indications of a boom; the rapid growth of Winnipeg as a commercial and distributing centre rests upon solid foundations. It is true that a number of firms have built beyond their present requirements, but he is a foolish business man in Winnipeg who does not provide for future expansion. At the present moment Winnipeg is the undisputed distributing centre for the people of the most fertile and largest continuous wheat belt in the world. It is true that only a small portion of this wheat area is yet under cultivation, but immigrants are pouring in by the thousands every season to take up free Government lands and every new arrival means a new customer to be supplied from Winnipeg or the east. Undoubtedly there will be other jobbing centres in the west, but Winnipeg, having been first in the field, should maintain the first place. Her relative importance as a commercial centre is shown by the fact that she ranks third in Canadian cities in clearing-house returns.

Few Manufacturing Industries.

A glance through the pages that follow will show that there are as yet very few manufacturing industries in Winnipeg. The prairie city is, as yet, essentially a distributing centre, handling the manufactured products of eastern cities and outside countries. That this will always be the case no person believes, and already there are a number of prosperous manufacturing plants. The chief drawback is the absence of cheap power. Power generated from coal costs relatively so much more in Winnipeg than in the east that manufacturers hesitate to locate here. At the present time the city council and the most enterprising business men are looking for a solution of the difficulty in the water power available at the Winnipeg River, between sixty and seventy miles distant from Winnipeg. It is urged by those who have studied the situation that, contrary to the popular opinion, Winnipeg occupies one of the most commanding positions of any manufacturing centre in the country, and that it will be the fault of Winnipeg's citizens if the advantages of cheap water power are not realized.

Water Power.

In a paper by Mr. Chas. Esplin, who has made a personal examination of the Winnipeg River and has given the whole power question a careful study, the situation is reviewed at length. The commonly accepted data show the elevation of the Lake of the Woods to be 1,042 feet. The elevation of Lake Winnipeg is 710 feet, and the total fall of the Winnipeg River from the Lake of the Woods is consequently 332 feet. The portion of the river in which Winnipeg business men are most keenly interested because of its potentialities as a source of cheap power is near the Big Bonnet Falls. In a distance of less than six and one half miles from the head of the Big Bonnet Falls to the foot of Silver Falls the river drops over 94 feet and in that distance there are three principal groups of falls. The first is Big Bonnet Falls, with a drop of over 35 feet; the second is White Mud or Electra Falls, with a drop of 13½ feet, and the third is Silver Falls, with a drop of over 22 feet.

It is estimated by power experts that the Big Bonnet Falls will easily yield 390,000 horse-power, that the Electra Falls will yield 227,000 horse-power, and that the Silver Falls, if improved, will yield additional 227,000 horse-power, or a total of 884,000 horse-power within 6½ miles.

That is, within 65 miles of Winnipeg, an enormous amount of water power is going to waste and is available for use in Winnipeg if advantage be taken of the situation of the city. It is estimated that this amount of power is equal to that which can be obtained from 7,000,000 tons of coal per year.

The river at the points in question is about half a mile wide. It contains not only the water from the region drained by the Lake of the Woods and its tributaries, but also another volume of water about twice as great, from the region drained by the English River and its tributaries. Sixty feet is not an uncommon depth and the volume of water is not less than 7,000,000 cubic feet per second. While several hundred thousand horse-power can be developed there, the total amount of horse-power used in the manufactures of Toronto is about 150,000 horse-power.

It is unnecessary to dwell upon the possibilities which access to such power opens to Winnipeg industries. The development of the water power of the Winnipeg River and of the St. Andrew's Rapids on the Red will mean a revolution in the industries of Winnipeg. In addition to being the distributing centre for the west Winnipeg will also be its manufacturing centre.

Gordon, Ironside & Fares.

This is a firm with a more than national reputation, and, although its beginnings were in the west and the west is still the source of its supplies, yet with stockyards in Montreal, with facilities for handling their own cattle in Liverpool and Birkenhead and with cold storage plants in various Canadian towns, Gordon, Ironside & Fares are much more than an ordinary Winnipeg firm. It is, however, in the packing facilities and packing house business of the firm that readers of The Canadian Grocer will be most interested, and that is a Winnipeg industry.

In 1891 the firm were known as Gordon & Ironside, and headquarters were in Manitou and Pilot Mound. In 1896 Mr. Fares was admitted to partnership and the firm became known under its present name. Two years later the present extensive plant was built in Winnipeg, and the history of the firm since then has been one of rapid progress. Branches with cold storage plants have been established in Rainy River, Kenora (Rat Portage), Fort William, Port Arthur and Sault Ste.

Marie. These are all supplied with dressed and cured meats from the central establishment in Winnipeg.

The Winnipeg plant is one of the most complete and up-to-date in Canada and the products of the firm are sold in all parts of the country.

Warehouse Foley, Lock & Larson.

Foley, Lock & Larson.

It is hard to realize that the firm of Foley, Lock & Larson date their existence only since January 1, 1903; hard because of the immense warehouse in which they carry their stock, and hard because of the ramifications of their business throughout the entire west. Foley, Lock & Larson are the successors of Lock Bros., who for two or three years before the formation of the present firm carried on a fruit and produce business. Lock Bros. started in a small way in the Oddfellows' Block, on Princess street, conducting a fruit and produce trade. From there they moved to Bannatyne street east, where they remained until a move was made into their present quarters. In the meantime the firm of Foley, Lock & Larson was formed, its members being Foley Bros., St. Paul railway contractors and wholesale grocers; T. H. Lock, J. A. Lock, W. G. Lock, A. S. Lock and Peter Larson, railway contractor, of Helena Mont.

The present building on Market street was built in 1903 and the firm moved into it in October of that year. At the present time they are building immediately to the east of their warehouse a big confectionery and biscuit plant which will be completed, it is hoped, before the snow flies. The building will have a frontage of 216 feet, a depth of 100 feet, and will be five storeys high with a basement. The combined warehouse and confectionery plant will probably be the largest building of its kind in Canada. The firm are also building on James street a warehouse 50x100 feet for the storage of heavy goods, such as salt, sugar and syrups.

The rapid growth of this firm is a splendid example of what may be accomplished by push, energy and capital in the Canadian west. Although a new firm, Foley, Lock & Larson occupy a foremost place among the wholesale grocery firms of the west. They have ten travelers in the country and four in the city.

J. Y. Griffin & Co., Limited.

It was in 1880 that this firm established the first pork packing business in the Canadian west. At that time dressed hogs only were handled and there was no system of refrigeration or cold storage. Methods were not then what they are now and appliances in general use and employed by this firm now were primitive when compared with the plant now in operation. Hog products, butter, eggs and cheese were all handled in one ordinary warehouse.

In 1886 a step in advance was made when the company erected a new pork packing plant with a daily capacity of 250 hogs, and in this plant the company made their first use of ice for chilling and storage rooms.

The steady growth of the west was the underlying reason for the growth of this pioneer packing industry and the year 1898 saw a big expansion while the intervening years have been one continued story of rapid growth. In 1898 the plant was doubled in size and the daily capacity was now 500 hogs. Mechanical refrigeration was installed for the chill rooms and butter, egg and cheese rooms. Branches were also established in that year in Vancouver and Nelson, B.C. In 1902 the plant was again enlarged making the daily possible capacity 1,000 hogs. The use of ice was discontinued and the mechanical refrigeration system was extended throughout all the storerooms. In 1904 a branch was established at Calgary and the killing of cattle and sheep at the Winnipeg plant was commenced.

At the present time further extensions are contemplated to be made next year which will nearly double the present plant. Distributing warehouses will also be established in the near future at Rat Portage (or as it must now be known, Kenora), Fort William, Rainy River and Sault Ste. Marie. Evidently the history of the company is still to be one of rapid growth.

Nicholson & Bain.

Nicholson & Bain are the successors of Henderson & Bull, a firm of commission merchants who will be remembered by those Rho have been in the trade a few years. Mr. Nicholson came to Winnipeg in the days of "the boom" in 1882, and commenced to work for Henderson & Bull. Mr. Bull retired in 1888, the firm then becoming W. F. Henderson & Co., and Mr. Nicholson retained his connection with it. When Mr. Henderson died in 1896, Mr. Nicholson succeeded to the business, and in January, 1903, when it took Mr. Bain into partnership, the firm became known under its present name of Nicholson & Bain.

In 1904 the first step in a policy of expansion was taken by the opening of a branch in Calgary under the name of Nicholson, Bain & Johnson, the firm holding the same agencies at that point as in Winnipeg. Property has been secured in Calgary and a large, modern warehouse will be built there this year. It is the intention of the firm to start a branch in Vancouver, and they are also considering the advisability of opening in Montreal.

Warehouse Nicholson & Bain.

The large Winnipeg warehouse, which was built in 1898, affords accommodation for an extensive stock. It is a three-storey building with a basement, the dimensions being 66x72.

It would be impossible within the limits of available space to enumerate all the agencies of this firm, but the following are among the firms whom they represent: Canada Jute Co., Limited, Montreal, bags, twine, Hessians; Edwardsburg Starch Co., Cardinal, Ont., starches, syrups, glucose; Truro Condensed Milk and Canning Co., Truro, N.S., condensed milk, evaporated cream; Rosenberg Bros. & Co., San Francisco, California dried fruits; Anglo-British Columbia Packing Co., Vancouver, canned salmon; Flavelle Limited, Lindsay, honey, eggs, cheese, butter; Diamond Elevator and Milling Co., Minneapolis, cornmeal, rye flour, etc.; Dow & Curry, Pilot Mound, Man., rolled oats, pot and pearl barley; Wallaceburg Sugar Co., Limited, Wallaceburg, Ont., sugars; John Sealy, St. John, N.B., canned, smoked and dried fish; Funston Dried Fruits and Nuts Co., St. Louis, nuts; Postum Cereal Co., Battle Creek, Mich., "Grape Nuts" and "Postum"; Peek Bros. & Co., London, Eng., teas and spices; J. B. Stringer & Co., Chatham, beans; Mahler Bros., Chatham, evaporated apples; California Fruit Canners' Association, San Francisco, dried and canned fruits; Campbell Fruit Growers' Union, San Jose, Cal., dried fruits; Manitoba Canning Co., Limited, canned meats; Sugars Limited, Montreal, maple sugar and maple syrup; New York Coffee Co., London, roasted coffees; Evans, Coleman & Evans, Vancouver, canned salmon; Cudahy Packing Co., South Omaha, canned meats, smoked meats, lard; F. W. Fairman Co., Limited, Hamilton, meats and lard.

Campbell Bros. & Wilson.

Campbell Bros. & Wilson are the successors of Sutherland & Campbell, who commenced a wholesale grocery business in Winnipeg in the "boom" days of 1882, from which so many Winnipeg firms date their early beginnings. The firm were then located on Princess street, on the corner immediately north of their present building. Jas. Sutherland died in 1885, but the business was still conducted under the old name of Sutherland & Campbell until 1900, when R. R. Wilson was admitted to the firm and the name then became Campbell Bros. & Wilson. The members of the firm as at present constituted are R. J. Campbell, W. J. Campbell and R. R. Wilson.

The present commodious and handsome warehouse illustrated herewith was built in 1903, and within recent years a branch has been opened in Calgary. The firm and its brand of "Royal Shield" goods are no strangers to the western trade from Winnipeg to the coast.

Western Packing Co. of Canada, Limited

This large packing house firm was organized in 1902, and in that year their large and up-to-date plant was built. They are situated on Logan avenue west, not far from the new C.P.R. shops, and they have excellent track facilities for the prompt shipment of their output. The packing house plant is up to date in every respect, being equipped with an excellent refrigerator system and all the latest conveniences.

H. V. Kobold is president of the company, and R. M. McLeod is secretary-treasurer.

Bright & Johnston.

The wholesale fruit firm of Bright & Johnston was formed in 1896 by the partnership of A. Bright and K. J. Johnston. Mr. Bright was formerly a wholesale grocer and Mr. Johnston was a city traveler. The business was opened on Princess street and two years later in 1898 the firm bought the block in which they are now located. In 1903 they built a large new block adjoining their present premises into which they have not yet moved. The firm do a large wholesale business in fruits, and have a good connection throughout the west.

Gallagher, Holman, La France Co.

This is a new packing firm formed by the amalgamation of a number of other firms whose names have been well known in the west for many years. Perhaps what may be called the parent firm was founded in tne Spring of 1880 and it was known as P. Gallagher & Son. In 1902 this firm were incorporated, and in 1904 they amalgamated with the Holman Meat Co., and the firm name was changed to Gallagher, Holman, LaFrance Co. Although the original firms have been in business for many years, the firm is practically a new one and the up-to-date packing establishment which has been erected is only now in shape to run at its full capacity. The plant is situated on Logan avenue west, not far from the C.P.R. shops, and the management have spared no efforts to equip it with the latest appliances. The cured meats branch of the business has only been commenced. An abattoir was built about three years ago and operated for one year. Then big extensions were decided upon and the new plant is scarcely completed yet. With its own refrigerating plant and all the most modern devices of a packing house, the firm are in position to do an increasing business if the Northwest farmers will supply the necessary hogs.

Macnab & Roberts.

Development is an old story in the west, but a good example is furnished by the growth of the firm of Macnab & Roberts, who commenced as commission merchants and are now doing a large and rapidly-increasing business as a wholesale house. J. C. Macnab commenced in 1897 as a commission agent for grocers' and confectioners' specialties, and two years later was joined by William Roberts. Business was commenced on Main street and later premises were rented from Bright & Johnson on Bannatyne avenue. From there the firm moved to the old Balfour Block on Rorie street, but the increasing demands of their business made larger quarters necessary, and in 1903 the contract was let for the present building. Removal was hastened by a fire in the Summer of 1903.

Their present warehouse is five storeys high and its dimensions 40x105 feet. Recently the commission part of the business has been dropped and the firm now buy their goods outright and do a jobbing business in grocers' specialties.

Scott, Bathgate & Co.

Scott, Bathgate & Co. are the successors of Scott, Peter & Co., who commenced a general manufacturers' agency business in Winnipeg eight years ago. When Mr. Peter retired from active business two years ago, the firm became Scott, Bathgate & Co., its members being A. E. Scott and J. L. Bathgate. The best evidence of the growth of their business is the fact that they have decided to erect a five-storey building on the corner of Notre Dame avenue and Victoria street. Their present location is on Princess street.

Dingle & Stewart.

Dingle & Stewart commenced business in Winnipeg six years ago, their first location being on Market street. From Market street they removed to Portage avenue and in 1903 they built their present substantial warehouse on Stanley street. This is a solid brick structure two storeys in height, dimensions 50x100. They have excellent track facilities on the premises and hence are able to handle large quantities of goods with ease. They do a storage business for eastern manufacturers and recently have undertaken to act as distributors for eastern firms. For example, a traveler for an eastern house comes west and sells a great many small lots of goods. His firm make up a carload and ship to Dingle & Stewart who distribute the small orders among a great many customers.

Dingle & Stewart are exclusive western agents for the following firms: McCormick Mfg. Co., London, Ont.; Pure Gold Mfg. Co., Toronto, Ont.; Chase & Sanborn, Montreal, Que.

The A. Macdonald Co.

A wholesale grocery business unique in the character of its business methods is the A. Macdonald Co. Probably there is no other wholesale house in Canada conducting its business by the same methods. This house employs no commercial travelers and conducts its business on strictly cash principles. All accounts must be settled with the A. Macdonald Co. within 30 days; in a country where the credit system is so prominent and harmful they manage to do a large business without extending any credit. They communicate with the trade by means of fortnightly price lists which are sent to all western grocers. The business was commenced 17 years ago, and has grown steadily, large branch warehouses being now established in Kenora (Rat Portage), Ont.; Edmonton, N.W.T.; and Vancouver and Nelson, B.C.

Park Packing Houses.

Only one thing prevents a much greater development of the pork packing industry of Winnipeg than has yet been attained and that is the scarcity of the necessary hog. The western farmer is devoting nearly all his attention to wheat and is neglecting the growth of the packers' necessary raw material. The present packing plants could handle many more hogs than at present they can obtain in the west and, were the supply greater than the present facilities of the packers could take care of, their plants could easily be extended. There is no trouble in finding a market as the export demand is greater than the supply. There has been, however, a marked improvement during the last three or four years in the situation described. The hog supply is increasing and the quality is better.

Porter & Co.

Porter & Co. have a large wholesale glass and crockery establishment at 368 and 370 Main street. They do a large business in the west.

Kenneth, McKenzie & Co.

Kenneth McKenzie & Co. can date the beginnings of their business from the year 1870, as they are the successors of W. H. Lyon, who in that year commenced a retail grocery business in Winnipeg. In 1877 the business was changed from retail to wholesale, and about that time became known as Lyon, McKenzie & Powis. In the intervening years it was known as McKenzie, Powis & Co., and finally as Kenneth McKenzie & Co. The firm were at one time located at the corner of Main and McDermott on the site of the present C.P.R. ticket office. Later they were in business in the building which has recently been vacated by the Manitoba Free Press. They have been in their present location some 10 or 12 years.

Kenneth McKenzie & Co. have a reputation among the western trade for sane conservative business methods.

Herbert J. Boyd.

Herbert J. Boyd transacts a general import commission and manufacturers' agency business at 137 Bannatyne avenue. His principal line is wholesale crockery.

Mason & Hickey.

This is one ol the younger firms, dating its existence since October 1, 1904. Its members are: H. J. Hickey and L. P. Mason, and each of these gentlemen has had a long experience in the grocery business. Mr. Mason was for a number of years with F. F. Dalley & Co., of Hamilton, Ont., and for 14 years Mr. Hickey traveled for Lucas, Steele & Bristol. The firm represent a number of strong eastern concerns and carry a stock for them in their commodious warehouse on Princess street. The following are the firms which they represent: Brantford Starch Co., Brantford; E. D. Smith, Winona; Gorman, Eckert & Co., London; Ingersoll Packing Co., Ingersoll; Diamond Crystal Salt Co, St. Clair, Mich.

Codville & Co.

One of the oldest wholesale grocery houses in Winnipeg is that of Codville & Co. The firm was organized in 1870 in the City of Quebec and was known then as Thompson, Codville & Co., its members being Jas. Thompson and J. J. Codville. The west did not offer the same inducements to business men that are found to-day, but this Quebec firm had faith in the future of the Canadian prairie country at a time when it was not the fashion to indulge in optimistic transports over the possibilities of a country that was then an unknown wilderness. The western market was not very large, but in 1880 Thompson, Codville & Co. opened a branch in Winnipeg, and their foresight has been rewarded by a steady growth in their business. The firm continued under the name of Thompson, Codville & Co. until 1899 when, on the death of Jas. Thompson, the name was changed to Codville & Co. the members being J. J. Codville and William Georgeson.

In 1900 the firm moved to their present commodious premises on Bannatyne avenue, which are illustrated herewith, and two years later they built a large coffee and spice factory and gave it an up-to-date equipment. It has since become one of the most important factors of their business.

The firm now employ about 100 hands in their Winnipeg warehouse and factory and they have established branches at Brandon and Calgary, thus being in an exceptionally good position to handle the western trade. At Calgary they have built one of the handsomest warehouses in the west.

Warehouse Codville & Co.

Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited.

Closely associated with the history of Western Canada is the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited, which have played such a prominent part in the handling and disposing of the western crop. To say nothing of their immense interests in other parts of Canada, the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co. have a mammoth mill in Winnipeg on Higgins avenue. Their offices are at 267 Alexander avenue. Wm. A. Black is western manager of the company; Thos. Williamson is local manager, and William Campbell is assistant manager.

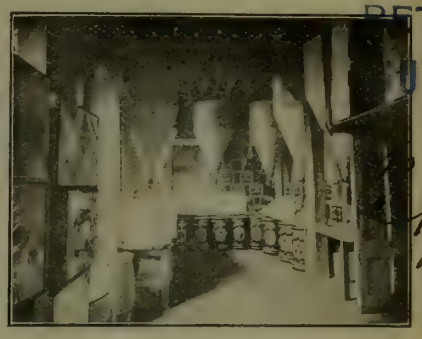
The Lake of the Woods Milling Co. have offices in Winnipeg at 212 McDermot avenue, and from these offices they handle their western business. Geo. V. Hastings is general superintendent and manager at Winnipeg.

The White Star Manufacturing Co.

This firm, which is the successor of the Dyson-Gibson Co., was the outcome of the first milling baking powder plant in the Canadian west. It does a large business in baking powder, spices, coffees, jellies and jams, and makes a specialty of pickles made from vegetables grown in the west. Last year 180,000 lbs. of cauliflower were used in the manufacture of pickles and two lbs. of cucumbers were used to one of cauliflower. R. Kay is president of the company.

The Dyson Co.

The Dyson Co., which succeeded the Dyson-Gibson Co., was formed in March, 1902. This company are manufacturers of "Red Cross" baking powder, flavoring extracts, pickles, vinegar and jobbers of many lines of spices, coffees, etc. Their factory is situated on Higgins avenue, one of the busiest of Winnipeg's business thoroughfares. The president and manager of the company is David J. Dyson; vice-president, J. D. Windrum; treasurer, Thos. Jeffreys.



Coffee Packing Room, Codville & Co.

Crook, Brown & Co.

Crook, Brown & Co. commenced a wholesale tea business in Winnipeg one year ago. The members of the firm, H. E. Crook and A. G. Brown, have been engaged in the tea business in England for a number of years, and Mr. Brown was at one time buyer in Colombo for a leading English house. Their place of business in Winnipeg is at the corner of Princess street and McDermot avenue.

Blackwoods, Limited.

Blackwoods Limited are one of the oldest manufacturing firms in the west, as their business was founded in 1882. At that time the business was confined to soda water manufacture, but since that date it has expanded to include a large pickling and vinegar plant. Pickles and vinegar are sold by this firm throughout the entire west, and their soda water goes as far east as Montreal. Sauces, fruit syrups and aerated waters of this firm's manufacture are sold in the east as well as in the country west of the lakes. Wm. Blackwood is president of the company and N. W. Bradstock is secretary.

E. H. Briggs & Co.

E. H. Briggs & Co. are a wholesale jobbing firm in woodenware and grocers' sundries. They are manufacturers of brooms, brushes and whisks. Their place of business is at 312-320 McDermot avenue, where they will be glad to welcome visitors during the Exhibition.

J. Brown & Co.

J. Brown & Co. commenced their packing business in Winnipeg in 1888, their first warehouse being in the building which is now the Winnipeg Opera House. Their new premises on Princess street, into which they have recently moved from their location on Alexander avenue, are well adapted to the requirements of an up-to-date packing business. As is the case with the other packing houses, no difficulty is found in marketing the product.

The W. J. Guest Fish Co.

It was in 1890 that W. J. Guest commenced his fish business, and until the Spring of this year he conducted a wholesale and retail business on Main street. A couple of months ago he sold out the retail end of his business and decided to devote all his attention to the wholesale department. A new four-storey building is to be erected at the foot of Alexander street, where the best shipping facilities can be secured. Mr. Guest's connection with the Northern Fish Co. puts him in a good position to secure ample supplies of the best fish.

Telfer Brothers.

The story of this firm illustrates the common experience of eastern business houses which find their western business fast overtaking in importance the parent business in the east. For perhaps 20 years travelers sold biscuits in the Northwest for Telfer Bros., of Collingwood, Ont., but it was not until the Factory and Warehouse, Telfer Bros.

Spring of 1902 that an office was opened in Winnipeg and a stock carried in a warehouse on Elgin avenue. In 1904 the present five-storey building was erected, in itself an evidence of the growth of the company's western business.

F. F. Telfer and H. T. Telfer are the members of the firm.

G. F. & J. Galt.

The name of G. F. and J. Galt is connected with "Blue Ribbon" teas, baking powder and spices and also with a general grocery business. It was in the early days of the city in 1882 that a general wholesale business was established in Winnipeg by G. F. and J. Galt. They were first located in the old Gerry Block and later they moved to Princess street. There present building was erected in 1887 and enlarged in 1904. In addition to their grocery warehouse they have a large spice mill and manufacturing department on King street. Branches of the business have been established in Calgary and Prince Albert, and there are tea packing establishments in Winnipeg, Vancouver and Calgary, in addition to the Blue Ribbon Tea Co.'s plant in Toronto.

Paulin-Chambers Co., Limited.

A biscuit and confectionery firm which dates its existence since 1876 is among the oldest of the business establishments of the Prairie City. The present firm of Paulin-Chambers Co., Limited, is the successor of the old-time firm of Chambers Bros., who in 1876 commenced the biscuit business in premises on Main street nearly opposite the present Strathcona Block. The western market was limited in its buying capacity in those early days and it required courage and enterprise to induce men to invest their money in an enterprise of the kind. As the west grew slowly the business kept pace with its progress, and in 1882 a frame building was erected on Ross street, not far from the present site of the company. About a year later the business of Chambers Bros. was acquired by the Paulin-Chambers Co., but it was not until 1899 that the present joint stock company was formed. In that year also the present large factory was built and the history of the company in the years of plenty and prosperity which have followed has been one of steady growth and material progress.

The president of the company is J. H. Chambers; the vice-president, W. H. Paulin, and the secretary and general manager is L. C. Macintyre, who for so many years has acted as treasurer of the Northwest Commercial Travelers' Association.

John Marrin Co., Limited.

In Western Canada there are few old firms, but the name of this firm is familiar to the old-timers, who remember a retail grocery business of the name which was conducted at the corner of Main and St. Mary streets. The wholesale business was founded in 1899 by Philip Marrin, Thos. Jobin and J. J. Tomlinson. With the expansion of the west this firm of wholesalers, who have developed a retail business to the wholesale stage, are receiving a good share of the growing western demand.

Manufacturers' Agents.

To attempt to enumerate all the manufacturers' agents in Winnipeg is a task beyond the scope of this article. Their name is legion, for almost every house of any importance in Eastern Canada, if it has not a branch in Winnipeg, is at least represented by an agent. In addition a great number of American houses and a few English are represented in Winnipeg by manufacturers' agents. In addition to the agents named already a few others might be mentioned: Buchannan & Gordon, Chas. Duncan, Jos. Carman, Ashley & Thompson, Jno. M. Scott, Geo. Adam & Co., Jos. E. Huxley, H. P. Peunock & Co., Bell & Armytage, W. L. McKenzie & Co., Stuart Watson, Reginald Lawson, R. B. Wiseman, C. J. Scandrett and J. A. Cheyne are all leading manufacturers'

Royal Crown, Limited.

As stated in the introduction, Winnipeg has few manufacturing industries, but at least one company, the Royal Crown Limited, have made for themselves a name in all parts of Canada. This big soap plant dates its existence from 1889, when it was started in a small way in a building 40x80 by Mr. M. Bull, the present president of the company. In course of time the present joint stock company was formed and as the business grew the plant was extended, more land being purchased and additional buildings being erected. At the present time the company occupy more than an acre of ground and have more than two acres floor space. A new three-storey brick building with a basement, dimensions 145x70 feet, is now almost completed and an expensive glycerine plant is being installed. The company are also adding to their equipment a new 80 h.p. boiler.

It has been the aim of the management to have a plant that is complete in all departments, and they therefore have their own printing plant and paper box factory, and manufacture all their own wooden boxes. Employment is given to about 100 hands in the factory.

"Royal Crown" soap is an article familiar to the western trade, and the company's "Witch Hazel" toilet soap and perfumes are being sold in all parts of the Dominion. Winnipeg has few manufacturing industries and fewer still which sell in the country east of the lakes, but the Royal Crown Limited is one whose products are used in all parts of Canada.

The president of the company is Mr. M. Bull; the vice-president is Mr. J. A. Mitchell; and the secretary-treasurer is Mr. Chas. L. Marks.

TWO POPULAR WESTERN TRAVELERS.

Mr. Geo. Lindsay.

MR. GEORGE LINDSAY, western representative for Hudon, Hebert & Cie, Montreal, whose portrait is published herewith, has now represented the house since September 20th, 1898, and during that time has covered the Prairie Province thoroughly and well. Mr. Lindsay, whose physique and constitution is one of the best seen on the road, has had the training of a healthy, outdoor life, having for many years tilled the soil in the west. He left the wheat lands and opened up a general store in Griswold, Manitoba, in which town he was postmaster for thirteen years. Being a man of active habits and a hustling disposition, he applied for and obtained in 1898 the position of traveler in Manitoba for Hudon, Hebert & Cie. Mr. Lindsay is acquainted with every foot and every town of the great wheat-growing province, and knowing the conditions of the land, its people and its requirements, he has secured to his firm a goodly share of the trade. Of a genial disposition and a hearty, friendly manner, he is a welcome salesman in all parts. His confidence in the future of his province is inspiring, and imbues one with the idea that things must be all right, because "George Lindsay says so."

Mr. Hugo Rohde.

Mr. Hugo Rohde, whose portrait appears herewith, is traveling representative for Hudon, Hebert & Cie, wholesale grocers Montreal, in the Northwest Territories and British Columbia. Mr. Rohde joined the staff of Hudon, Hebert & Cie in 1890, and has the distinction of being the first traveling salesman employed by the house. When Mr. Rohde took his samples out he was given "carte blanche" to go where he liked—to go out for orders. He opened up the ground in the Province of Quebec, then the Maritime Provinces, Ontario, Manitoba, and finally, some years ago, his present territory. As each new territory was in shape another salesman was put on the ground, until now some twenty-five travelers have followed in the footsteps of this grocery missionary.

In the strictest sense of the word, Mr. Rohde may be termed one of Canada's commercial missionaries, and it is due to his tact, his knowledge of the goods, and in a large measure to his linguistic abilities, that he has been able to successfully carry his firm's banner and motto "The most liberally managed house in Canada," from one end of Canada to the other. From a physical standpoint, Mr. Rohde can be judged as a worthy pioneer, tall, rugged, and well set up, with a quiet, unassuming though determined manner—his is a personality that appeals to a dealer's consideration. Mr. Rohde is a German and has his countrymen's characteristic working abilities. Master of five languages—English, French, German, Dutch and Danish—and equally at home in all of them, he is withal an unassuming gentleman, who has retained the respect and confidence, not only of his principals and associates, but his numerous customers, and it is safe to say that in his fifteen years on the road he has made many lasting friendships and customers.

business, and dealers are well satisfied with the outlook. Canned goods are selling freely, and stocks on hand are running low. Smoked meats continue very scarce, and there is only a limited supply of good stock on hand. Hams are quoted at 15 cents, roll bacon at 10 1-2 to 11c., and sides at 14 to 15c. The local supply of smoked meats is not sufficient for the demand. Receipts of butter are improving some, but they are far below the average for this season of the year. The local demand continues good, and considerable is being exported. Prices rule high. Creamery prints are quoted at 22 to 23c., creamery in boxes and tubs at 21 to 22c., and dairy tubs at 19 to 20c. Choice dairy butter on P. E. Island is quoted at 20 to 21 cents.

There has been a slight decrease in the receipts of eggs, and as a result the price keeps up. The demand continues good. Shipments from P. E. Island are falling off. In Halifax the price is firm at 18 cents, and on the Island they are quoted at 15 to 16 cents. It was thought that with the hot weather the price would decline, but such has not proved to be the case. Good sales of cheese are reported. There is very little of the local make on the market as yet, the milk being made into butter. Prices are steady at 11 1-2 to 12c.

Nova Scotia berries are coming in more freely, and they are crowding out the Ontario fruit. The price is declining with the increased receipts, Nova Scotia berries being quoted at 16 cents wholesale. Though the berry crop is reported to be short, a further decline in prices is looked for.

Good fruit finds ready sale. The market is still supplied with all seasonable kinds. Oranges are scarce, and the price high. Peaches are quoted at $2.25, plums from $2 to $2.75, bananas $2 to $2.50, and watermelons 50 cents. All the vegetables on the market are imported. Cabbage of poor quality is $2 a crate, new potatoes $3 per barrel, beans $1.75 per bushel, and tomatoes $1.50 per box.

Large stocks of molasses are still on hand, but the price is unchanged. Sugar continues firm, though there is a prospect of a slight decline in sympathy with the Montreal markets. Net prices here follows: Bright yellow (barrels), $4.85; XXX granulated, $5.05; Austrian granulated (bags), $4.95; No. 1 yellow (barrels), $4.55; unbranded yellow (barrels), $4.40. Flour and rolled oats are steady. The former is in good demand, but sales of rolled oats are dropping off.

According to advices received here, the farmers and gardeners of St. John's, Newfoundland, who this year went extensively into the cultivation of berries and other fruits, will meet with heavy losses, owing to the heavy frosts. Not one-half of the trees will bear fruit, owing to the exceptionally cold weather conditions in the month of June.

The demand for fish is light, and very little is being exported at the present time. The Lunenburg Spring bank catch has not yet been placed on the market, owing to unfavorable weather for curing. Advices to dealers here are to the effect that the markets of Brazil, Portugal, Porto Rico and Cuba are very much depressed. Quotations here are: Large shore cod, $5.75; medium, $5.25; haddock, $4.25, and pollock, $4. While the Newfoundland catch will be far below the average, the Norwegian catch is reported to be unusually heavy, and in view of this dealers are anticipating that prices will decline.

Make Change Without Loss

Mistakes that occur in making change are avoided by system. A customer gave this reason why she trades with Mr. Hardy:

"Mr. Hardy's National Cash Register counts the money that is taken in, and if a mistake is made in making change you can always have it corrected.

"I once made a 10-cent purchase and handed the clerk $5. He handed me 90 cents. I did not notice the error until I reached home. I called Mr. Hardy's attention to it and he opened his National Cash Register and balanced his cash. It showed that there were four dollars more in the drawer than called for by the sales record."

A National Cash Register accurately records each transaction, whether cash, credit, money received on account, money paid or money changed, and shows the clerk's initial.

Let our representative call and explain our system to you.

THE C.M.A. AT BIRMINGHAM.

(By Our Own Correspondent.)

Birmingham, 29th June, 1905.

THE visit of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association to Birmingham excited the keenest interest, and both our visitors and the large number of leading citizens that gathered to entertain them seemed to be most favorably impressed with one another. The visitors were formally welcomed by the Lord Mayor (Alderman Beale) in the Council House, but the great event of the day was the luncheon given by the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce at the Grand Hotel, in the course of which Mr. Chamberlain delivered a most inspiring forty minutes' speech upon Imperial interests and obligations. The right hon. member for the western division of the city was in his happiest mood. While pre-eminently a business address, urging, as few like Mr. Chamberlain can urge, the duty of Imperial commercial intercourse and mutual concessions for the general weal, it was interspersed with the happiest banter as to British parochialism, and the need for thinking imperially upon international questions affecting the commercial relations of Canada and England. "Let us buy of one another" was the phrase Mr. Chamberlain submitted as an appropriate motto for his hearers, and the great British commercial communities on either side the water. Mr. McNaught made an admirable response, and his aspiration that the day was not far distant when trade would be reciprocal as well as preferential between Great Britain and the colonies, was received with great applause.

Mr. W. Kerr George, as president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, made a most spirited reply in response to the Lord Mayor's words of welcome in the Council House, and almost created a furore by the statement that those in whose name he spoke would co-operate in trying to work out some plan which might strengthen and make permanent for all time the bonds of sentiment that bound the widely-scattered portions of the Empire together, rather than build up and develop commercially antagonistic countries. That, he believed, was Mr. Chamberlain's policy, and if that was his aim, he thought he was safe in saying that he could offer to Mr. Chamberlain the practically unanimous support of the Canadian people.

When your countrymen return I think their visit to Birmingham will be found to be not the least pleasing of their recollections of their visit to the Motherland. Birmingham was certainly delighted with her Canadian guests.

The gradual absorption of the unemployed into the ranks of the workers shows that gradually, and it must be confessed only very gradually, is the trade of the district recovering itself. The memorable feature of this year's trading in the Midlands is certainly so far the expansion of the bicycle industry. The reduction of the standard price of good machines to eight pounds has been followed by an enormous demand, and it is anticipated that the balance sheets of the leading firms in Coventry, Birmingham, Redditch and Wolverhampton will prove most satisfactory reading for their very numerous and very patient shareholders.

To-day's iron market displays no new features.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Special Report from the Winnipeg Office of THE CANADIAN GROCER.

Quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, July 13th, 1905.

WARM Summer weather has had a stimulating effect upon many departments of the wholesale grocery trade, and has induced liberal buying. The salmon market is unsettled, as the season's price has not yet been arranged by the B.C. packers, and competition has hammered the price down to a point where there is nothing in it for the jobber, and one or two houses have decided to drop out of the game and wait until the market is on a settled basis. The Ottawa Budget speech was not awaited with much interest, as few changes were expected. However, the change in the duty on rolled oats came as a surprise in many quarters, and the result is likely to be reflected in the price before long. "Prohibitive with a capital P" is the way one wholesale man described the duty in conversation with The Grocer. For an ad valorem duty of 20 per cent. has been substituted a specific duty of 60 cents per cwt., and the result will be to shut out the American product entirely. Sugar is steady at the moment at the price quoted last week, but the future of the market is so uncertain that buying is very light. New Orleans molasses is advancing, and higher prices are quoted this week.

Sugar—For the moment the price is steady at the price quoted last week, but the future of the market is so uncertain that buying is restricted to immediate requirements—a condition of affairs that is very inconvenient during the season of increased consumption. We quote:

" " in sacks	5 60

Canned Goods—The trade are much interested in the new prices of the Canadian Canners Limited. Prices of salmon are also very interesting, as the B.C. packers have not yet announced their season's price, and competition has forced salmon down to a very low figure. Jobbers claim that under present conditions there is no profit whatever in the salmon trade, and one or two of them have decided to drop out of the game for the present. We quote prices as last week:

INDEPENDENT PACKERS NOT IN THE COMBINE

Certain self-styled "independent" packers of canned goods seek to gain your sympathy, Mr. Grocer, and at the same time prejudice you against goods packed by the Canadian Canners, Limited, by advertising that they're "independent" packers and "not in the combine."

Now, what is a combine? Popularly defined it is a union formed to advance prices. A careful comparison of prices since the formation of the Canadian Canners with those ruling previous to that period, will show that the Canadian Canners' prices are materially lower on nearly every line, which is simply the following out of their policy, which has been, is and will be highest quality at lowest prices.

As a matter of fact, is it not the self-styled "independent" packers who are the advocates of high prices? Is not that the trend of their advertising in the CANADIAN GROCER? Is not that paper filled with their wailings because of the Canadian Canners' very low prices? The only possible deduction, therefore, is that the self-styled "independent" packers are really the combine, because it is they who advocate high prices; also as they depend on the Canadian Canners for their prices, they are the dependent packers. The Canadian Canners are the only independent packers.

Don't forget this important fact when ordering your canned goods, that you have low prices solely because the Canadian Canners make them.

The name Canadian Canners is a synonym for low prices.

The Canadian Canners not only make the prices but they set the standard of quality.

The name Canadian Canners is a synonym for quality.

Quality is the motto emblazoned in the process rooms of each of the thirty-five factories of the Canadian Canners, Limited.

The General Manager of the Canadian Canners is the man who has made the Aylmer Brand famous by reason of superior quality. He will devote all of his time during the packing season to visiting the various factories preaching and teaching quality.

The reputation of the Canadian Canners, Limited, th largest packers in the world of canned fruits and vegetables, is behind AYLMER, LOG CABIN, LITTLE CHIEF, HORSESHOE, AUTO, GRAND RIVER, KENT, LION, LYNN VALLEY, MAPLE LEAF, THISTLE, LAKEPORT BRANDS.

The seal of the Canadian Canners, Limited, appears on every label as a guarantee of quality.

If you wish to encourage highest quality and lowest prices in canned goods, confine your purchases exclusively to the products of the Canadian Canners.

N. B. Markets.

St. John, N.B., July 10, 1905.

ST. JOHN is having some splendid weather. The complaint is, it is almost too cool. For the tourist, however, coming from the hot inland cities, it must be delightful. The half-holiday is in full swing, so that not only is there no wholesale business, but there is little retail busness on Saturday after one o'clock. The retail grocers have not, however, seen their way to join the movement. Business is quite active; it is, however, somewhat between seasons. There has been a falling off in the price of lumber, which is unfortunate; our province has such large lumber interests. Prices show very little change, except in some few lines. The market is fairly firm. Except in sugar the past six months have shown rather profitable business. Rice is rather firmer. The somewhat higher prices have tended to cause cheaper grades to come on the market. This is unfortunate, as the price is still low, and the best is not too good. It also makes a rather unfair competition. Cream of tartar is perhaps easier.

Oil—There is but a limited output of buring oil at this season. The low price has, however, caused quite a lot of future business to be booked. In lubricating oils sales have been well maintained. Paint oil shows little change. Local price of linseed has been held lower than one would expect considering import price. Of late there has been some change in turpentine, but now full figures are asked. Receipts of cod oil so far very light. Prices, however, quite low. Some whale oil is offered.

Salt.—There are quite full stocks of Liverpool coarse salt and more regular arrivals than usual at this season, particularly of late years. The price is firmly held. Demand is quite active. There is a large sale to near-bye State of Maine ports, where there is a large business in the coming of herring and the packing of sardines. In fine salt the sale is largely for Canadian. As is usual, buyers are put to much disappointment by the delay in getting orders filled, particularly in cheese salt. The fact that there is now no competition does not improve the condition.

Canned Goods—Spot business is not large. While corn and tomatoes are firm, there is no change, and they seem to be more freely offered. The extreme low price at which new peas are quoted is somewhat discouraging to the trade, who are carrying quite a large stock of old goods. While new salmon will cost lower than present stocks, holders are not anxious, as there is a good, steady sale. Lobsters very high. New strawberries are quoted high. Meats unchanged. Domestic sardines will be a full pack, other lines as haddies and kippers light.

Dried Fruit—There is a light business. Except seeded, raisins are quite scarce. Loose muscatels hard to replace. Prunes are a light stock. New goods will act well above last year's figures. Evaporated apricots will be lower. Raisins except Valencias, not yet quoted. These are quite low for early shipment. Currants have a steady sale. Market supplied from New York. In peels, figs and dates orders for Fall have been largely placed. Figs lower than last year. Citron peel is higher. Evaporated apples more firmly held. In onions prices are low, particularly for Egyptian and Bermudas. New Valencias soon expected.

Sugar—The old stocks are getting well cleaned up. It has been chiefly a losing game since the first of the year. Dealers do not feel matters are yet settled, though it is thought there will be no immediate change.

Molasses—There are further arrivals of Porto Rico molasses, and there is quite a good stock now in store of new goods, as well as some old that was carried over. Prices quite low. The situation is one of some interest, and will be watched closely for the next few weeks. Barbadoes rather light stock.

Fish—The catch of salmon has continued good, and full prices have ruled. It has been a good season. Boston is our market for this line. All these fish are sold fresh. Fresh cod scarce, but a fair supply of haddock, which are preferred. Halibut are offered; mackerel are scarce. Dry cod continue very high. Very few pollock are seen. In boneless fish this is a quiet time, and dealers not anxious to push sales. New pickled herring offered, price high. Smoked still low.

Flour, Meal and Feed—In flour, just fair business; market quite firm; trade here limited to a few brands. Feed has light demand. Oats are high and hard to get. Market stocked in oatmeal, bought low. Present selling price about the same as millers' figures. At some points in the province they are less. Cornmeal unchanged. Beans are dull and prices rather lower. Peas and barley have but a limited sale.

FISH IN FANCY BOXES.

A REPRESENTATIVE of the Maritime Merchant has been writing up Lunenburg County, its people and its industries. Among others he speaks of the new factory established by Black Brothers at Getson's Cove. "Perhaps some of the old-timers may scoff at the idea of fish being done up in boxes and fancy paper cartons, and no doubt they think it absurd to have the bones pulled out before selling it. But this factory is going to change the ideas of the old-timers. The Lunenburg fishermen have been making their fish to feed a lot of white, colored and black people in the tropics, while many of our own Canadian people have lived and died without even having once tasted the cod—a fish far too good to send away for consumption, frequently by the poorest populations of the earth—at least, until we have a surplus after our own people have had all they should take for their own purposes.

"Going through the factory above mentioned the other day Mr. Troop pointed out a package of prepared codfish which is sold at retail for five cents. It was not one of the firm's better grades of fish manifestly, and not one of their best sellers; but the package contained enough fairly good fish to make a breakfast for a small family. When you come to think of all the people in Canada who would be glad to get a good breakfast for five cents, to say nothing of the millions of people elsewhere, you begin to realize something of the possibilities for the Lunenburg fishing industry. It doesn't require a great deal of imagination to picture, not one, but a dozen such factories as that of Black Brothers, doing a thriving business, within the next ten years."

John Sayre, general merchant, Buctouche, has offered to compromise and is closing business.

Conceit and Ability

ARE as far apart as the poles. Conceit promises much without the ability to fulfil. Allow us to demonstrate our ability to produce the best line of goods in America. Peas are now receiving particular attention. It is a ten to one shot many dealers will load up with old stock, no need to say what that quality is. We have installed the most modern machinery in the world for canning peas and we know how to operate the same. Now, with a technical knowledge and practical experience of more than 25 years' canning peas, does it not stand to reason that we are able to produce the nicest canned green peas in this or any country. No section of the world is so specially adapted to the growing of delicious peas as Canada ; and by our special process we know that the consumer will buy 10 cans of "Autumn Leaf Brand" Frankford canned peas to one of any other if you have them in stock. We put up six grades of peas and label every grade true to name. It is very important to know what you are buying. Cut the tins, see the clear appearance of the syrup, taste the peas ; note they are young and tender, canned the same day as picked. No need to wash or rinse our peas, but warm them up in the same syrup they are canned in and you will have as delicious a pea as is possible to get picked in your own garden. Again, we say, it is to both your own and customer's benefit that you should demonstrate the facts mentioned above. If your Jobber does not handle our goods get on the line with us.

PLEASANT AND PROFITABLE

Isn't it a pleasure to recommend anything that you are sure will "make good"—Celluloid Starch for instance.

We're all alike in our desire to have people pleased with us, with what we sell and with our way of doing business.

It is the only way to success in storekeeping.

It's profitable, too.

To sell a package of unsatisfactory Starch may make one customer less—of course it may not, but it tends that way.

The reputation of your store is made up of little items of satisfaction and dissatisfaction.

To sell a package of

CELLVLOID STARCH

Never Sticks—Needs no Cooking

is sure to make one customer a closer friend of yours than before; is sure to lay one more little brick in the good name that your store is building for itself in your neighborhood.

If it is the first time the lady has bought from you, you may be sure she'll come again for you've made a friend for the store.

We are doing everything we can to help you.

We have gone and are going right after the starch-users with logical advertising, telling them WHY Celluloid Starch is the best Starch made.

Every trial has proved this to be true.

You take no chances in putting it in stock, for our advertising will sell it for you. It's in demand.

CANNED GOODS IN ENGLAND.

THERE is a splendid opening for Canadian canned goods in the United Kingdom. This is probably known to all, but the industry is too small and young to justify experiments which, while they may lead to success, may also prove a failure. The first object must be to create as big a demand as possible; to widen the channels as much as possible; and to cater to the demands of buyers in every respect. When a firm footing has been obtained and sales have developed, then is the time to begin experiments. But when a set of men, no matter in what branch of trade they are interested, are seeking to develop abroad, they can scarcely do better than look around for some successful concern, whose working methods they may take as an example. Such examples are not wanting to Canadian canners.

As far as Canadian canned goods are concerned, the British dealers may be divided into two classes, those who hesitate to stock the goods because they are comparatively unknown, and those who object to being compelled to purchase from a combination, on the ground that when they buy from individual concerns they are able to make use of a healthy competition. The objections of the first class could be overcome more expeditiously if they all received goods packed as they require. The objections of the second class are characteristic of a country in which combines play no very great or popular part. It may be urged that there are United States combinations on the British market, but here we have combination set against combination, not to mention several individual concerns of long standing, so that the dealer (jobber) has a good choice and competition is strong, although, be it said, grumbles have been heard that the quality of those United States concerns which have gone into combination, have since deteriorated. There is a feeling, not altogether uncommon, amongst the trade over here combinations are not conducive to improvement in the quality of goods manufactured. The fact that there are very few Canadian canning concerns outside the combination doing business on the British market, is thus considered by some a detriment to the growth of Canada's export trade.

REMOVE THE OBSTACLES.

DURING the past three or four weeks the rural militia and part of the city militia of Canada have been undergoing their annual training in the camps of instruction. This year the camps have been very successful and a large number of men went under canvas and were put through the drills

While we do not wish to disparage our citizen soldiery, yet we cannot help but feel that the best men are not obtained by the various Canadian regiments. The cream of Canada's young manhood is not to be found in the ranks of the militia. Why is this?

There are various reasons to be adduced, but we wish to direct our readers' attention to one cause, for which some of them are themselves responsible. We refer to the obstacles placed by employers of labor in the way of their employes, preventing them from entering the militia. A certain length of time is required each Summer for the camps. How many employers absolutely refuse to let their men off for the ten days or two weeks during which the camps last? This is a most serious obstacle, which proves a stumbling-block to many a young man's aspirations.

The way should certainly be made easier for the best of our young men to devote some of their time to a military training. There is no telling what lies before this young country and, as a protection against future dangers, it would be as well to develop and train every youth who has a desire to become proficient in the handling of arms.

ENGLISH PACKED "PETIT POIS."

THE reputation of the French packers of peas is of the highest and the narrow brass label which adorns the tins of the Bordeaux and Nantes packers is known to every grocer catering to the better class of trade. The signification of the words "Woyens," "Petit Pois," "Chaix," "Fins," etc., has been a source of no little worry at times to many a grocery clerk throughout this country, with the possible exception of the French Canadian clerks. The superior reputation enjoyed by the French goods and the special manner of preparation had obtained for the packers a singular distinction and control of a practically exclusive trade. This field is, however, in danger of being invaded by English packers, and already a good business is being done in the English pack "Petit Pois." The trade is growing rapidly, not only on account of the preferential duty and the lowness of freight from London as compared with French ports, but also on account of the quality of the peas. This is now claimed equal in every respect to the finest French brands. The packers in England have evidently made a deep study to perfect these goods and the results are apparent in the increased quantities that have been received in this market during the past two years. Advance samples of the present season's pack in the hands of agents show no falling off in excellence of quality, but, on the contrary, are, if anything, superior to anything put up in France up to the present. The peas are packed in the well-known heavy white tin with the good old-fashioned brass label, with contents designated in French and are absolutely undistinguishable from the Bordeaux and other French pack. The unchangeable and conservative English packers are apparently taking a leaf out of the German manufacturers' book and putting up goods as people want them and not as they "should be made to buy them," and in respect to this imitation of the French packers' products, are bound to cut into the latters' trade. This is particularly so in the case of Canada where the preferential duties and lower freight rates give the English packer a decided advantage. With the lower prices at which the English-packed French peas can be sold to the retailer, self-interest will induce that distributor to push them, and when consumers express themselves as highly pleased with the flavor and general excellence of the English pack, it will not be many years before a very large trade will develop.

RETAIL MERCHANTS' CONVENTION.

AS announced in this paper, after the last meeting in Winnipeg of the executive of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada, that organization purpose holding a general convention in Winnipeg during the exhibition.

It is satisfactory to note that since the convention in Winnipeg last February the association has made substantial progress, and is now a body much stronger numerically than at the time of the last meeting. A few weeks ago W. A. A. Coulson was appointed secretary and organizer, and he has met with considerable success in his efforts to interest the retail trade. In the few weeks since he commenced work he has covered the Souris, Estevan and Pembina branches of the C.P.R., as well as the Brandon and Hartney branches of the C.N.R. Results have been gratifying, but, of course, the work has only commenced.

The coming convention is for the purpose of perfecting the organization work, of obtaining an expression of opinion on various topics, and of redressing grievances of the trade. If the retail merchants of the West give the association proper support its success is assured.

THE BUDGET CHANGES.

MR. FIELDING'S budget, which was presented to the House last week, presents few changes of any particular moment. The most important is the increase in duty on rolled oats to 60 cents per hundred pounds, which places the duty on the manufactured article on a parity with the duty on the raw material. At present, owing to the high price of oats in Canada and the low price in the United States, there will be little change in market conditions. The American millers can still ship their goods into this market and compete with the Canadian millers. But in time a change will be felt, which will be beneficial to the home industry.

For the ten months ending April 30, Canadian importations of oatmeal from the United States totalled 174,619 lbs. Contrast this with the importations of the fiscal year 1904, which only amounted to 2,326 lbs., and it will be seen how dependent we are at present on the United States for oatmeal.

A paragraph announces that beet sugar will be continued on the free list until July 1, 1906.

Another paragraph states that molasses importations from the British West Indies, via Newfoundland, will be treated as direct importations.

BOOM IT ALONG.

EVERY traveler, in Ontario at least, should make it a point to be in Hamilton Friday and Saturday of this week. There will be "gay doins" in the Ambitious City, which will cheer up the hearts of the drummers for a whole twelve months.

The programme includes a concert on Friday evening, a grand procession on Saturday morning and a monster celebration at the Brant House, Burlington, on Saturday afternoon and evening. The parade of the travelers will be especially interesting as the drummers will all be dressed uniformly in white trousers and white hats. There will be a baseball match and other sports at the picnic. Let every traveler cast cares to the wind and be on hand for the fun.

REPUTATION.

A GOOD reputation is a splendid asset for any business man. It costs little to procure; it is worth much to retain. Any merchant can gain it, if he starts soon enough. All that is necessary is persistence. Once the standard of excellence is set, a continuous adherence to it inevitably brings a good reputation sooner or later.

Take a list of the stores in any town and it will be found that the places of business of which the townspeople are proud, are the stores with good reputations. Why is it that in the larger cities there are a few stores left, which have not succumbed to the inroads of the department stores? It is because they have been sustained by their good reputations.

It is true that human nature likes variety. This is the reason for the restless rushing from store to store. Still it will be found that this frenzied rush is merely for novelties. The staple necessities of life are usually procured from one or other store of repute. The housewife comes to realize that she can rely on a certain merchant for her supply of a certain line of goods, and she sticks to him through thick and thin. If he prove unreliable the connection breaks. The continuance of the relationship depends on the maintenance of a good reputation on the merchant's part.

A REAL GRIEVANCE.

A CORRESPONDENT in British Columbia writes to us about a matter which is a very real grievance in the west, and requests us to give it some publicity in our columns. The correspondent says:

"We think that the time has arrived when manufacturers in the east should pay more attention to the amount of stock they carry in the larger towns of British Columbia. For retail men and their customers to have to wait three to five weeks for anything that is required very often means that the customer will do without, or, if possible, will send to the States.

"The City of Vancouver is now of such a size that manufacturers need no longer hesitate to keep a large supply of all the standard and staple goods in daily use throughout the province. We hear complaints on all sides of this long delay for even the common requirements of every-day life. In the Western States of America it is the usual custom for manufacturers of the Eastern States and elsewhere to keep a complete stock, which can be drawn upon by the wholesale men to replenish their stock. The natural result is that traders, in Vancouver especially, draw from the nearest points in the States where these stocks are kept, with, of course, loss of trade to Eastern Canada and to the gain of the United States; and for this reason, because they can be supplied in so much shorter time. Hence the necessity for Eastern Canada to understand the conditons as they appear to-day in British Columbia.

"The warehousing accommodation of Vancouver is good. Consignors of goods hand to the warehouse man a list of his clients from whom he may accept orders for delivery of merchandise in hand, and the warehouse man in turn immediately advises the consignor of such delivery for invoicing purposes. Monthly stock sheets are sent, and every facility placed ready for consignors.

"The great thing for manufacturers to remember is the great advantage it will be to their clients and the consequent advantage to both buyer and seller. There is no reason why the now large and increasing population of Vancouver and British Columbia should be under any disability. They are calling for an alteration which can easily be remedied. There is also the question of business men at these distant points being compelled to buy car lots so as to get a cheaper freight. This can be remedied by consigning a car lot to the warehouse man, who will supply the quantity sold and hold the rest for other customers."

TORONTO RETAIL GROCERS CELEBRATE

LOWERING skies had no terror for the grocers of Toronto on Wednesday morning, and their nineteenth annual excursion to Niagara Falls and Buffalo was an unqualified success. Shortly after seven a.m. the crowd began to converge towards the Yonge street wharf, and by the time of the departure of the Chippewa at 7.30 the retail trade with their wives and families and a big delegation of travelers and wholesale representatives were present in full force.

It was a remarkably good-natured crowd of pleasure seekers which was on board. Everybody knew that it was going to clear up and everybody knew that this was going to be the best excursion ever planned by the Toronto grocers. And it was. It may be said fairly that no crowd of excursionists has ever had a more pleasant and enjoyable day than had the guests of the Retail Grocers' Association on this year's trip.

Perfect arrangements prevailed for securing the comfort of the pleasure seekers. The association is to be congratulated on the efficiency and painstaking efforts of its officers and committee. The officers and committee in charge of the present outing were: President, H. B. Kelly; secretary, Ben. Panter; treasurer, J. S. Bond; Committee, F. W. Johnson, past president; D. Bell, R. Vanloam, J. McLean, R. B. Snow, R. Davies, R. H. Stewart, T. Clark, F. Thorn, Chas. Cootes, and Jas. Rae. In the crowd before embarkation, on the boat, and at the end of the line, these gentlemen were indefatigable in their attentions. The great success of this year's outing was in no small measure attributable to them. There were no dull moments when President Kelly was around, and the whole committee and the travelers vied with each other in making good fellows of themselves.

The boat was just well under way when the Dalley representatives sprang a guessing competition. Its success was phenomenal. Each person was entitled to a guess on two questions: First, "Who was the biggest liar on the boat?" second, "How many tins of 2-in-1 polish were sold in Canada in 1904?" A heavy vote was polled. The first was won in a walk by J. A. Jones, of the J. J. Dalley Mfg. Co., although several other representatives showed unmistakable marks of genius in the same direction. We refrain from making invidious comparisons. Earl Casey, a little girl, won the second guess, the number being 1,871,762. Fans were distributed by the representatives of Todhunter, Mitchell & Co., and gaily-colored butterflies by the Edwardsburg Starch Co. Everyone was decorated with a souvenir badge presented by The Canadian Grocer.

The occasion was graced by the presence of a big contingent of travelers. Among those seen were: W. J. Parks, C. Wilson, representing Todhunter, Mitchell & Co.; Tom Holman, Jas. Mortimer (Christie, Brown Co.), Flem. Hayes (Perkins, Ince & Co.); Ernest Hustwill, J. A. Wright (A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co.); B. Cope (Gunn Bros.; J. Sharp (McCalls); W. Booth (Doyle Fish Co.); Frank Crowley, Fred Gallow (The Pure Gold Manufacturing Co.); M.

B. Panter, Secretary Toronto Retail Grocers' Association.

Murphy (Rutherford & Marshall); J. Anderson (Ogilvie Milling Co.; J. A. Jones (J. J. Dalley Mfg. Co.); O. W. Wrinkler (Warren Bros.); Herb. Moore (Comfort Soap); J. Lumbers (Jas. Lumbers); G. A. Manning, E. B. Nettlefield (Dalton Bros & Co.); M. A. Muldrew, Dan. Casey, J. A. Taylor, T. S. Grant (Eby, Blain & Co.); Frank Brittain (Imperial Extract Co.); Sam. Qua (Davidson & Hay); Ed. Hawes (Edward Hawes & Co.); A. C. Maxwell (Maxwell Fruit Jelly Co.); A. C. McIvor (McIvor Cooked Meats); W. H. Maxwell, J. M. Brett (Jas. Sloan & Co.); J. R. Mansen (White & Co.); W. J. McCleary, A. E. Singleton (Salada Tea); R. J. McNicol, —. Collins (Blue Ribbon Tea).

Fifty men were present from McLaughlin's, this being by far the biggest representation from any one house.

At Niagara-on-the-Lake a large number of the excursionists disembarked and boarded a Michigan Central train for Buffalo, where the rest of the day was spent in seeing the sights. The monster parade of the Elks, who were in convention there, was an interesting feature of the day's doings. After it was over the crowd broke up into little groups and each sought out what appealed most to it.

Those who did not go to Buffalo took the Gorge Route cars at Lewiston and enjoyed the picturesque ride up to the Falls. Having arrived there they had no trouble in finding places to go. At noon the skies cleared and all the vantage points whence views of the Falls could be had were thronged with eager crowds.

Both parties met again on the Corona in the evening and a delightful sail home in the moonlight followed. The lights of Toronto gradually began to twinkle in the distance and at 10.30 the weary but happy crowd left the boat once more. The 1905 excursion of the grocers will long be remembered by all whose good fortune it was to be present.

REMOVING TO TORONTO.

THE Cranston Novelty Co., late of Galt, manufacturers of advertising novelties in the shape of aluminum devices, rubber stamps and other store and office specialties, are removing to Toronto where the business will be carried on in future.

Mr. Cranston, head of the firm, has been a resident of Galt for over 24 years, previous to which he was in business in Woodstock. The Galt Reformer speaking in reference to Mr. Cranston's removal says:

"He has always taken an active interest in the affairs of the town, and was elected alderman in 1899. During the past four years he has conducted the business of the Cranston Novelty Co., which has grown from a very modest little business into one of increasing proportions, until now it extends over a very large part of the Dominion.

J. Bond, Treasurer Toronto Retail Grocers' Association.

"The office of the company is being moved from Galt to the Medical Buildings, corner of Bay and Richmond streets. Toronto is more central for such a business, and agents will be appointed at different points.

The First Six Months of 1905 Has Expired and our books show that the increase in the consumption of

over the corresponding six months of 1904 amounted to 256,686 lbs., and that the increase in the Toronto branch alone (established 15 years), amounted to 108,853 lbs.

Our increase alone in 6 months amounts to as much tea as was consumed during the same period by all the inhabitants of all the cities and towns on the G. T. R., between Toronto and Montreal, including Pickering, Whitby, Oshawa, Bowmanville, Newcastle, Port Hope, Peterboro, Grafton, Colborne, Brighton, Trenton, Belleville, Napanee, Kingston, Brockville, Prescott, Cardinal, Iroquois, Morrisburg, Cornwall, Lancaster, Coteau Jct., Vaudreuil. This is worked out on a basis of a consumption of five-pounds of tea per head per annum, or say, one-half-pound per week per family of five.

What Does This Show?

That we serve the public well, and that we continue to increase from year to year. Why not be with us in this gain in trade, and not only stock "Salada" but push it. The only firm, retail, or wholesale who succeeds, is the one who serves the public well, and you serve them best when you serve them with "SALADA" Ceylon Tea, Black or Green.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

Quebec Markets.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, July 14, 1905.

DURING the week the grocery jobbing trade have been busy filling their sugar orders. Country merchants who have been holding off pending something settled in sugar prices have been obliged to order their earlier wants. The arrival of so much small fruit has been followed by heavy sugar demands. Refiners report very large business, in fact greater than last year. The weakness in the foreign beet market continues, and a decline of 1 1-2d was noted in the early part of week. In teas the trade appear to be also prepared to jump in and buy. Markets are firm all around, and crop conditions would indicate it opportune time to buy. Low-grade blacks and green Ceylons have firmed up, and London houses have turned down their local brokers' offers in many cases for prices which some few weeks ago would have been readily taken. Japans are also hard, the enormous shortage, something like 9,000,000 lbs., according to latest cable advices at hand, inducing dealers to consider buying. In canned goods there is little doing. Orders have been pretty well all placed for new pack. Canned salmon orders have also been pretty well closed. Molasses and syrups do not show much life, the hot weather always affecting the consumption. Spices are strong and show strong upward tendency. California dried fruits, particularly prunes and apricots, are stronger, the reports indicating extensive damage by the late spell of extreme heat. In Spanish dried fruits there is nothing new. Crop indications point to large stock in Malaga and Denia. Despite the warm weather, fish dealers report good week in fresh lake trout, white fish and haddies. Maple products, beans and evaporated apples are firm, but little doing. Flour, which advanced 10c. per barrel last week, holds the advance. Feed is quiet and prices easier. Rolled oats is as yet unaffected by the recent change in the tariff, but the trade is looking forward to an advance. Butter and cheese are both being freely exported. English dealers who had held off for a long time, finding themselves compelled through short home stocks and good demand, to come to shippers' demands on this side. Eggs unchanged but firm. Provisions fairly active, though supplies are none too heavy.

Sugar—Orders are heavy, and business is in full swing. Refiners report business heavier than last season, and jobbers say that country merchants are buying well. The preserving of early fruits has forced purchasing, though the tendency has been to hold off on account of the unsettled market. Beets declined again, and it is difficult to judge when the easing-off will stop. Explanations are hard to obtain and still harder to credit.

Tea—A better business is being done in all grades of tea this week. The firmness of teas generally has awakened buyers' interests, and the very strong reports as to shortage of crops in some countries has tended to still further improve the trade. In Ceylon greens a good demand obtains, and blacks are quoted firmer particularly low grades. Japans are strong, and it is thought will still further advance. Low grade China greens, as well as Pan Yongs and Ping Suey gunpowders also are higher.

Canned Goods—Business is quiet. Fresh fruits and vegetables have affected the sale of canned goods very much. As this is always expected at this season of the year, jobbers offer no complaints. It was reported that some heavy sales of salmon had been made at prices of $4.25 for sockeye for coast, but as far as is traceable nothing was put through under $4.65 f.o.b. coast for sockeye fish. It is reported that packers of Rivers Inlet fish have withdrawn all offers. With the present feeling among the canners there is no possibility of any concessions from present prices.

Fish—The trade continues to be in a very fine condition, and this week has seen an improved demand in fresh fish. The season for gaspe and restigouche salmon is nearly over, and higher prices are expected for the coming week. Lake fish, such as trout and white fish, as well as haddies, arrive in good order; prices are low and quality is extra fine. There is a general scarcity of dore, but there will be a better supply shortly. In consequence price is a little higher this week. Fresh mackerel is coming in small lots; it is not plentiful. Halibut is in at low price for this season; it is also arriving freely. Brook trout is scarce.

Salt and prepared fish is in fair demand for this hot weather. Stocks of skinless cod are light; in fact, there is not enough to supply requirements as yet. What there is of it sells at quotations. Boneless cod obtains the usual demand for this time of the year. But few new salt herrings are coming in and sell readily at high figures. B.C. salmon is practically out of the market, and there will not be any more before one month or six weeks. There is on the market some Labrador salmon of last year's stock. It is in prime condition and sells well.

Foreign Dried Fruits—Meagre reports obtainable. Reports from Smyrna as to Sultana raisins say that all good qualities are entirely exhausted, and very little of lower grades remainng. The new crop is reported to be doing well, and if nothing happens to disturb present favorable conditions there will probably be about 50,000 tons, which is about 28,000 tons more than last year, and while some growers have reported that the Peronosporus has made its appearance, up to the present it is not considered serious. Currants show no serious fluctuations though demand has slightly improved. In Malaga raisins there is nothing definite as to quantity, but speculators have made opening prices at slightly lower than last year. No change in shelled walnuts or almonds, and business is quiet.

Country Produce.

Maple Products—There is nothing new to report on maple products. Sales are small, but they still enjoy a fair demand. Hot weather helps to curtail demand. However, at this time of the year there is never much doing in this trade. No change in prices.

Lower grades	1 40	1 50

Hops—Hops are practically dead. No improvement is looked for before the new crop arrives, and even then dealers do not expect to see much better prices nor easier markets. No change in prices to report.

Evaporated Apples — The trade, as usual, is very dull. Stocks move very slowly. Evaporated apples are in such a poor demand that dealers do not hope for any near improvement. Prices are firm at 6 1-4 to 6 1-2. If there is any tendency to change, however, it will be to jump to higher figures. Dried apples dead at 3 to 3 1-2c.

there has also been a marked falling off in the European consumption consequent upon the high prices which have prevailed for a year past. It must not be lost sight of that the world's supply to-day is nearly 400,000 tons short, compared with the same time last year. Considerable cane sugars have been purchased by U. S. refiners lately on the various reduced bases, and there appears no doubt that the refiners' holdings there are light.

In refined there has been a fair seasonable demand both here and across the line, but trading has been limited to actual requirements, and as we go to press we hear that New York refiners have reduced prices 10c. per cwt. all round, without having any effect upon quotations here, which remain as below. However, a decline locally appears imminent, and the trading generally is light in expectation of it.

Teas—The attitude of buyers towards new Japan tea is still one of great indifference, and the amount of business is very trifling compared with the record of previous seasons. There are several good reasons for this. First, the falling off in the country districts of the general demand for green tea, the consumptive demand going more and more towards the black. Second, the disposition of the import trade to operate on samples of the actual parcels of the tea offered. These samples are still en route, whereas when the business was more active buyers were willing to operate on type samples of the previous year's growth. Cables from Japan this week report a shortage in crops to date, as against last year, of 8,000,000 lbs., which is equal to 20 per cent. of a whole year's output, and with the well-known intention of the Japanese not to pluck fourth crop trees there is little doubt but that there will be a serious shortage on the latter as well as on the earlier tea. Under similar conditions in previous years the market would have been abnormally high, and only the lack of interest and the carry-over in the United States of considerable quantities from last year can account for the present very reasonable values. In black Indian teas the first sale of the season was held in Calcutta in the first week in June. Darjeelings and Assams showed a distinctly good quality, but Sylatt and Chechar were quite undesirable, and as the last named districts, owing to their cheaper prices, supply the greater demand in Canada for Indian teas, it is certain that little business can be done with Canada until the quality improves. August and November are the best shipping months for teas suitable for this market.

In black Ceylon teas the lower qualities have been cheap, but an advance of a farthing to a half-penny has taken place owing to an improvement in quality and decrease in production. This is usual at this season, and higher prices and better qualities may be looked for as the season advances. Business has improved in Ceylon green teas, and there is a specific demand in many parts for Ceylon green where other green teas are dull. We quote the following prices:

Rice and Tapioca — Conditions in Japan have made the deliveries of rice very slow, and the result has been a rise in price. The advance recorded last week has been maintained with every prospect of continued firmness. Tapioca continues firm with a fair demand. We quote as follows:

Foreign Dried Fruit—The market in currants is firm in Petras, and as the stocks are short in this country some business of importance has been done for importation. The position is somewhat strengthened, as there seems to be no doubt that the Greek Government will take some action to improve the situation for the growers. The proposition receiving most consideration at the present is one of the Bank of Athens to form a company, the object of which will be to buy up the surplus of the crop for twenty years. This will tend to increase the prices. Reports from the Mediterranean all indicate favorable conditions for the growing crops. Nothing new has developed in European dried fruit conditions. In California prunes, buyers generally, now that market has advanced, are very anxious to operate, and they believe all they are told about conditions, but the opportunity is gone for getting in at the low price. Frenzied Business

Grocers of The West—and East.

Prices are now out on peas, and nobody can say that the gentlemen in Hamilton have not put them low enough. Whether this illegitimate cut-throat—less than cost—price is any advantage to the retail trade we very much doubt. In issuing these prices we believe they have overshot the mark and it will fail to accomplish its purpose, as it must be apparent to every retail grocer that they were not sent out for philanthropy, for the benefit of the retail trade, for the consumer's benefit, or in a legitimate business sense, but solely to drive out, buy out, or fire out the canners working independent of the consolidation. Whether this is to the interest of the retail trade of the Dominion we leave them to judge, as they are the gentlemen who in the end have to settle these controversies. Understand, we are not appealing for sympathy, but we consider it a legitimate matter for both personal and business discussion in the trade papers of the country. At the same time we are not going further into the matter now, and hand it over to the retail trade for their dissection.

Believing that these low prices will increase the sale of peas enormously, we have made arrangements to increase our pack accordingly so as to fully protect our customers in their increased requirements. The trade will also remember, that, unlike some of our competitors, one in particular, who are currently reported to be holding one hundred thousand cases of old peas, we have not a case of old goods in stock, all this year's pack, fresh and new, and every indication of being the best pack in quality we ever packed ; the cool, moist weather we have been having maturing the raw material in perfect condition.

Eggs—The general provision market is firm, but there is a tendency towards lower prices in eggs. The quality is not so good as earlier in the season. In the hot weather so many spoil that the price must be low to make a fair profit on the good stock possible. The packers' season is over, and reports indicate a fair season. Shipments have been well up to the average. We quote:

B. C. Markets.

THE special commodity freight rate of ten per cent. from regular tariff rates, given by the White Pass & Yukon Railway for six weeks from July 1 to August 15, is this year having a stimulating effect on shippers, the same as last. The experiment, first tried in order to prevent so great a freight blockade at the end of the season as had been several times the case, worked so well that the White Pass people have made it an institution. The inducement is sufficient to make it very well worth the while of any shipper to see that his goods get forward in time to take advantage of the rate.

With large portions of the regular shipments, staple lines which can as well be stocked in one month as another and which are sure to be needed for the Winter, the saving is in many cases a very agreeable addition to the profit made. With nearly all lines, except perishable goods or goods not available until a certain season, it is as much to the advantage of the shippers as that of the railway company to get them forward before the last of the season. Late shipments are often caught by the freeze-up. Every steamer going north now has its full cargo capacity taken up, and receipts at the C.P.R. wharves for northern shipment continue heavy.

Further news from the north increases possibilities of a new gold field up the Hootalinqua. The Kalsheena River, a tributary of the Hoatalinqua has been prospected several seasons, coarse gold being found, but the proposition is more a hydraulic than ordinary placer diggings.

The Alsek, a district nearer White Horse, and much boomed last year, is not developing fast, though arrivals from there assert that the trouble is lack of transport, 30c. per lb. being the price of packing all supplied from White Horse, most of the distance having to be made by a rough pack trail. The character of the diggings, too, necessitates machinery to keep the water out of shafts, and work cannot be done in Winter as in the Klondike camp. J. McLean, an old Vancouverite, says that in his opinion the district is now ahead of what the Tanana was three years ago, yet this year for the first time the Tanana has produced $6,000,000.

Though advices from Ottawa are to the effect that the obnoxious $500 tax on eastern commercial men will be removed by the veto of the Dominion Government, if not by voluntary act of the provincial authorities, little attention is paid to the statement, as it would involve the disallowance of the whole of the Assessment Act, which would cause tremendous disturbance in the province. The Commercial Travelers' Association argues that the Act is in violation of the B.N.A. Act, which leaves regulation of trade matters affecting the whole Dominion in the hands of the Federal Government. But it is doubtful if the Government at Ottawa would disallow the whole Assessment Act because of this obnoxious clause.

The Vancouver Board of Trade is out with a unique proposal, which would retire the travelers' license, in return for the imposition by the Dominion Government of a tariff on lumber. At the monthly meeting of the Vancouver Board a resolution was passed expressing the opinion that if the Dominion Government asks the Provincial Government to repeal the travelers' tax, the latter should refuse unless or until the Dominion Government shall have imposed a duty on lumber and shingles, as the present state of "admitting lumber and shingles free of duty is an unjust discrimination against the interests of this province."

An important era in the local development of the lower mainland of British Columbia is undoubtedly marked by the electrifying of the Lulu Island railway, running sixteen miles from Vancouver to Stevenston, the cannery town at the mouth of the Fraser River. This line, owned and hitherto operated by the C. P.R., has been leased to the B.C. Electric Railway Co., which has over 30,000 horse-power of electric energy developed by water-power available for extension of electrical enterprises. The line runs through the rich delta land of Lulu and Sea Islands, and a fine district on the mainland between the city and the north arm of the Fraser River. It is the intention to promote the settlement of this area in small holdings, similar to the manner in which the land between Vancouver and New Westminster has been developed. There is an immense difference in conditions, however. The latter had to be cleared from the solid bush, while the Lulu Island land is in large part already under cultivation, and has been highly prolific for years. It will be high in price, but the immediate increase of production by extensive cultivation will be at once felt in the increase of local supply of farm and dairy produce available for marketing in Vancouver. It is another indication of the possibilities of agricultural development in this province.

Fruit receipts from local sources are beginning to show an increase. Strawberries are pretty well out, and the season is over, but cherries are now very plentiful and raspberries are coming in in large quantities. The supply of cherries, both sweet and preserving varieties, never was greater. Prices run from 5 to 10c. per lb., according to variety. The sweet cherries are cheaper than the preserving varieties. Raspberries sell at from $1.50 per crate of 24 lbs. up.

Apricots and peaches are coming in freely from California and the stock is better matured than first arrivals. Plums from the same source are very plentiful. They are from $1.25 to 91.50 a box, and peaches somewhat less.

New potatoes are now in good supply, covering all demands of the market. California shipments have ceased for the year, and old stock is done. The price is about 1½c. per lb. wholesale.

In dairy and farm products, eggs of strictly fresh description are in demand, and scarce at 15c., wholesale.

Dairy butter is still very plentiful and brings from 23 to 25c. wholesale, according to the source of supply. Some dairies in the Fraser valley are well equipped, ranking with small creameries. The supply of creamery butter is also plentiful and holds firm at 25c. to the trade.

Sugar prices hold firm since last quotations, when a shading of ⅛c. per lb. was noted.

APPLE CROP OF NOVA SCOTIA.

Mr. J. W. Bigelow, Wolfville, N.S., reports: "I have received discouraging reports of apple crop from nearly all the fruit-growing sections of Nova Scotia. Late frosts followed by cold, wet weather in June was unfavorable for polonisation and growth. Judging from present appearances there will not be over half an average crop for export, say two hundred and fifty thousand barrels, roughly estimated, of the following varieties: Gravenstones, 10,000 barrels; Ribson Pippin, 40,000 barrels; King, 50,000 barrels; Baldwin, 40,000 barrels; Golden Russett, 20,000 barrels; Nonpareil, 40,000 barrels; all other varieties, 50,000 barrels; total, 250,000 barrels. Plums, pears and small fruits may give an average crop for home consumption."

EXTENDING.

The "Salada" Tea Co. are now doing business in every large city, town and village in the United States, as well as in Canada. Besides their own establishments in Toronto and Montreal they have warehouses in New York, Chicago, Buffalo, Detroit, Pittsburg, Boston, St. Louis, and many other points.

"Salada" tea is now as easily gotten in Jacksonville, Fla., Richmond, Va., or Washington, as it is in Toronto or Hamilton, and as easily purchased in Omaha, San Francisco, Salt Lake City or Denver as it is in Montreal or Quebec. In the City of New York alone over 4,000 retail, and all wholesale grocers, handle "Salada." This shows the right kind of enterprise in a Canadian firm.

ADVANCE IN CEYLONS.

Just as we are going to press a cable from London announces an active market with an advance of from ½ to 1d in flavory Ceylon teas.

CHINESE STARCH IN BOSTON.

Mr. O. Lefebvre, proprietor of Ocean Mills, Montreal, has returned from a short trip to Boston, where he has arranged for opening up a branch factory. The trade has developed so largely that in order to overcome duty and to place the famous "Chinese Starch" before the American public as he has done in Canada, he has elected Boston as a distributing centre. Ocean Mills, manufacturers of "Chinese Starch," have a paper mache Chinaman which proves a good line for any retail store window display. The figure is 3 feet high and is in colors, as a Chinaman, and is a facsimile of their well-known trade mark.

QUEBEC CIGAR FACTORY.

Camilieu Joseph Lockwell, Joseph Donville and Ferdinand Donville, all of the City of Quebec, manufacturers of tobacco and cigars, have formed a partnership to do business in Quebec under the name of "The Spot Cash Combination Cigar Factory."

Mr. L. E. Geoffrion, of L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., and Mrs. Geoffrion, have just returned from a short trip to Buffalo, Niagara, Toronto and Kingston.

Mr. A. H. Ewing, of S. H. Ewing & Sons, Montreal, is spending a few weeks' vacation with his family at their Summer residence at Little Metis, P.Q.

Mr. J. H. Maiden, Montreal, is away this week on a business trip to the principal towns of the province, taking in St. Hyacinthe, Three Rivers and Sorel.

Mr. Geo. Forbes, of Forbes Bros., Montreal, has been spending a few days at his old home near Cornwall. Mrs. Forbes and family will spend the Summer there.

Mr. Wm. Dobie, general manager E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, and party, recently made a 300-mile trip through Western Ontario in his automobile, and are now on their way east to Cornwall and Montreal.

Mr. S. W. Ewing, of S. H. Ewing & Son, Montreal, spent several days among the trade in Ottawa this week. Mr. C. H. Cowles, of the St. Charles Condensing Co., Ingersoll, is also in Ottawa, working west on his return trip from the eastern provinces and Newfoundland.

Mr. A. E. Sterling, of the T. A. Lytle Co., Limited, Toronto, is calling upon the trade in Quebec and Montreal this week. To The Grocer he stated that business was good; in fact, growing ahead of their out-town capacity and larger premises have been secured for the manufacturing of his firm's well-known grocers' specialties. It won't be "Teddy's" fault if larger premises still will not have to be secured in a few years.

Mr. C. D. Cowles, representing the St. Charles Condensing Co., who has been making an extended trip through the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland, passed through Montreal this week, homeward bound. Reports as to business are good and with such an enthusiastic advocate of the merits of his company's goods the St. Charles brands cannot help but be well introduced. While in Montreal, Mr. Cowles made his business headquarters with S. H. Ewing & Sons, who are local agents for St. Charles Condensing Co., Ingersoll, Ont.

TERMS OF SALE—Ten per cent. down, and the balance in cash when the inventories are checked off, or in three, six, nine and twelve months, satisfactorily secured, with interest at 6 per cent. per annum.

A WARNING.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—Just a line to warn our merchants in the country and also to put our decent travelers on the "qui vive" that a fellow representing an eastern house and who calls on his customers every six months, has lately been showing copies of orders to people here and there that he had taken from So-and-So and So-and-So; also with the lying story that Mr.—— had been buying from ——, but he could not get any tea to suit him and had to return it. It is needless to say that most of these were imaginary orders and in some cases where the merchant was away from home the request was left not to say anything about the order he was going to send on to him without the man's permission until he saw him the next time—probably in six months. Where would the country merchant be then? There is too much of this dirty work going on among the traveling men. There is not the same honorable feeling existing among them which did years ago, say, for instance, among the lot of men about whom an article in your paper was written last week; fellows doing this sort of business at that time were ostracised by the other travelers and had, I can assure you, a pretty poor time of it.

Thanking you for your courtesy,
"WATCHDOG."

PICKED UP ON THE ROAD.

Personal Impressions of The Grocer's Traveling Representative in the Maritime Provinces.

THE City of St. John, N.B., is noted for its fine grocery stores. The store of Walter Gilbert is a sample of the kind of stores they have there. It has a nice situation at the corner of Princess and Charlotte streets, and has five large plateglass windows, which show up the interior to advantage, the windows themselves being very neatly dressed.

Mr. Gilbert came from Chatham, N.B., about 8 months ago, and fitted up his new store with all modern fixtures. He has a nice tile flooring with rubber mats leading to the counters. The ceiling is of marble, and the shelving and counters cherry. It has all the most modern facilities for doing business, and is lighted at night with electric arc lights, and a more attractive store would be hard to find. Mr. Gilbert keeps in stock only first-class goods, and has built up a large trade in a short time, which speaks much for his business ability, and shows that the public will always patronize a store where the goods and prices are right. This establishment has also worked up a nice country trade. Each out-of-town customer is supplied with post cards, already printed, with space left to fill in article required, making it easy to order by mail.

In a recent letter a correspondent informs me that a merchant in western Nova Scotia, having decided to go west, is selling his entire stock, with the exception of Red Rose Tea, at a cut rate. Asked why he does not cut the price on Red Rose Tea, he replied:

"Quality sells RED ROSE TEA without cutting the price."

Montreal, July 13, 1905.

THE situation on cheese seems to be slightly less strained; country markets have recently been a shade easier, while British markets have come nearer to our level of prices, reluctantly; but they have gradually realized that if they needed supplies they had to advance their bids to get them. There seems to be no doubt that they do need cheese. Last year's make is about exhausted, and so far there is no accumulation of stocks either in Great Britain or in Canada. In fact, our cold storage companies complain of getting hardly any cheese for storage. Our stocks are generally estimated at about 100,000 boxes, which is no more than one week's shipments, and certainly a great deal less than at this time last year. The make in Canada has been reported as enormous; the fact, however, seems to be that our make of cheese is really short of last year, while there is an undoubted increase in the make of butter and, all things considered, it is difficult to believe that prices will be any lower this season. The weather has been extremely hot, and already we get reports of shrinkage in the flow of milk. Flies are doing their share in this respect also, and we are commencing to get various arguments that the situation is safe against any serious decline in prices, although there are as yet no arguments strong enough to predict any immediate advance, and the best we can expect at present is a steady market.

The trade in Great Britain generally is totally different to our trade here. In the former country goods are wanted at a popular retail price, which is generally six pence per pound for cheese and one shilling per pound for butter. Here we go to the grocer, ask for a pound of cheese or a pound of butter and pay the price our dealer asks. In Great Britain the dealers want to sell as much as possible all the year round at a uniform price.

Now, for "Shilling Butter" the Siberian product has of late years filled most of the demand. This year, on account of the reign of anarchy in Russia, the British merchants are afraid to send money or letters of credit into Russia, and the result is that Siberian supplies of butter are very much less and there is a stronger demand for the product of other countries, principally of Canada, and naturally our prices were advanced under the increased demand, but they are now at a point where is is almost impossible to retail our butter in Great Britain at one shilling per pound, and we can hardly expect a further advance in prices unless the supplies should fall so far short of the demand, that the retailer must advance his price to, say, 14 pence per pound.

To sum up, both cheese and butter seem high for the popular demand in Great Britain and, while we may have no decline in prices, the chances for a further advance are very remote at present.

THE BUTTER SUPREMACY.

The race for the supremacy in the butter business of England is daily becoming more keen, writes the Canadian Government Commercial Agent, in Manchester, England, in a letter received at the Trade and Commerce Department recently. For years past Danish butter has held first place but now Sweden, Finland, Siberia, Argentina, Australia, New Zealand, and Irish creameries have entered the contest. Swedish and Finnish butter on account of their bulk commanded a large share of attention at present and are coming to the front.

From the first of July last, until the middle of May the imports of butter from Australia was 20,000 tons in excess of the same period two years ago, and of New Zealand nearly 5,000 tons.

The imports of butter from Canada for the eleven months from the 30th June, 1904, to 27th of May, 1905, totalled 25,740,700 pounds. From New Zealand during the same time 29,244,000 pounds. Total from all countries 100,595,500 pounds. During the same time the previous year the total imports were 82,521,600 pounds.

According to reports there continues to be an increasing demand for Canadian cheese. The May import from Canada amounted to 33,253 cwts. Dealers in England are reported as being well pleased with the way in which Canadian shippers put up their product.

BETTER BOXES REQUIRED.

THE following letter has been sent in to the editor of The Grocer, and will no doubt be of interest to our readers :

"To the Editor The Canadian Grocer : As a subscriber to your valuable paper I should like to call the attention of Canadian butter shippers to the necessity, and I use it in the strongest sense of the word, of packing the butter in the proper square boxes with nailed sides and ends instead of the present flimsy boxes with what I call semi-dovetailed sides and loose movable heads. These have no strength, and the slightest knocking about loosens them. The sides come apart, and it is only by the canvas bags that the whole is held together. The package has a bad appearance when turned out, and loss of weight in the butter is the inevitable result. South African buyers have set their face against the Canadian boxes, and this is one of the reasons why Canadian butter has not found favor in the South African market.

"Many years ago when Mr. Pond of New Zealand produced his excellent box (before the use of grease-proof paper) the invention was welcomed and hailed with satisfaction. The Australians improved on the shape, and made them as they are now, exactly square and strongly nailed. These boxes will travel anywhere and always hold well together even with rough usage. Why cannot the Canadians use the same class of box ?

"I claim to be the first to introduce some years ago the square boxes into Canada, as well as into the Argentine Republic. I think that at that time Canadian shippers in their wildest moments did not contemplate drifting into the use of the present style of boxes.

"Mr. Ruddick, who has done such excellent work in New Zealand by improving the quality of the butter of that country as well as the packing, knows what is required in packages for this country, and he should impress upon the Government to use their strongest arguments to induce the butter makers to pack their butter in the strong nailed boxes which are suitable and find favor on this market.

"I am, sir,

"Your obedient servant,

"ARTHUR C. DOUGHTY.

CONNECTIONS WANTED.

A firm of merchants and commission agents in Hamburg, Germany, is making inquiry for a line of canned lobster for that market. They feel confident there is a good opening in their own territory, and they will be glad to hear from Canadian packers. Inquiry at any of The Grocer's offices will receive prompt attention.

A firm of dried fruit merchants in London, England, with specialties to offer to the Canadian trade, wish to appoint agents in Montreal Winnipeg and Vancouver. Particulars at any office of The Grocer.

OPENING BRANCH IN TORONTO.

Mr. R. L. Millward, who with Mr. Geo. H. Bradwell has had charge of the Canadian agency for Sutcliffe & Bingham, Manchester, Eng., manufacturers of "Kkovah" jellies and table specialties, left for Toronto last Wednesday to open a branch office in that city. Since Mr. Millward has been identified with the Kkovah goods a larger appreciation of these goods has been evident in the trade, and with the same enthusiasm and push in the Queen City, a large trade should develop. Mr. Geo. H. Bradwell, who has been associated with Mr. Millward since his arrival in Canada some months ago, will continue in charge of the Montreal branch at 17 St. John street.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Provisions—In response to the continued strength of the market, prices have remained firm or have advanced. Bacon, both long clear and smoked breakfast, has advanced a quarter of a cent. The remaining quotations are the same as last week's, with no sign of weakening. We quote for this week:

Butter—Receipts continue large and quality good. Weather conditions have been propitious for pasturages and the result has been beneficial to butter. Export trade is reported good, which probably accounts for the strengthening in price. We quote:

FRENCH SARDINE INDUSTRY.

A PARISIAN journal of recent date contains an account of the condition of the sardine fisheries of France, which throws interesting light on the situation. The article explains that the sardine industry in France supports nearly 30,000 sailors and a considerable number of workingmen and workingwomen in factories, in all over 40,000 families, comprising at least a population of 200,000 individuals, scattered mostly along the southern coast of Brittany and upon the littoral of Vendee.

Sardines have been scarce for the last few years, the cause being less an epidemic spoken of in scientific circles a few months ago than an intense exploitation of the reserved bottoms of the territory by means of drags, and to the lack of protection to the larvae and small fry, captured or decimated before having attained full growth and edible size.

The national industry has been subjected to a hard trial, and for two years the manufacturers had to close down or work at a loss, owing to exceptional prices due to the scarcity of the fish. If France has preserved her reputation for the superiority of the quality of the sardines over the world, it is at the price of very heavy sacrifices, and thanks to the care taken in their preparation and the quality of the fish and oil. The competition heretofore by Spanish and Portuguese manufacturers would amount to nothing if the most shameless fraud practiced by certain concerns was suppressed.

Happily the French manufacturers have bestirred themselves. A large number of them, owners of 120 factories, have met at Lorient and have requested that the most energetic measures be taken to prevent such frauds in the future. During the meeting the bill projected by Mr. Georges Le Bail, deputy of Finistere, for the protection of the French industry of preserved sardines against the fraud called "depoting" was very much discussed. We will give the gist of a conversation with Mr. Le Bail:

"It is high time," says Mr. Le Bail, "that a law should intervene to place a high duty upon the entry into France of foreign sardines. The Spaniards and the Portuguese ship into France large boxes containing 140 to 150 sardines. These receptacles are subjected to the operation of 'depoting'—that is, they are divided into boxes of smaller size, which are then sold as French products.

"This substitution brings the fish into contact with the air, and causes the need of reboiling, which diminishes still more the value of a foreign product already inferior. This commerce has assumed very disturbing proportions. The imports, which in 1897 were 2,476,425 pounds, reached 13,545,180 pounds in 1904.

"These sardines are sold more cheaply than ours, which are nearly always of first quality, the reasons for the cheapness being that foreign workmen are paid less than in France, and that in Spain and Portugal the fishing lasts all the year, while here fishing is only profitable during two months. Furthermore, these two countries remit upon exportation from their territory the duties upon the oil and the tin boxes.

"Those benefiting from 'deporting' pretended that during bad fishing years it was indispensable to practice this operation in order to retain customers, and they have particularly invoked the interest of the poorer classes, pretending that the 'depoting' permitted the purchase of the sardines at retail very cheap.

"It has been demonstrated from careful study at different points in France, through the chambers of commerce, etc., that the large boxes have been nearly everywhere abandoned, and that the smaller sizes give to the customers sardines in much better condition at 30 centimes (5.79 cents) a box, that is 5 centimes (0.0965 cent) each. There are even boxes containing four or two sardines.

"Consequently, I come back to this: That it is urgent to prohibit the entry into France of the large packages weighing 1 kilo (2.2 pounds) or over. Boxes weighing less than 1 kilo will not suffer from the bill I have proposed. These boxes, containing from 40 to 45 sardines, will permit keepers of restaurants, boarding houses, grocers, and butchers to satisfy their customers; the sales being renewed oftener and sardines exposed to the air during fewer days will suffer less. Furthermore, our French products will be enabled to compete advantageously as to price and quality. Now, let me speak to you of the frauds, with the proofs in my hands."

Mr. Le Bail passed into his workroom and brought back into the salon a large case filled with boxes of sardines of all sizes.

"Look at this," said he, pulling out the boxes one after the other. Upon all the boxes we read in large letters: "French sardines. Extra fine oil. Manufactured upon the fishing sites."

"You naturally think that you are looking upon excellent sardines, manufactured in France with good, wholesome fresh oil. You are mistaken. All of these sardines are of foreign extraction. You may be regularly eating them, and how many others likewise. Take this magnifying glass and look carefully at the boxes."

We looked at them with the glass. Ridiculously small, as if ashamed to exhibit itself upon the tin or upon the band surrounding the box, we read the foreign name of the country of their manufacture. But who is going to use a magnifying glass when purchasing sardines?

"You see, this is what the public are made to swallow for fish from our coasts. It is not astonishing that after having tasted these products one begins to detest sardines. There is too much of this fraud, which ruins our national industry, and which causes us to lose, little by little, the reputation which has cost us half a century of repeated effort and of sacrifice. In order to suppress all these odious deceptions there is but one means. It is necessary that in future foreign preserves have stamped in the centre of the cover of each receptacle, either in relief or cut in, in good-sized Latin letters of at least 4 millimeters (0.16 inch) height the name of the country of origin."

PROSPECTIVE SALMON PACK.

ADVANCE sheets of the Trade Register contain a review of the salmon situation, embracing a comparative statement of the pack during the past four years and the prospective pack this year, prepared by Samuel M. Irwin, auditor of the Pacific Packing & Navigation Co., as follows:

	Cases.
Total pack of cheap fish for 4 years	2,789,439
Shipped to Japan, "about"	389,439
Total domestic sales 4 years.	2,400,000
Average per year	600,000

Prospective Pack for 1905.

Alaska	190,000
British Columbia	35,000
Puget Sound	175,000
Columbia River	20,000
Outside rivers	30,000
Total	450,000
Annual consumption	600,000
Pack for year 1905	450,000
Shortage	150,000

"By referring to above tables, it will be seen that the total pack of pinks and chums for four years amounted to the grand total of 2,789,439 cases, out of which there were shipped in the neighborhood of 375,000 cases to Japan, or, in order to arrive at even figures, say there were shipped 389,439 cases, which will come pretty close to the actual number," says Mr. Irwin. "This would go to show that there was consumed in the domestic market for the past four years 2,400,000 cases, or an average of 600,000 cases per year. The prospective pack for the year 1905 will go to show the pack to be about 450,000 cases. It will certainly not be over this figure. Taking for granted, therefore, that there will be no demand from Japan, this would leave a shortage of 150,000 cases for the domestic market, which is taking more salmon each year. It is pretty certain, therefore, that the packers will not be in a hurry to sell their pack at a low price. We will venture to say that a year from now there will not be a case of cheap salmon to be bought on the Pacific coast, and as all the buyers will want to purchase cheap salmon in the Summer of 1906 to replenish their stocks, the packers will, no doubt, keep their price up to the closing price of the pack of 1905. Thus it will be seen that there will be no cheap fish at any rate for two years."

FISH GOSSIP.

Dominion Fisheries Inspector C. B. Sword, deposited 30,000 salmon fry in the Nanaimo Lakes lately.

The Vancouver World hazards the opinion that no matter how freely the salmon ascend the Fraser this year, the total pack will be about 25 per cent. less than it was in 1901, the year of the last big run.

David Grierson & Co., manufacturers of Wee McGregor Oat Cakes, have been appointed agents for Canada for Skipper sardines and will demonstrate the sardines with their oat cakes throughout the country. Mr. Grierson reports that oat cakes and sardines are considered a great delicacy in Scotland.

ENGLISH FRUIT LETTER.

London, July 1, 1905.

THE English fruit letter, which appeared in The Canadian Grocer of June 16th, was, perhaps, too brief to fully explain the position of Canadian canned goods on the British market, and room for considerable contention and discussion was left. Further inquiry, however, only serves to show that there is a very strong feeling amongst the trade in London, England; that, as far as Canadian canned goods are concerned, all is not well, and that the outlook is by no means as bright as it might be. Amongst jobbers and brokers alike there is a conviction that far greater business could be done if the bulk of Canadian canners, instead of distributing through a single house, were to allow the middlemen a greater share of the trade. But there is another difficulty which is as great as, if not greater, than this. It is the question of transport from the canneries to the port of shipment and from the port of shipment to the British markets.

One firm, when discussing the question of transport, looked at the matter in this light: The earliest date at which the bulk of canned fruit can be delivered in the United Kingdom is about the middle of September. There are, of course, shipments in previous months, but about 80 per cent. is sent over after September, which is too late for the selling season here, the Winter months being the time for dried fruits. The selling season commences about April and ends about September. This means that the cost of keep from September to April has to be taken into consideration, which, together with interest, insurance and depreciation, would work out at about 9s. per ton. It is surmised that the cost of transport from the canneries in Western Ontario to the port of shipment in Canada is about 10s., and the cost of freight from Canada to the British port about 15s. per ton, which makes a total of 34s. per ton. Although this figure may not be exact, it serves to show that the cost of getting Canadian goods on the British market is very high in comparison with these of California or New York packers. Californian packers do not, as a general rule, ship by steamer, but send their consignments per sailing vessel during the months of September, October, November and early December, so that the shipments arrive in the United Kingdom during the period between February and June. The freight thus includes 4½ to 5½ months of storage, so that there is no extra cost either to the producer or buyer. Then there remains the question of suitable packages, grading and kinds of fruit required for the British markets.

When this problem is solved, the matter of distribution still remains to be dealt with. It was stated at the foot of the fruit letter of June 16, that the Canadian Canners Limited, did not sell to the retail trade. As far as can be found out, no Canadian canned goods do pass direct from canners to retailers, and a wrong interpretation was evidently put upon the word "dealers," the American word for which is "jobber." Those canning concerns, which remain outside the combine, are displaying no very great interest in the British market, their attention being given to trade nearer home. No doubt in course of time they will be able to give more serious consideration to this market and will look around for the best methods of placing their goods at a profit. On the question of remuneration to brokers and agents handling produce of this class, where the value of the case of goods is under 20s., it is difficult to see how the packers can pay less than 2½ per cent., which is the minimum paid by Californian packers to their representatives in the United Kingdom.

It may be that a combination, such as exists amongst Canadian canners, securing as it does great economy in production and in the purchase of materials, not to mention the saving of money in advertising and office expenses, is beneficial for selling at a minimum cost, but there is also to be taken into consideration the buyers' view, which in the majority of cases is adverse to purchasing a number of different articles from one concern through one channel. It means that the buyer will have to go out of his way very often or else pay something to the broker who can get no commission from the canners. If the canners wish to remain in combination, some scheme should be thought out by which goods can be distributed through various channels, without being unprofitable or inconvenient to any party, although the orders may all go to the one fountain head.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Green Fruit.

Toronto, July 14, 1905.

FRUIT is the chief item of interest in grocery circles just now. California fruits still are monopolising attention, but raspberries are now finding their way to the market in increasing quantities. Shipments of strawberries have been light, only a few cases having reached the Toronto Market during the present week. Lack of sufficient sunlight was responsible for the crop being much lighter than was anticipated. Raspberries are being shipped in and they are so far of a good quality. The coming week should see a considerable movement in them. Cherries, too, are shown of a superior quality. Lemons have taken another advance and the end is not yet. Valencia oranges and bananas are in good demand with an abundant supply. We quote:

Vegetables.

Vegetables are now appearing in greater quantities. With the introduction of domestic goods the prices are beginning to sink. New beets have dropped 5c. per dozen bunches, carrots 10c., and cucumbers have dropped to $1 per hamper. Considerable activity is shown in sales. New potatoes are now coming in regularly. the arrival of a small lot of California pears. At an auction on Monday morning five cars of California fruits were sold as follows: Peaches, from 80c. to $1.25; red plums, $1 to $1.45; blue plums, $1.60 to $1.75; pears $3.60. The latter it is believed, will be scarce, and thus hgh and firm. All this new fruit is of the very finest.

Receipt of bananas for this week are also under the average; only 25 cars came in. Most of this new stock is in green condition. After next week it is expected that larger and better lots will arrive. Lemons owing to hot weather, enjoy a larger sale than any other line. Oranges are very scarce; most stocks are exhausted. Watermelons, in good lots, sell well at from 28c. to 35c. each.

Pineapples sell better on account of strawberries coming to an end. Limes are scarce, and only in limited demand. They sell $10 barrel.

Latest reports on crops across the border are unfavorable from Western New York, where fruits fall badly owing to constant heavy rains. Prospects in the Hudson River Valley, however, are more encouraging.

The lemon situation in New York is not easy. They have reached the highest prices this season and are holding firm. This is due to the hot weather, which has prevailed in the producing countries. In Italy the heat has been excessive, and in consequence the home demand has greatly increased and badly curtailed shipments.

Apples have suffered in England and are scarce in France, while in other parts of the continent they promise a good yield. Gooseberries and pears are generally scarce in Europe. Cherries, according to latest advice will probably not yield more than one-quarter the crop in England. They are plentiful, however, in France and Germany. Plum crops will not be large, except in Germany, and high-class goods will be looked for mostly in California, while England may also supply some fine stocks. In Spain the melon crop is poor, but grapes will be abundant. This week's prices are:

Vegetables.

Vegetables are in very good demand. Stocks move quickly, and home-grown products are becoming every day more plentiful. The foreign tomatoes arriving are not in an evenly good condition. In fact some lots are very bad. Hothouse Canadian tomatoes will be on the market next week. Mississippi tomatoes are about done. Texas onions, too, are at an end after but a very ordinary season, both in yield and quality. This was due, however, mostly to careless packing. Tomato and onion crops in this country are most promising. We quote:

CROCKERY DEPARTMENT

HOT WEATHER SPECIALTIES.

BOWLS and sets for berry season are among the things for which there should be a lively demand just now. The berry season is now at its height and china departments in order to be up to the times should carry a stock of these goods with a fair range of prices. There is a wide range of choice in the lines shown. If you are not fully prepared to meet the demand and create a little extra business by showing an attractive assortment, it will be well to sort up a bit with a few special numbers that can be run at a price. This department can put you in touch with some extra good things in this line at interesting prices. The investment will prove a paying one and help you to liven up the selling during the warm and otherwise dull period.

Though there is an all-the-year-round call for ice cream sets, the Summer season always finds an increased demand for them. Are you fully prepared for it? You should not be without a full assortment if you wish your china department to be looked upon as complete. There is an endless variety to choose from, and just now some exceptional bargains are offered that will prove money-makers as well as trade-teasers. Water or lemonade sets are another of the all-the-year-around lines that make an increased showing on the sales sheet during this warm weather season. There is nothing that makes more interesting advertising or proves more tempting than this same line. A very small amount will cover a generous assortment. The values offered at this time make it possible for the retailer to do some mighty effective advertising and make a good profit on every item offered as a leader.

NO HEAVY STOCK NEEDED.

WHERE room is generally at a premium, it is often a matter of doubt in the mind of merchants where they will place their stock of china and glassware to the best advantage. However, with wholesale and jobbing houses so conveniently situated as they now are, it is entirely unnecessary to carry a heavy stock in these lines. One table will suffice in most cases to show enough goods to work up a good business.

Methods of merchandising are changing. For some years back it has become a great fad for even small merchants to take an annual trip to Europe to inspect the goods at the leading markets, and to make their purchases. While in one way the advantage of this method in bringing a man into contact with the original sources of his supplies and freshening him up and infusing new ideas into him, cannot be overestimated, yet it has in many cases resulted somewhat disastrously. To buy to any advantage, in fact, to buy at all, from the big foreign manufacturers, the retailer had to take a large quantity of each line. The result is not hard to imagine. While he had a big stock to open with, the pieces which met with popular favor would be picked up and gradually a large residue of unsalable stock would accumulate. Having this stock on hand, he would not be justified in ordering more, and so his china department would develop into an unprofitable proposition, with considerable money tied up in it.

There is no reason for these conditions subsisting. By judicious buying from home manufacturers and jobbers a few pieces can be stocked, with the knowledge that they can be renewed in a few days when they are sold. In this way no bad stock accumulates, but instead, a steady display of ever new and changing patterns is kept on the shelf or table. This is what makes a store attractive. It doesn't matter how big a stock is, if it is all displayed it will not be long till every woman in the town is familiar with it. What attracts customers to a store is the idea that they will see something new. For this reason it is the best policy to get just a few novelties, even at a trifle higher price, so that it will be possible to replace them with new things and varied patterns.

The china and glassware department should be one of the quickest moving stocks of the store. China provides a daintiness and glassware a brilliancy which naturally attracts the attention of shoppers. Moreover manufacturers of glassware have accomplished such fine results in cut-glass patterns, which can scarcely be detected from the real thing, that for a few cents a bowl or pitcher, which cannot fail to please, may be sold at a profit. Nothing can equal glassware as a stimulant to Summer sales. It looks more for the money than anything which can be sold. The season is just right, too, for pitchers, glasses, and berry dishes have now their day. During the present month make this department hum.

MAKE JULY HUM.

THE present month will call for some good hard thinking if you expect to make a showing in sales. What are you going to do to induce buyers to come to your store? Reduction sales on the lines you have pushed forward and quoted all season will be a very tame and commonplace proposition. Your neighbors will all be doing the same thing. Don't you think the interest would be more certain and widespread if you would make a leading feature of this department and use a number of bright, new things and run them at special prices, and make your reduction sales on other lines you desire to close out a secondary feature? You know it requires an unreasonable price cut on lines that have been prominent during the season to prove an inducement strong enough to bring buyers. Offering something fresh and new and which is of interest to women buyers at any time will tempt them to come and see. They have seen the "now to be reduced lines" time and again, and if your cut price isn't exceptionally low, they'll not take the trouble to come and see. Head your advertisement with strong talk, and good showing of bright, new hot-weather glassware specialties, block out the balance of the space and allot it to the different lines you select to reduce and close out. Put in an attractive window display of the glassware specialties, using bold price tickets, that will talk in no uncertain tone. Supplant this showing by well-arranged display on tables inside the store. Here price tickets should also do the talking. Following a plan along this line will assist you in making July a much better month than you think possible. Possibly buyers will be induced to come to your store to "see" the new attractions, they will take the time to inspect the lines reduced to close. There is no better time in the whole year to try out the merits of this department than the hot-weather, dull period. These weeks of slow and uncertain business will figure as days turned to profitable account if the people can but be induced to come to the store in quest of bargains which can be offered in this line. Such bargains fit ready-money and easy-to-buy ideas. The showing can be made most enticing and generous, so there need be no cause for disappointment on the part of the trade, in the matter of choice. This hot-weather selling fits in at a time when the store in general is sorely in need of stimulating merchandise; something to make a noise with, something that fits the weather and the season; nothing better than glassware running to water sets, berry and ice-cream sets, tumblers, etc.

SOUTH AFRICA TARIFF PROPOSALS.

The Trade and Commerce Department have received a copy of the report of a select committee of Cape Colony appointed to inquire into the condition of industries, says the Globe's Ottawa correspondent. The committee find that the tariff of the customs union, hastily adopted after the Bloemfontein conference, has seriously injured, if not destroyed, several Cape Colony industries. The committee recommend in a number of cases that specific duties be imposed in addition to existing ad valorem duties. New duties recommended are as follows: Candles, 1s per lb., in addition to present 7½ per cent., ad valorem duty; furniture, increase from 7½ per cent. to 25 per cent. ad valorem, and raw material as low rate as possible; confectionery and jams, in addition to present duty, 2 cents per lb.; biscuit and cake, 1 cent per lb. upon sweetened and ½ cent per lb. upon unsweetened, in addition to present duty of 7½ per cent. ad valorem; flour and wheat, present duty of 2s per 100 lbs. on flour and 1s per 100 lbs. on wheat, additional protection of 2s on former and 1s on latter recommended; printing, stationery, etc., raw materials imported free, and duty 33 1-3 per cent. on all printed matter imported excepting literary matter; all Government printing should be contracted for at home; leather industries, duty on all leather and leather goods raised from 7½ to 25 per cent., and special rated tariff on boots and shoes; carts and wagons, some relief should be given, owing to competition of cheap made American vehicles.

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAILERS.

THE CANDY TRADE.

FROM being one of the auxiliaries of trade candy has become one of the staples, says the New England Grocer. Firms which formerly carried it in stock to attract the children now keep a supply of it for the benefit of the older ones, and experienced men assert that fully 80 per cent. is consumed by adults. In fact, the trade of children, formerly considered the important feature of the candy counter, is now of little consequence. It is not easy to say why this is so, but the fact is none the less stubborn and none the less does it appear that the candy trade is only in its infancy.

Retailers who desire to add to the general attractiveness of their stores can do so in no better way than by adding a candy counter, or a candy department, if a large store. It is important that this be begun right, for, upon the beginning depends largely the result as to whether it will be profitable or not.

The counter should be located in as prominent a place as can be afforded. If you can spare space in the front of the store you can rest assured that you will not lose anything by granting it. Nothing pays a better percentage and nothing can be turned over quicker than candy. The result of this combination of good characteristics is that the trade of your other departments will increase as the trade of the candy department expands. Regular customers deserve consideration, and to them should be accorded the opportunity to secure stock at as reasonable prices as can be afforded.

Conditions always improve under careful management, and conditions in this respect will improve quite rapidly.

Only a small investment is required to secure a reasonably good assortmrnt. Twenty-five dollars will buy about ten pails of assorted chocolates, five pounds to the box. Such a stock would fill a small show case that wouldn't require much room, and if it was placed in a prominent position and given some attention it would be cleared in about a week, possibly less, depending upon your town and its business activities. Of course if you are situated so that you can handle more goods profitably it will be wise to make an even larger investment. It will come back to you in the end.

The main points to consider about handling a candy department are, first, that candy must be seen to be sold. In other words, unless it is well displayed it might as well not be shown at all. Customers will buy if they see the stock and it is well arranged; but here it must be remembered that mussiness and a general mixed up condition is not desirable. It will create an impression of disgust rather than otherwise, and that is extremely likely to operate as a deterrent instead of an enlarger of sales.

Having procured and arranged the stock the next requisite is to properly advertise it. If your establishment is running a regular advertisement in your local papers you can spare a little of it for your candy department; a special sale now and then, possibly as frequently as once a week, provided your department is of sufficient size to warrant this, will result in largely increased profits. The needful thing in the candy business is to clear out stocks and turn one's money over quickly. Candy is quick money for any retailer, and it will be for you just the same if you manage the department or counter correctly.

THE TOFFEE KING.

MR. JOHN MACKINTOSH, who has for many years been called the Toffee King by the traders in England, commenced making a specialty of toffee 15 years ago, being convinced that an enormous trade could be built up on this old English production if made according to a very special recipe which came into his hands. Time has proved the correctness of his theory, for to-day Mackintosh's toffee is claimed to have the largest sale of any toffee in the world. Mr. Mackintosh has not been content to be called the "Toffee King" by the trade without making full use of the title conferred upon him, and in many of his advertisements is to be seen the splendid use that has been made of this. The following is a quotation from and advertisement which is running at the present time in many Canadian and American newspapers and magazines :

"The Toffee King's Royal Decree."

I am John Mackintosh, the Toffee King of England, Sovereign of Pleasure, Emperor of Joy. My Old English Candy—Mackintosh's Extra Cream Toffee—tickles the palates of my millions of subjects. I was crowned by the lovers of good things to eat. My Court Jester's name is Appetite. I rule over the Kingdom of Health and Happiness. There is no oppression in my domain. My regime is one of enjoyment and delight. My throne is guarded by an Imperial Unarmed Army of Candy Makers. My coronation took place some fifty years ago. I am an unusual monarch—all my subjects are knighted. Those who become members of my Royal Court must eat Mackintosh's Toffee at least once each day in the year."

The great success of Mackintosh's Toffee has been that it has been pure and simple. There is a great deal in these two little words, pure and simple, as applied to the delicious sweetmeat which is now becoming such a favorite with the people. Mr. Mackintosh was determined that when people placed a piece of his toffee in their mouths that they should know they were eating an article composed of the best of sugar and farmers' produce of the most easily digested kind; those which are fuel foods of the highest class, so that whilst the person eating same derived the pleasure only possible from the most delicious sweetmeat, they were at the same time eating a confection that actually did them a world of good.

The following interesting article was recently written by Dr. W. Gordon Stables, M.D., C.M., surgeon, Royal Navy, one of the best known and most popular doctors in England at the present time :

Writing of Mackintosh's Toffee he says : "I have proved by investigation that Mackintosh's Toffee would satisfy the religious scruples of the Mohammedans of India and elsewhere, which forbid the eating of anything which is touched by the hand. About the whole process of the manufacture of this world-famed toffee is automatic. Let us trace the process of toffee making as carried on at the model factories of Messrs. John Mackintosh, Limited, in the Yorkshire Town of Halifax.

"Two whole sacks of sparkling sugar weighing 448 lbs. are tipped right into into one of the huge copper melting pans; to this sugar is added gallons of rich cream, and a whole tub of farmer's butter. The high pressure steam is then turned on, and a great cloud of rich-smelling vapor quickly arises, and is hurled up through the roof of the factory by great revolving fans. When the sugar, etc., is properly melted, mixed and blended, it is pumped through bright copper pipes from the melting room, through two storeys to the boiling room, and there passes through some of the most ingenious boiling pans I have ever seen. One is quite taken aback to find such intricate machinery in a toffee-making factory.

"The stream of melted sugar, butter, cream, etc., flows constantly through the pan, and in a never-ending stream flows out of the other end beautifully cooked toffee. The boiling plant of Messrs. Mackintosh reminds one of the 'Sausage Machine of Pantomine Days,' where the pig goes in at one end and sausage comes out at the other. The stream of melted sugar, butter, etc., does actually enter one side of these wonderful toffee-making machines, and comes out beautifully cooked toffee at the other side. There is no touching of the toffee during cooking, and the only time during the manufacture that it comes in contact with the hand is after it is cut into small squares, when it is passed along to the score of tidy girls, who wrap with wonderful dexterity the toffee in specially prepared paper, later to be weighed and packed in tins, boxes, etc., and despatched to various parts of the globe.

"I have heard it said that if all the sugar that is used for Mackintosh's toffee in the space of twelve months was placed together, the pile would be considerably larger than the factories in which the toffee is made, and when it is known that the factories are fine, large piles of buildings, occupying a commanding position in Halifax, it will be seen that the quantity is really almost incredible.

"Mackintosh's use only the finest ingredients. Farmers' butter is, of course, one of the principle lines, and as much as £4,000 has been paid for a single consignment of butter by Messrs. Mackin-

MONTREAL RETAIL GROCERS' MEETING.

THE Montreal Retail Grocers' Association held its monthly meeting on Thursday, July 6, at 88 St. Denis street. Some thirty members were present. Mr. P. Daoust, president, opened the meeting, and after the reading of the minutes by the secretary, Mr. P. Bruneau, the treasurer made his report.

Mr. N. Seguin, president of the Games Committee, submitted to the approval of members an elaborate programme of races and other competitions for the annual picnic at Cornwall, July 19. It was resolved that three prizes would be drawn for by all the grocers coming to the picnic.

Then Mr. J. A. Beaudry, secretary of the Trade Federation, introduced Mr. E. M. Trowern, Toronto, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Federation of Ontario. Mr. E. M. Trowern, invited to speak, said that 81 cities and towns in Ontario were thus organized into a federation of retail merchants and spoke of the good this was doing for the trade in general. He made allusion to the overwhelming power it would give the retail trade, if the whole Dominion was organized in such a way. This idea of a federation of the retail trade is progressing rapidly in the Province of Quebec, especially since Montreal has taken the first step.

Mr. Trowern also explained the trading stamp bill which is to be presented before the Legislature and which is to be discussed this week. If this new bill is passed, not only the stamp companies or the merchant who gives them, but even the customer who accepts them will be liable to pay a heavy fine. This bill is made so that it gives no issues to the trading stamp people, but kills any device of such nature.

Mr. J. A. Beaudry then translated Mr. Trowern's speech into French and gave such explanations as were necessary. The meeting was adjourned by a vote of thanks to Mr. E. M. Trowern.

AUSTRALASIAN WHEAT.

A DOMINION commercial agent in Australia sends some interesting statistics in regard to the present wheat crop, and adds some comparative figures that are of particular interest to the Northwest. The latest official returns give the Australian harvest at 54,000,000 bushels, which, it is estimated, would leave 31,000,000 for export. Already 21,000,000 has been shipped as wheat or flour, leaving still free about 10,000,000 bushels. In New Zealand the crop is estimated at 6,966,405 bushels, which would give a surplus of 2,178,988 for export. The yield per acre for three years is given as follows:

	Bushels.
	1902-3.	1903-4.	1904-5.
New South Wales.....	1.3	17.5	9.3
Queensland.....	3.28	17.65	14.24
New Zealand.....	40.69	33 46	30.00

As the wheat of last year was of good quality, and much of it of good strength, there is little likelihood of much demand for Manitoba hard wheat flour at present.

New Zealand is not only peculiarly fortunate in natural conditions, but the country has been so long settled, and by such a good class of practical farmers, that wheat is grown under intensive conditions impossible in a new country. It would be interesting to know the cost of growing a bushel of wheat there, but, where manures and fertilizers are largely used and cultivation is generally elaborate, there is good reason to believe that 30 bushels per acre do not make a better net return than half that amount in the Northwest.

In regard to wheat growing in New South Wales and Queensland, perhaps the most significant thing brought out by these figures is the surprising fluctuation in crop returns. This is occasioned by droughts, and the almost total failure in 1902-3 is directly attributable to this cause. Canadian farmers are fortunately not subject to such trying conditions, and it is a long time since the average wheat yield in the Northwest has been below 13 bushels to the acre, while in the particular year in question it was in the neighborhood of 27 bushels. Under the prevalent equable conditions the Canadian Northwest can well hold its own as a wheat producing country with any other competitor in the world, and nowhere can wheat be grown so cheaply, nor can the farmer be assured of so consistent a return for his labor.

CEREAL NOTES.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has modified its recent decision in the matter of the differential freight rate on ex-lake grain to and from North Atlantic ports, so that account might be taken of the lighter weight of oats and barley over wheat, corn and rye. The differential was fixed in the original decision at three-tenths of a cent per bushel under the rate to New York. This stands as to all but oats, and barley, on which the differential is fixed at one-sixteenth of a cent per bushel.

Crops in Kingston district are reported to be the best in years. Hay was never more abundant nor of better quality, oats are chiefly sown in this district, and the crop will be very large; peas and barley come next, and both will yield well. Peas were poor for some years, but are improving immensely. There is little wheat sown, but what is will be good. As for root crops, little can be yet said. There were heavy rains, which would cause potato rot, but it is expected that the yield will be good on the whole.

The milling industry in southwestern Ontario has not had a desirable experience since last Summer. The greatly decreased yield of wheat in 1904 did not provide sufficient of that grain to keep the mills going, and they had to draw largely upon Manitoba wheat. In 1903 the yield of Fall wheat of Elgin county amounted to 627,000 bushels. In 1904 it dropped to 135,000 bushels. The difference speaks for itself. Kent and Essex usually give about 900,000 bushels, but fell away behind in 1904. The demand of stockmen for the flouring mill offal has been brisk, and at present is greatly in excess of the supply. Prices for shorts and bran are quite good. The promise of a banner year in wheat and all grains means a great deal to the millers as well as to the farmers.

THE 1904 CROP.

The Ogilvie Milling Co., through Mr. W. A. Black, western manager, issued the following statement showing their estimate of the position, July 1, 1905, of the wheat crop of 1904:

	Bushels.
Inspected to July 1, 1905, 35,791 cars at 1,030 bus..... 36,864,730
Less insp'd twice. 213,000

WALKER BINS

Some grocers have an idea that Walker Bin Fixtures cost a great deal more than they do. They're surprisingly moderate-priced, and besides, it isn't necessary to fit up your entire store at once. Put in small lengths of Counters and Wall Cases and add to them from time to time as required. This makes the outlay small. It's an investment, not an expense. Write for illustrated booklet.

Made in Canada

These words are the key to the success that every true Canadian heartily desires for this fair Canada of ours!

Why should we buy goods of any description that are made in a foreign country? The making of foreign goods does not give employment to our artisans. It does not retain money in this country.

Why use Foreign Salt? We have CANADIAN SALT that is superior to any foreign salt that is made.

Why not help build up Canada by using

Canadian Salt

and thereby employ Canadian labor, Canadian works, and Canadian capital?

Demand of your wholesale grocer Canadian Salt, and if he does not keep it write to us for prices and samples.

Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

MANUFACTURERS DISSATISFIED.

DISSATISFACTION is expressed very generally among the cigar manufacturers at the present excise duty of $6 a thousand and the duty on imported leaf of $2.40 a thousand. The object of these heavy duties was to encourage the cultivation of Canadian tobaccos. While there is no doubt that Canadian tobacco has increased greatly in recent years, yet it is asserted by leading men in the trade that this is used for plug tobacco exclusively and is not as yet suitable for putting into cigars. The result is that the manufacturers are compelled to use the imported leaf as before and have in addition to pay the heavy dues. A Toronto paper publishes some interviews on this question in which the heavy duties are uniformly condemned:

George Milligan Speaks.

Mr. George Milligan, of Wellington street, one of the largest cigar manufacturers of this city, thinks that Canadian-grown tobacco can never be used to any great extent for cigar purposes. "It is useless to try to foster such an industry, for there's no demand for those cigars," said Mr. Milligan.

"You pay 10c. a pound duty on the imported leaf?"

"Yes, and that simply adds about $2.40 per thousand to our cost of manufacture. There are no cigars made in Toronto from the Canadian leaf, although factories using only the Canadian-grown and those using a mixture of the Canadian and imported pay only $3 excise per thousand cigars, while the rest pay $6."

"Do American cigars compete in the Canadian market?"

"No; the duty is too high for that, but the American duty on cigars is even higher than the Canadian, and excludes a lot of Cuban, Mexican and Manila cigars, and they come in here. If we were free from the duty on imported leaf, which serves no good purpose so far as the cigar industry is concerned, we could meet those foreign cigars."

Mr. John Taylor.

Mr. John Taylor, of Richmond street east, is of opinion that if a duty is imposed to encourage the growth of tobacco in Canada, all the cigar manufacturers should have a reduction in excise duty, and not only those using the native tobacco. At present these have the double advantage of the duty and the lower excise."

"Do you think cigar tobacco can be raised in Canada?"

"I don't know. Tobacco culture is a thing that has to be carefully studied. The Canadian tobacco is used mostly for manufacturing chewing tobacco, and the same variety of tobacco will not do for that and also for cigars. Then again, you require different kinds of soil for the different varieties. In the States the Kentucky leaf is used chiefly for chewing tobacco, the Virginia for smoking plug, and that of Connecticut, Wisconsin and New York for cigars."

"Perhaps the experimental farms could assist the farmers who are growing tobacco."

"That's what they should do. Grow different kinds of tobacco at the experimental farms, and distribute seed to the growers, and the Government should also employ men from the tobacco States who thoroughly understand the cultivation and curing of the different varieties to instruct our farmers. I am very strongly impressed with the need of this action if tobacco-growing in Canada is to have a fair trial."

WHO SMOKES THE MOST?

IT is a queer notion that people get about smoking, but it is a common thing to accuse certain nations of being inveterate smokers. For instance, the Germans are said to be heavy consumers of cigars. They are. The Dutchman and his pipe have come down to us from history and it is hard to separate them. But the palm for smoking goes to the Swiss as they are declared to smoke at least 50 per cent. more than either. Then statistics prove that the Belgian smokes twice as much as the Dutchman and no one hears about it. Probably the greatest consumers of cigarettes are the Jews. It is quite remarkable that it is very seldom to see a non-smoker of cigarettes among the Jews. Even the poorest of them will have a cigarette. They are long-lived and well behaved, and it is said that the patience, which is famous among the Jews as a race, is inspired and developed by smoking. When a bargain is being driven the Jew will always have a cigarette over the conversation. He is usually free with them and will distribute them to any wisher of the weed. Then it is remarkable again to find the amazing number of Jews in the tobacco trade. In all the large cities the Jews control the tobacco trade. They seem to be natural experts at selling cigars and judging the quality of tobacco. Their unfailing politeness is a characteristic of the race. They are keen at a business and they expect everyone else to be awake. In fact, much of the rubbish talked about Jews being mean is based on hearsay, not on the facts of the case. They are all good citizens, fond of their homes, and they are rare sights in a police court or any other court.

In many of the large tobacco factories owned by the Jews it is quite worthy of note that they are the very kindest to their working staff during the hot weather and have great consideration for the difficulties of working girls and young men who are oppressed during the hot days.

ESSEX COUNTY TOBACCO.

Tobacco is gradually becoming the most valuable product of Essex County. It now is a close rival of corn and oats in the value of its annual crop, and within a year or two will outstrip both of these cereals. Last year 5,000 acres were under cultivation and yielded 5,000,000 pounds of tobacco. This sold at an average of 10 cents a pound. In one case a cultivator received $3,985 for the product of seventeen acres.

This year there are over 6,000 acres planted in tobacco, which is an increase of 1,000 acres over last year. The crop is well advanced, being ten days earlier than it was a year ago. This is an important consideration, since tobacco needs a long, hot season.

WALL PAPER

A CANADIAN WALL PAPER LINE.

A REVIEW of the samples of the Staunton line of new wall papers for the season of 1905-'06 proved quite a treat, and Bookseller and Stationer was much pleased with the general excellence of the collection, which is comprehensive, attractive and artistic. The low priced styles are pleasing in design, bright and snappy in coloring, and show careful attention to an endeavor to make them acceptable and serviceable. For kitchen is shown a good granite in several natural colorings, and a tile pattern that will make a record in selling qualities, as the design and the superior colorings are very good.

For bedrooms are shown a number of very pretty styles, really remarkably attractive goods for the price, while in the next better grade is shown a number of extremely bright florals in natural colors. Several patterns deserve special mention. One, a design showing a bunch of violets arranged in graceful freedom over a lace stripe, with a two-band border showing a festoon of violets on a drapery of lace

CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS IN ENGLAND

By W. L. E.

No. 1—British Hospitality.

Birmingham, June 26.

BRITISH hospitality is proverbial for its magnificence. We have been in England a week and have learned to appreciate this from experience. Our voyage across the Atlantic was longer than we expected; but it was, perhaps, not an unfortunate thing. It fortified us for the round of pleasure which mine host, the London Chamber of Commerce, had provided for us. And we needed to be fortified. From Monday morning to Sunday night we were kept on the go.

The initial function was the presentation of our party of nearly three hundred to the King and Queen. This was really not a part of the original programme. It was not until our steamer was docked at Liverpool that this agreeable intelligence was announced to us. It was suggested by His Majesty and arranged for by Lord Strathcona, who appears to have the ear of King Edward, as well as that of a great many of the leading men of London, and especially of those engaged in trade and commerce. Lord Strathcona is doing a great work for Canada in Great Britain; and one does not discover this to the full until one comes into close contact with the merchant princes of London, as we have been during the past week.

But this is digressing from the main object of this letter, which is to speak of the hospitality of the business men of London, as exhibited in their treatment of the members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association now touring Great Britain. The most optimistic of us had never dreamed of such entertainment. And had we dreamed it would probably have been accompanied by nightmare. But I do not know of anyone who experienced nightmare, for, to say nothing about the antidote of mal de mer that nearly every one but ourselves, of course, suffered, the London Chamber of Commerce, through Secretary Murray, were careful to see that with every feasting function there was an alternative function in the open air on land or river, with the result that all returned to their hotel each night tired, to fall so fast asleep that no nightmare on earth could trot fast enough to overtake them.

The graciousness and tact of the King were shown in an eminent degree at the Windsor function. Before proceeding to the castle we were driven to the Frogmore Mausoleum, where lie the remains of Albert and Victoria. Since the death of Victoria the mausoleum is only opened once a year, and that only for two hours, but at the King's command it was specially opened for the inspection of his Canadian subjects, as were also the magnificent royal gardens. The King and Queen received us at the foot of the main terrace at Windsor, and after each of us had made our best bow before them, His Majesty, who was dressed in grey frock suit and white tall hat, slowly approached our group, raised his hat and remarked: "I thank you very much. I welcome you to England. I welcome you especially to Windsor. I hope you will spend a happy day and return to your homes not too much fatigued after your long journey."

"God Save the King" and "three cheers for His Majesty" followed. Then refreshments were served in the orangery. And all returned to London delighted with our first function on British soil.

The British people in general, and the members of the London Chamber of Commerce in particular, possess the art of entertaining to a degree altogether unknown to us on the western hemisphere. When complimented they merely remark: "Oh, we're used to it. We've been entertaining for hundreds of years. But then we're only trying to repay the kindness you Canadians showed towards our delegates to the convention of the chambers of commerce of the empire two years ago."

But it was not only the entertainment that impressed us. There was the prearrangement. It was simply perfect. Secretary Murray and his staff labored unceasingly, and every function came off without a hitch. Mr. Thomas F. Blackwell, the president of the London Chamber of Commerce, was equally solicitous. The delegates are no more likely to forget the indefatigable labors of these gentlemen than they are the sights and experiences of their British tour. And the pre-arrangement of our tour in Great Britain is not confined to the visit to London. Secretary Murray also arranged the provincial tour of two weeks, upon which we are starting to-morrow (Monday).

No. 2—Provincial Tour.

London, July 8, 1905.

We have just ended the first week of our provincial tour. We have visited in turn Walsall, Birmingham, Sheffield, Leeds and Bradford, and in each place we were accorded the heartiest kind of receptions. Nothing was too good for the Canadians. And it was significant that while the masses cheered, it was the business men who made the pre-arrangements for our entertainment. They were interested in Canada and its trade, and eager for information in regard thereto.

The manufacturers and merchants of Great Britain are not unconcerned about Canadian trade. On the contrary, they are most solicitous. The question with them is how to get it. Business is business with them; but they are by no means devoid of sentiment. They want to be on closer terms with us politically and commercially, because the people of Great Britain and of Canada are brothers. There is the utmost friendliness towards the United States, and it is evident that any little remark of unfriendly criticism of that country displeases them, but the people of Great Britain consider the relationship with Canada as much closer. "The people of the United States," said a prominent speaker at one of our functions, "are our cousins, but Canadians are our own kith and kin. They are our brothers." And the remark was applauded to the echo.

The reception we secured at Walsall was unique. The town has a population of about 90,000, and every soul seemed to have turned out to see us. When we arrived at the station the streets from there to the Town Hall were literally packed with men and women and children, and the police had some difficulty in getting us elbow room. The business men, as represented by the Chamber of Commerce, were not so demonstrative, but they exhibited their cordiality, first by a reception, secondly by a substantial luncheon, and thirdly by throwing open their factories and workshops to our inspection.

Walsall is famous for its manufactures of leather goods, souvenirs of which many of our party brought away with them; but it has iron and steel and clothing industries of no mean order. Walsall is an old town. Indeed, its citizens boast that it was born before Birmingham; and as proof of this relate how letters were once addressed "Birmingham, near Walsall." But it appears that when the railway age dawned, the men of power in Walsall would not allow the iron horse to enter their gates. The beauty of the town would be marred, and the lives of its citizens endangered. It took a later generation to correct this; but in the meantime Birmingham had got the start--and kept it.

From Walsall to Birmingham is only a step, and before we had forgotten the warm good-bye hand shake of the business men of the one city we were in the warm embrace of the business men of the other. The function at which we were guests was, of course, the luncheon tendered by the Chamber of Commerce, the centre of attraction being, of course, the speech of the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, whom President George so aptly described as the best Colonial Secretary Great Britain has ever had. A great deal has recently been heard about Mr. Chamberlain's health, but in neither manner nor matter did he exhibit any loss of vital force. The speech was tactful and masterly, and in the Canadians present Mr. Chamberlain found a sympathetic audience. As a speech, it was the best we have heard since we landed in Great Britain.

After listening to Mr. Chamberlain's address we entrained for Bournville, the famous model village in connection with the cocoa and chocolate works of Cadbury Brothers. And it is a model village. Each workman's home is a delightful little villa, ivy and rose covered, and surrounded by pretty and well-kept gardens, all of which are rented at a low rate. At one time the workmen were allowed to purchase their homes, but speculators took advantage of this to the detriment of all concerned—except the speculators, of course. This put an end to the home-purchasing scheme. The village is now managed by a trust board.

A great many of the employes at Cadbury's are girls and young women, and the regulations of the firm demand that each girl must take two hours' exercise per day either in the open air or in the gymnasium. Each girl has a proper costume for the occasion, and while we were there we saw them nimbly leaping over bars and playing basket ball on the lawn. Not the least of the attractions at Bournville is a magnificent clubhouse and athletic grounds. There are also two beautiful parks within the village enclosure for the benefit of the employes. Mr. and Mrs. George Cadbury entertained us. Both made speeches, Mrs. Cadbury being particularly gracious in her remarks.

Smoky and grimy as Sheffield is, our visit to that city will be long and favorably remembered. The business men of that city could not do enough for us. They threw open their interesting factories as well as their hearts to us. We visited factories in the morning and factories in the afternoon, and between the two was sandwiched a magnificent luncheon in Cutlers' Hall.

Among the factories visited in Sheffield none gave greater pleasure than that of Thomas Turner & Co., cutlery and file manufacturers. Refreshments were pressed upon us as we entered. Every part of the works were thrown open for our inspection and the process of manufacture explained by guides, and as we left the works each visitor was presented with a handsome souvenir knife. At the steel works of Thomas Forth & Sons, Limited, attention none the less merited was shown. Two of the chief members of the firm piloted us for two or three hours about their works. We saw enormous cannon being forged by enormous hydraulic hammers of 3,000-ton pressure, shells being cast, and merchantable steel being prepared for the market. Then tired and grimy we were led to a cool and spacious dining-room on the premises, where refreshing tea and other kinds of refreshments were served us. And then, as if they had not done enough for us, we were presented with handsome pocket knives as we departed. "We go forth laden with hospitality," remarked a witty lady in the party.

In Leeds the centre of attraction to most of the visitors was the ruins of the famous Kirkstall Abbey but just beyond the abbey are the works of the Kirkstall Forge Co. It was to these that Mr. W. S. Leslie, of Montreal, led a party of the excursionists. To us the steel works of this company were as interesting as the abbey, for the monks who built the abbey started the former. What is known as the new part of the steel works was built in 1740. But without an explanation this is not true, for on the sale of the works of 1740 is erected one of the most modern rolling mills in England. Mr. Butler, the chief member of the firm, took charge of us and during our trip through the works we saw much that was old blending into the new. In other words, the old methods are gradually but surely being swallowed up by the new. And some day even the interesting old forging hammer, driven by a water-wheel, will have to depart. It is the last of its kind left at the works, and even the modern hammers which surround it appear to have compassion upon it.

Bradford received us most cordially. From the station to the grim and gothic Town Hall the streets were lined with people, who cheered us as we marched by. After a drive about the city and a brief visit to some of the factories, we were entertained at luncheon at the Cartwright Memorial Hall—one of the most beautiful places we had visited,—and shortly after 3 p.m. we were on our way back to London.

MARITIME GROCERS' GUILD.

The annual meeting of the Maritime Grocers' Guild was held in St. John on July 12, with representatives present from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. Those who attended from outside points were: H. G. Bauld, L. H. Payzant, S. O. Hogg, M. Dwyer, R. M. Symonds, A. C. Pyke, Halifax; R. Murray, New Glasgow; A. H. Randolph, Fredericton; A. W. Eakins, Ralph Brown and Leslie Lovitt, Yarmouth; J. F. Edgett and J. Harris, Moncton; D. A. Morrison, Amherst; A. I. Teed, St. Stephen; E. F. Higgs and W. H. Aitken, Charlottetown.

The officers elected were as follows: H. G. Bauld, Halifax, president; C. H. Peters, St. John, first vice-president; W. H. Aitken, Charlottetown, second vice-president; A. C. Pyke, Halifax, secretary. The principal business transacted was the passing of additional rules and regulations for the government of the members of the guild.

This single Refrigerator Cabinet can be procured from the undersigned. Cost is small when compared with the saving that will result from the use of it.

Place the cabinet on your counter. It will increase your cheese profits.

A NEW KNIFE GRINDER.

The very latest contrivance in the shape of a knife grinder is being offered to the trade by the Ontario Supply Co., of Owen Sound. This grinder is composed of two solid emery wheels, concaved and supported on the one side by a metal disc, which holds the knife to the side of the wheel so that when the knife is being drawn backward and forward it is held against the side of the stone at a proper angle to give the required bevel. The mechanism is very simple and can be operated with safety by a child. Besides the household article a special size (No. 4) is made for the use of merchants who are handling meat knives and also for hotels and steamships. These grinders are now being advertised and will prove a great boon both to the store and the home.

A REJOINDER.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—I notice your correspondent, "Watchdog," is at large again and looking for trouble. He must be a very gullible fellow, indeed, to get loaded up with mythical "So-and-So" stories and retail them to The Grocer readers. He asks "Where would the country merchant be then?" I should say he would be looking for that salesman with a club, if such a trick as "Watchdog" describes had been played upon him, for the average country merchant is no fool, he knows what to do with the salesman who exceeds the limit of fair dealing.

"Watchdog's" gratuitous slander of traveling men is uncalled for. To say that the same code of honor as in former days does not exist among the travelers of to-day is contrary to the facts.

TRAVELER.

MET IN OTTAWA.

During The Grocer's representative's recent visit to Ottawa he ran across a number of salesmen of well-known western firms. It seems that the Grand Union Hotel, run by that capable boniface, Jim Paisley, is a rendezvous for the boys of the grip, and well does J. K. look after the knights. There was friend J. J. Ryan, whose personality is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and who was solicitous about "Arabella," Milligan's Arabella, that is. Fred. B. Mason, representing J. D. Bradshaw, was sticking to wax paper and chewing gum. F. D. Cockburn, whom one can't think of except in connection with Comfort Soap, dropped in for a chat with The Grocer, and, by the way, Mr. John Pugsley, of Pugsley, Dingman & Co., who are responsible for the output of Mr. Cockburn's soap, was also noticed in Ottawa. Wonder what was up?

Mr. D. T. Williamson, representing the Brantford Starch Co., had been in Ottawa during the week and renewed old friendships with The Grocer. A. J. Hughes, one of Montreal's youngest brokers, spent a few days calling upon the Ottawa trade.

Big Mac (M. Macfarlane), now retired from the road, was spending a few days in Ottawa on his return from a week's fishing in the Gatineau. Those who know Big Mac will know one of the oldest grocery travelers that ever boarded a train in Canada, and barring the grey tints in his flowing beard, looks as ready as ever to talk teas, sugars, etc.

MONTREAL GROCERS' PICNIC.

The Montreal Retail Grocers' Association's picnic was held Wednesday, July 19, at Cornwall. A long list of games and sports was run through and valuable prizes awarded. Full report of the outing will appear in next week's issue.

A great number of the members of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association gathered at Champ de Mars on Monday last. Their object was to make a wagon parade to call attention of citizens to their annual picnic. At 3 o'clock they left Champ de Mars and paraded through Notre Dame, De Lorimier, St. Catherine, St. Lawrence, Craig, Inspectors, Wellington and St. James streets, and came back to Champ de Mars. Viau & Frere had fourteen wagons in the ranks. E. M. St. Denis had about the finest delivery wagon, filled with all the finest fruits of the season. He shared the admiration of the crowd with Mr. J. I. Lussier's rigs which were beauties.

A GROCER'S AUTOMOBILE.

Provost & Allard, wholesale grocers, Ottawa, have placed an automobile at the disposal of their traveling representatives, and calls in the city and district around Ottawa are made with a great deal of comfort and rapidity. The Grocer was favored with a spin through Ottawa by the principals of the firm, and the beauties of the Capital City were appreciated in a novel and pleasant manner. Mr. Provost started on Monday, July 17, for a week's trip through the Gatineau district. We believe this is the first automobile employed in a practical business manner by any wholesale grocery firm in Canada.

A WARNING.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—A note of warning should be sounded among grocers concerning a new "premium tea" recently offered to the Ontario trade. If what the writer has seen opened out is a fair sample of the stuff, it will be a great disappointment to any dealer who buys it thinking he has a "good thing," and that his customers will get "something for nothing." Both the tea and the package appear to have reached the limit of cheapness. I believe good samples are being shown and specious promises made by salesmen interested in unloading this stuff upon the trade.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

THE market for finest qualities of both cheese and butter has been kept very steady, but the hot weather has affected the quality and made a lot of "seconds" in both articles, which creates an irregular market. Of course heated cheese or butter, even if made in the usually best factories, cannot be shipped out to the particular customers who want nothing but perfection in quality, yet there is a large demand for goods at a price and such goods, coming from well-known best factories, are gladly bought up at a reduced price and then quoted as "finest." This is a most misleading practice, and merchants are put to a severe test in explaining the difference in price of their quotations of finest quality against the much lower quotations of their competitors.

There have been some orders received here for cold storage of cheese, but as yet this is not general, and most of the cheese received here have found their way across the Atlantic; even in Great Britain there is as yet no serious accumulation of stocks, which demonstrates the fact that last year's make was none too large for the natural consumption, and, although our exports this year show a considerable increase over those of the same period of last year, the actual make of cheese is lighter than last year, as our stocks in Canada are very much less than at this date a year ago.

Our prices are very much higher than last year, but, taking the theory of supply and demand, it is difficult to see how prices could have come any lower, no matter how desirable this would have been to most of the trade.

This week our market shows apparently a slight decline in prices; this is, however, only on the surface, as really finest, cool cheese are not obtainable at anything less than a week ago, and the apparent demand for the present offerings, poor as they are, demonstrates a steadiness of the market, which cannot produce a serious decline in prices.

On butter the situation seems decidedly strong. There is apparently a considerable shortage in Great Britain of good, lower grade of butter, and with our increased creameries, our supply of dairy butter has steadily decreased, so that the latter article is abnormally high in price, so close to the price of creamery that it seems strange that buyers can still be found at the ruling prices. The falling off of supplies of Siberian butters in the British markets is directly responsible for this.

The make of butter in Canada shows a considerable increase over that of last year and yet prices are much higher this year. This shows a profitable field for our farmers. Among the imports of foreign butters into Great Britain, our Canadian butter is still at a very low percentage, and there is no reason why this percentage should not be largely increased, if we give our British cousins what they want. It is, however, a regrettable fact that our farmers are somewhat blind to their own interests in more and more adopting the system of gathered cream by putting in separators. This is penny wise and pound foolish, as it will in time undoubtedly hurt the reputation of our finest creameries.

LONDON PRODUCE LETTER.

London, July 8, 1905.

DURING the past week the bacon trade over here has been very quiet without any apparent cause, and the consumption has been small. The very latest reports, however, (July 8) are to the effect that there is a decidedly improved tone all round. Canadian is steadier, long cut hams (green) fetching 58, 60 and 63 shillings. Heavy weights are in demand. Light weights are quoted 46 to 53 shillings. Supplies are small and prices all round are firm.

There has been a distinct improvement in the butter situation, and everything promises continued activity. There is a good call for all descriptions, and during the past week Canadian has advanced 2 shillings. Quotations for Canadian butter, by latest advices, are: Finest, 100, 102 shillings; unsalted, 102, 104 shillings; fine, 96, 98 shillings. Irish continues to be in short supply, and there is very little Russian or Australian left, the latter, be it noted, continues to sell at a lower figure than Canadian.

The prospects for Canadian cheese are bright. There is a brisk demand and arrivals are quickly cleared up, giving the market a very firm tone, with an upward tendency for next week. Quotations (July 8): Finest, 48, 49 shillings; fine, 47, 47s. 6d. The new season's make of English cheese is just about to be placed upon the market, and brisk business is being done.

In connection with the position of cheese on this market, the following resolution, put forward at a recent annual meeting of the Grocers' Federation, is interesting: "That in the opinion of this conference the branding of Canadian and States cheese is of the utmost importance to the retail trade, and would urge upon the Parliamentary Committee the desirability of further considering the question with the view of getting makers and importers of cheese to adopt the method of branding with the date of make all cheese imported into this country."

The new classification, lately issued from the dairy commissioners' branch of the Department of Agriculture, does not seem to deal with this matter at all. There is a feeling of satisfaction amongst importers over here at the new classification and the arrangement for stamping the weights on each box, but, while this is considered a step in the right direction, it is felt that a large amount of the benefit will be lost unless the Dominion Government sees that these provisions are carried out by all shippers. The matter of having butter boxes contain only 56 lbs. has its advocates and its adversaries. Indeed, the question of packing, about which a letter appeared in this department a week or two back, seems to be a very knotty problem. One man prefers one way and another another, and it is very much the same in weight. It seems as though the only way out of the difficulty is to cater to the demand of individual importers, a method which, though involving trouble, would at least give satisfaction.

PERISHABLE PRODUCE.

The inspector for the Department of Agriculture at Bristol, England, in reporting to the Extension of Markets Division on the perishable cargo ex the SS. Turcoman, which arrived from Montreal on June 27, makes the following reference to a shipment of butter put up in one-pound blocks, wrapped in parchment paper, and packed 50 in a box:

"39 cases butter. These boxes were opened by the customs authorities and were found to contain 50 one-pound prints, and the whole lot was detained owing to the wrappers on the prints not being stamped in accordance with the Merchandise Marks Act."

The Act referred to provides that packages containing cheese or butter imported into the United Kingdom must be stamped with the name of the country of their origin.

TO INVADE UNITED STATES.

The Wilfiam Davies Co. are extending their field of operations into Uncle Sam's domain. A New York State charter has been secured, and three stores will be opened about the 1st of August in Buffalo. There are a number of American shareholders, it being necessary to have American capital invested in order to secure incorporation under the New York State laws. The bulk of the stock is, however, held on this side of the line. The employes will all be secured on the United States side, so as to run no risk of conflicting with the Alien Labor law. If the venture is successful it is probable that stores will be established in other American cities.

Provisions—The warm weather demand for cured meats is such as to satisfy the demand of the trade generally, and there has been a general decline in beef owing to this being the season of the year when arrivals are large. Spring lamb is down 1 1-2c., and prices of lard have declined 1-4c. since last quotations.

The bacon situation abroad is in rather an uncertain condition, owing to reported shortage of Canadian bacon, light arrivals of Danish cured and increased Summer demand. Quotations range from 52 to 56s., and the price of hogs locally varies from $6.65 to $7.75. We quote for this week:

Provisions—Business in all lines is reported fair. Live hogs are coming in steadily, though in small lots, and arrivals are readily taken up by packers. Prices are unchanged since last week and fluctuations are light. Bacon and hams obtain good trade. Lard is firmer, and an advance of 1-8c. is noted in compounds.

Cheese—MacLaren's cheese has been slightly reduced in price owing to the fact that deliveries are being made here now in car lots. The small size formerly quoted at $2.75 is now selling at $2.45 per dozen. The medium was $5 per dozen, and is now $4.80, while the large size has been reduced from $9.25 to $9. Large Roquefort cheese, formerly quoted at $2.75, is now sold at $2.65.

Provisions—This is the quiet season. In barrel pork and beef full prices are asked, and movement too light to encourage dealers to buy. In American pure lard prices are low, and a little is being imported. Canadian prices firmly held; very little offering. Refined is firm, but price still low. Smoked meats hold at full figures. Fresh meats are dull; both western and domestic beef is easy. Lamb has a steady sale and holds quite firm in price. Veal has less sale, but so far brings a good price. Mutton dull. Pork is little seen.

INCREASED CHINESE TRADE IN 1904.

THE immense size of China has been the theme of many writers for many years. Illustrative of this might be cited the statement made frequently after the putting down of the Boxer uprising of 1900, that outside of a few provinces the average Chinaman was unaware of happenings which attracted the attention of the rest of the world for over a year. Somewhat similar reflections come to mind when the trade returns for the year 1904 are examined. Despite the fact that China's chief northern province was the scene of a war which strained the energies of Russia and Japan; that cotton goods, a leading article of import, were selling at very high prices, and that monetary stringency, first noted in 1900, continued unabated, the trade of the empire as a whole continued to increase. It is probable, of course, that the war was so stimulating to trade in countraband and other lines as to offset the effect of the loss in trade in the northern provinces, and, as in the case of South Africa, the real results upon trade may not be experienced until after hostilities are ended. Whatever the causes, however, the fact remains that China's foreign trade in 1904 was the largest there is any record of. The total imports into China in 1904 were valued at $240,800,000, while the exports were placed at about $168,000,000, gains of respectively 5 and 12 per cent. over 1903. The total trade was placed at about $408,000,000, a gain of 7.7 per cent. over the former year. High prices for cotton goods produced a smaller trade in staple lines, but fancy goods gained, and against the loss in textiles are to be placed gains in flour and kerosene.

China's trade with the United States in 1904, according to the Chinese Customs Department report, was valued at $39,375,000, a fractional gain on 1903. Imports by China from the United States made up about $20,426,000, a gain of 13 per cent. over 1903. These figures, it should be observed, do not really cover American trade with that empire, because an immense American trade is done with Hong-Kong, a British possession, but really a part of China so far as American trade is concerned. The Bureau of Statistics at Washington reports that United States exports to all China and to the port of Hong-Kong in 1904 aggregated $39,581,728, a gain of 54 per cent. over 1903, while the imports were valued at $30,500,000, a gain of 15 per cent. over 1903. A grand total trade is here indicated of over $70,000,000 as against the $39,000,000 allowed by the Chinese Customs Department. Taking the Customs Department figures, however, as a basis, we find that Japan participated in Chinese trade to the extent of 15 per cent., Great Britain 12 per cent., and the United States 9.4 per cent. Hong-Kong, the great clearing house for Asiatic trade, handled a little short of 40 per cent. of the total Chinese imports and exports. It is noted that Chinese imports of kerosene in 1904 reached the enormous total of 156,891,235 gallons, as against 84,998,335 gallons in 1903. Of this, American oil contributed 43 per cent., Russia 21 per cent. and Sumatra 35 per cent. California oil made its first appearance in Chinese trade in 1904.—Bradstreets.

N. B. Markets.

St. John, N.B., July 19, 1905.

PERHAPS the matter of chief interest during the week, to at least the wholesale grocers, was the annual meeting of the Maritime Grocers' Guild, which was held in the rooms of the St. John Board of Trade. Halifax, Yarmouth, Amherst and New Glasgow, in Nova Scotia; Charlottetown, in Prince Edward's Island, or "The Island," as the people living there delight to call it; Moncton, Fredericton, St. Stephen and St. John, in New Brunswick, were represented. H. G. Bauld, of Halifax, was elected president; C. H. Peters, of St. John, first vice-president; W. H. Aitken, of Charlottetown, second vice-president; and A. C. Pyke, of Halifax, secretary. It was the largest and most representative meeting ever held by the guild.

Already the Board of Trade are making preparations, looking forward to the annual meeting of the Maritime Board to be held at Yarmouth, N.S., August 16th.

In markets there is little of particular interest. Business is rather quiet, it being between seasons. Dealers are all running short handed, as this is the season of holidays. Rice is rather firmer.

Oil—Burning oil was never cheaper than the present price. While demand for consumption is not large, big business is being booked for future shipment. Dealers report good demand for lubricating oil. In paint oils, turpentine is still high, price is, however, not so firmy held. Linseeds are unchanged. Market, however, is higher. Little cod oil has yet been received.

Salt—In Liverpool coarse salt price is higher. Dealers claim this is owing to high freight charges. Sales are reported good. There are continued arrivals. Some fine Trapani salt for packing is offered. In fine salt demand is for Canadian. There is much annoyance owing to delay in getting certain grades forward.

Canned Goods—If the price quoted on new peas is any sign, the prospect is for cheap vegetables. The Consolidated, while selling to the larger number of the dealers, find everything not their own way, as some of the largest houses handle outside goods. Except peas, spot stocks are light. Corn and tomatoes are held firm. In fruit, new strawberries quoted high. Spot business small. Meats sell quite freely. Owing to the light prices, quite a proportion of the lobsters offered are less than pounds. Salmon for Fall is rather lower than present prices. Domestic fish, except sardines, will be a light pack.

Dried Fruit—Dealers are being interested in futures. The outlook indicates that Valencias will be quite low, and Californias quite full in price. This will lead to more Valencias being imported than for some years. Situation in Greece is reported unsettled, and no price yet quoted on currants. California apricots are low. Peaches have shown two advances of a quarter each, and prunes have been advanced a quarter. They are well above last year. Figs will be very reasonable. Dates low. Peel rather higher than last year. Spot business is light. Small stocks in all lines are held. Evaporated apples are dull, price rather firmer. Onions are quiet. Some Egyptians still here, price low. Bermudas are freely offered. Valencias are dull, prices reasonable.

Sugar—Stocks, which were quite heavy early in the year, are now quite well cleaned up. Market is still weak. There is just a fair demand.

Molasses—Barbadoes is not a large stock, and price is quite firmly held. Quality is good. In Porto Rico there is quite a large stock. A good steady sale is reported. Prices, which are quite low, are unchanged.

Fish—There continues to be a good catch of salmon. Prices are not so high. It has been the best year for some time. Little other fresh fish are offered. In codfish the price for dry fish is so much higher than for fresh that little is offered. Dry fish is still extreme, but is perhaps not quite so firmly held. Pickled herring, while high, are rather easier. Smoked are still low. It is the one cheap line in fish.

Flour, Feed and Meal—Prices of flour still unchanged. Market is rather easy, a fair business reported. Feed is quite freely offered. There is but a light sale. Oatmeal is still a very full stock. Mill prices high. Oats scarce. In beans the sale is very dull. While they are reported scarce in the west, quotations show quite a range. Blue peas now have a very light sale here.

N. S. Markets.

Halifax, N.S., July 17.

THE grocery market remains fairly steady, and there is but little change in prices. Retail trade is up to the average, but the dealers say that money is very scarce. On the whole, business continues fairly satisfactory. There is but little improvement in collections. Sales of sugar are very heavy. The preserving season having set in, this article is in good demand. There is no change in the price, and none is looked for now, though dealers early in the week were expecting a slight decline. From the present outlook there is a possibility of an advance in the price rather than a decline.

Butter continues very firm. Though the receipts are increasing with the good weather, there is no decline in the price worthy of special note. Small tubs of choice butter find very ready sale. There is only a limited supply of butter in this class of package coming to the market, and in consequence of this, it is quickly bought up. Choicest print butter is also in good demand, but the receipts are away below the average for this season of the year.

The demand for eggs is falling off and the receipts are decreasing. Shipments from Prince Edward Island are falling off. The prices quoted last week are still maintained, and no immediate change is looked for.

The price of corn is advancing, and it is reported to be scarce. Corn ground locally is quoted at $2.80 for bags, and $2.90 for barrels, in carload lots. Ten cents extra is asked for smaller quantities. The Upper Canadian mills are asking much higher prices, some quotations being at $3 and others $3.15. The demand for flour is comparatively light, with prices steady. Ogilvies quote carload lots here at $6.15, and some other mills at $6.

The fish market is steady. During the week some dry fish arrived from Lunenburg. The demand at this season of the year is light, and trade in consequence is not very brisk. Bank fish is now quoted at $5.25. No large catches of fish are reported. The latest advices from Lunenburg say that the fleet now on the fishing grounds have not more than an average of 100 quintals each. This is considered to be unusually small, and the prospects are not at all encouraging.

The receipts of strawberries during the week totalled about three thousand crates. The berries all came from points in Nova Scotia. Notwithstanding the gloomy reports sent out early in the season, of damage by frosts, etc., the crop is quite good. The berries are of an exceptionally fine quality, large and luscious. The weather throughout the entire week was fine and warm. The conditions could not have been more perfect for picking and the result was that the fruit reached the market in the best of condition. Early in the week the price was well maintained, but the continued heavy shipments forced the price down to seven cents, and the demand is falling off. Reports from New Brunswick say that the market is flooded with berries, the price quoted being five cents per box.

Heavy importations of molasses continue to arrive here. During the week the schooner Caledonia landed at this port 418 puncheons, 30 tierces and 72 barrels, of Porto Rico. The schooner Lillian Blanville, also from the same port, landed 429 puncheons, 53 tierces and 56 barrels of molasses.

The annual meeting of the Maritime Grocers' Association was held at St. John during the week. Henry G. Bauld, of Halifax, was elected president; C. H. Peters, St. John, first vice-president; W. H. Aitken, Charlottetown, 2nd vice-president, and Arthur C. Pyke, of Halifax, secretary. Mr. Bauld is the senior member of the large wholesale house of Bauld Bros. & Co.

APPOINTED AGENTS FOR OTTAWA.

Provost & Allard, Ottawa, have been appointed selling agents for Garton's H. P. (House of Parliament) sauce and H. P. pickles for the City of Ottawa and district. These lines are excellent quality and should prove a desirable and ready seller with the grocery trade. Inquiries for prices, etc., will be promptly answered.

Conceit and Ability

ARE as far apart as the poles. Conceit promises much without the ability to fulfil. Allow us to demonstrate our ability to produce the best line of goods in America. Peas are now receiving particular attention. It is a ten to one shot many dealers will load up with old stock, no need to say what that quality is. We have installed the most modern machinery in the world for canning peas and we know how to operate the same. Now, with a technical knowledge and practical experience of more than 25 years' canning peas, does it not stand to reason that we are able to produce the nicest canned green peas in this or any country. No section of the world is so specially adapted to the growing of delicious peas as Canada ; and by our special process we know that the consumer will buy 10 cans of "Autumn Leaf Brand" Frankford canned peas to one of any other if you have them in stock. We put up six grades of peas and label every grade true to name. It is very important to know what you are buying. Cut the tins, see the clear appearance of the syrup, taste the peas ; note they are young and tender, canned the same day as picked. No need to wash or rinse our peas, but warm them up in the same syrup they are canned in and you will have as delicious a pea as is possible to get picked in your own garden. Again, we say, it is to both your own and customer's benefit that you should demonstrate the facts mentioned above. If your Jobber does not handle our goods get on the line with us.

FOLLOWING ENGLISH PRACTICE.

IN England the general public demands much from its public men, and Cabinet Minsters or prominent parliamentarians who allow their names to be used as directors of commercial corporations in which they are mere figureheads, meet with sharp criticism indicative of public disapproval. Those, however, who have served their country for extended periods are not allowed to pass out of public life without having their services recognized, an instance of this being the recent retirement of Speaker Gully, of the British House of Commons, who has been granted the customary retiring allowance of several thousand pounds annually.

The MacLean Trade Newspapers were the first to advocate the principle that retiring ministers should be granted annual honorariums, believing that our public men should receive ample remuneration for their public services, sufficient to allow them to live upon their public income without being forced to supplement it by directorate fees from corporations or from other questionable sources. There has been too much talk of the sinister influence of corporations, an influence which can always be expected to be present where public men are weakened by the knowledge that their small salaries are insufficient to do more than meet present requirements, and a realization that no provision can be made for the future.

The advocacy of this principle has met with general approval to warrant the Government in including in the new schedule of parliamentary salaries a clause providing for an annual allowance to retired Cabinet Ministers of five years' consecutive service.

Members of the Senate and House of Commons are to receive $20 per day. If the session goes beyond 30 days each member gets a sessional allowance of $2,500. There is to be a deduction of $15 a day for each day in which a member fails to attend the House. The salary of the Prime Minister is to be $12,000, and the Opposition leader gets an extra sessional allowance of $7,000. There is to be allowed to each member of the Senate and of the House of Commons his actual moving or transportation expenses between his place of residence and Ottawa, going and coming once each way, but no such allowance shall be made for traveling outside of Canada, except from one point in Canada to another, by any direct route. Members are required to hand the Clerk of the House at the end of each month and at the end of the session, statements of their traveling accounts. Every Minister who has served five consecutive years, as head of a department shall, upon his retirement from the Cabinet, be entitled to an annuity for life equal to one-half of the salary attached to his office. The Liberal ex-Ministers to whom this provision will apply are Messrs. Tarte, Blair, Sifton and Costigan. The Conservatives who will receive the annuity are Sir Hector Langevin, Sir Charles Tupper, Sir John Carling, Sir A. P. Caron, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Sir C. H. Tupper and Hon. Messrs. Foster and Haggart. Under the wording of the resolution Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Sir Charles Tupper will each draw $4,000 per annum, half their salary, while Ministers. All the others will receive $3,500 each.

The bad features of the arrangement are that no provision is made for preventing Cabinet Ministers who have retired in disgrace from participating in the enjoyment of the annuities, and that the retired Ministers who continue to sit as members of the Senate or Commons are to be allowed to receive both annuity and sessional indemnity, while ex-Cabinet Ministers who become judges are not to be allowed to draw the annuity while on the bench.

While it might be difficult to frame a clause defining what would constitute "retiring in disgrace," it would certainly be foreign to the spirit of the new regulations to provide pensions for any who might prove untrue to the responsibilities of the high office of a Minister of the Crown.

In our opinion every Minster who continues in office as a member of the Senate or Commons should not receive the dual salary, and the exemption now applying to judges should also include ex-Ministers who have not retired from public office. We congratulate the Government on their progressive action in making more secure the financial positions of those who have to do with shaping our country's destiny. We regret, however, that the legislation was introduced so near the close of the session, when it is next thing to impossible to properly adjust the defects outlined above.

WESTERN RETAILERS' CONVENTION.

IT is gratifying to be able to record that western grocers and general merchants are giving their new association the hearty, enthusiastic support which it deserves. It is now almost a year since a number of progressive retailers in Southern Manitoba met for the purpose of organization, and the progress made in the months that have passed is probably greater than the most optimistic members expected. It was no light task to undertake an extensive organization of this kind, and that the association movement has been a success is due to the unselfish painstaking efforts of the officers and executive at its head. In all movements of the kind much hard work must necessarily fall upon the shoulders of a few officers who have no more to gain than their fellows from the success of the enterprise. The least that ordinary members of the association can do is to accord the executive their enthusiastic support.

As noted in The Grocer at the time, the executive appointed less than three months ago a young newspaper man, W. A. Coulson, as secretary and organizer. Already it is quite evident that they made an excellent choice, for very few men could have covered so much territory in a short time as has been visited by Mr. Coulson. In the few weeks during which he has had charge of the work he has covered the Deloraine, Estevan, Arcola, Lyleton, and Souris branches of the C.P.R., and also the Hartney and Brandon sections of the C.N.R. In every town which he has visited he has found the retailers in sympathy with the movement and the association now numbers its members by the hundreds. Results of this kind were only to be expected from the assurances of support previously received by the executive by letter.

In consequence of the great progress which the association has been making the convention to be held in Winnipeg next week is of unusual interest. There are many important topics to be discussed. Perhaps the chief is the credit evil. The policy of the association is, of course, the closing of all accounts in November, and the strict maintenance of a cash or thirty days' system until the first of May. There is every prospect of an unprecedentedly large harvest, and there could be no more auspicious time for the inauguration of such a movement. Other topics of almost equal importance will come up for discussion, and every merchant who can possibly do so should attend.

TARDY JUSTICE FOR JUDGES.

THE Dominion Government has introduced legislation providing for an increase in the salaries paid to Canadian judges—a step The Grocer has consistently advocated for years.

The Grocer takes the ground that the increased cost of living has made necessary an increase in salaries paid if the ablest jurists are to be encouraged to give up the rich emoluments of private practice for an honored career in the service of the country. It further holds that a deterioration in the personnel of the bench is inevitable unless better salaries are paid.

The Government up to the present has kept in office at the salary set at Confederation, the most responsible, the most honored servants of the Crown, the judges of the Supreme Court of Canada, men on whose decisions rest the disposition of millions of dollars, and on whose strength and ability the honor and integrity of our judicial system is in large measure dependent. Viewed from any standard of comparison, the salaries of our Supreme Court judges is ridiculously small. Compared with the salaries attached to similar courts in other British colonies, weaker in every respect than Canada, or with the salaries paid to men who attain to eminence in the Canadian industrial, commercial or professional world, but particularly when compared with the income of any first-class lawyer in this country, the stipend attached to the Supreme Court of Canada is shamefully small and inadequate.

It is with satisfaction, therefore, that we note the action of the Government, considering, however, that the increase given to the members of the Supreme Court is still insufficient to attract the most desirable men from the bar to this most important of all Canadian courts. If the traditions of British justice are to be preserved, the remuneration given to the occupants of much honored positions must be more nearly equal to the amount the same gentleman could earn in private practice.

According to the new schedule the salaries paid in future will be as follows: The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court is to receive a salary of 910,000 per annum, and the other judges $9,000 each. The judge of the exchequer court is to get $8.000 per annum. The Chief Justices of Ontario and Quebec are each to receive $8,000 yearly. The other High Court judges in Ontario, and twenty-two pulsine judges in Quebec $7,000 each. Sixteen puisne judges in Quebec are to receive $5,000 each, two Gaspe and Saguenay, $4,500 each. The Chief Justices in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Manitoba, Territories and British Columbia are each to receive $7,000, the other judges $6,000. In Prince Edward Island the Chief Justice will receive $6,000, the other judges 95,200.

The semi-annual convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada will be held in Manitoba Hall, Winnipeg, on July 25, 26 and 27.

Of the County Court judges, the senior judge of York County, Ontario, is to receive $2,900. 67 other Ontario judges, senior and junior, $2,500 for the first three years, after that $2,900. In Nova Scotia and New Brunswick the salary of the County Court judges is to be $3,000. In Queen's County, P.E.I., the senior will receive $3.500, the others $2,500, and after three years' service $3,000. The latter provision also applies to Manitoba and British Columbia.

It is to be expressly provided in the Act that no judge of any court in Canada shall henceforth, directly or indirectly, act as director or manager of any public corporation, or in any other manner whatsoever engage in any occupation or business other than his judicial duties.

FAKE PROPOSITIONS.

THIS is one of the seasons of the year when the trade, particularly retail merchants, are being bothered with fake advertising propositions.

Society, church, and other organizations are holding their annual picnics, games and excursions, and they are getting out programmes in which advertisements are inserted.

The getting of these advertisements is a species of blackmail and some of the methods adopted by representatives of these organizations are disgraceful. The worst form is where an experienced advertising agent publishes these on his own account. He goes to the association some time before their annual picnic is held and offers to supply them with programmes free of cost. He then secures a letter from the president or some leading member of the association, gets a list of firms, wholesale, retail and manufacturing, who do any business directly or indirectly with the individual members of the society. He approaches these firms with a story that he has been sent by an individual member of the organization who is a customer of the firm. If a formal application of this sort does not bring the advertisement, then stronger pressure is brought to bear. Sometimes a firm or individual will say that they do not advertise because they cannot afford to go in all the programmes being issued, and if they went in one it would offend the others; or they give some other good reason for refusing. Then comes the worst form of the fake. The firm or man solicited for an advertisement is then told that the "boys" feel they should have some assistance from him towards the expenses of their games or concert or whatever the affair may be, and a contribution of from $50 to $500 in cash has been secured in this way. Not one cent of this money ever goes to the society as a whole. Usually the fake solicitor puts it in his pocket. Sometimes he shares the plunder with some official of the society. The "boys" or members of the society know absolutely nothing of the arrangement, or the lines on which the programmes have been made up.

Now and then these fakirs are caught. Some years ago two men raised nearly $10,000 in aid of the Montreal Fire Brigade. Everybody contributed, feeling that they were giving something to the brigade. Two or three citizens—if we mistake not, Sir George Drummond, Montreal, and John Labatt, brewer, of London, among them—when they found the thing was a fraud, felt it their duty to expose it, and the fakirs were prosecuted and sent to the penitentiary.

Many leading business men are now familiar with the way this advertising fake is worked and they positively refuse to contribute to it, either advertising or cash. It is to be hoped that any of our readers who are not familiar with the way in which they are imposed upon will in future refuse to be blackmailed.

Travelers' Gala Day in Hamilton

THE City of Hamilton was holiday bent on Saturday, and all the conditions were favorable. If there is one thing more than another upon which the good citizens of Hamilton pride themselves, it is not, as is profanely supposed, the mountain, but their ability to get up a demonstration; be it civic, political or military, success is inevitable. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that when the travelers of the Ambitious City, the heart and soul of all festivities, set themselves to get up a gala day, that the affair should be a success.

The arrangements were in good hands, with F. T. Smye as chairman, J. H. Herring, treasurer; Geo. H. Austen, secretary, and A. P. Rogers, assistant secretary. No detail was overlooked. Even the weather had been provided for and while the July sun came out in all his glory, with never a cloud in the sky, a fine cool breeze made life a thing to be rejoiced in.

The fun began Friday night with a concert in the Drill Hall, attended by some 2,200 people. The programme was largely by travelers and hugely enjoyed particularly the numbers by the Commercial Travelers' Glee Club. The programme was as follows:

March—Unter Der Friedensamme ..... Von Blond
Chorus—(a) Good Things ..... Hawley
Travelers' Glee Club.
Solo part by Mr. J. Smye.
Overture—Ruy Blas ..... Mendelssohn
XIII. Regiment Band.
Baritone solo—To the Evening Star ..... Wagner

G. Robertson, W. Norman, S. G. Dunn, J. Smye, F. Small, G. Smye, A. Brodie, J. Lawlor, F. Springstead, F. Murphy, H. Rooke, and L. R. Woodcroft, conductor.

Despite the late hours Friday night, the travelers were up betimes Saturday morning, resplendent in the glory of white duck trousers and hats. The streets soon filled up and at 10.30 a dense crowd lined the principal thoroughfares, while from the Drill Hall emerged one of the most astounding processions ever seen in Hamilton. To amuse the populace the travelers had secured a collection of rare and ferocious wild beasts, tigers, lions, elephants, dinornis, iguanodous and jabberwoks, which, in the care of trusty attendants, brought up the rear of the procession. It might just be stated that the wholesale houses of Hamilton provided the travelers with these strange and fearful creatures.

The parade, which made the circuit of the principal streets, included the following features:

Standard bearer, mounted.
Grand Marshal—F. Small, on horseback.
President Dalley in carriage.
Three Irish constabulary, burlesque—M. B. Tufford, J. W. Mill, F. R. Abbs.
Ninety-first Highlanders' Band.
Chairman F. T. Smye and party in tally-ho.
Committees and citizens in hacks.
Toronto, Berlin, Montreal and London Commercial Travelers.
Forty-eighth Highlanders' Band, Toronto.
Hamilton Old Boys from Toronto, 300 strong.
Pony floral parade.
Hamilton travelers, 600 strong.
Thirteenth Bugle Band.
Fowler's Can. Co., represented by eight men of Royal Navy.
Lucas, Steel & Bristol, eight Royal Canadians.
Lumsden Bros., eight Bengal Lancers.
Tuckett's, eight Japanese veterans.
Scotch pipers, representing the travelers, Balfour & Co.
Schrader Cigar Co., eight Germans.
Hamilton Steamboat Co., eight jack tars.
Rube band, led by Morley Kauffman, representing Sanford Mfg. Co.
Rogers' Coal Co., boy on donkey, carrying two coal hods, guarded by eight Africans.
Skedden Brush Co., four bull fighters mounted, and one bull.
Fearman Co., immense sides of bacon, with guard of honor.
Orange Meat Co., package of Orange Meat, carried by six Oriental drummers.
Hines Cigar Co., rooster and duck.
Rube band—Leader, Bay Hill, as Sousa.
Domestic Specialty Co., elephant.
Coppley, Noyes & Randall, elephant.
Meakins & Sons, giraffe.
Huntman Co., giraffe.
Gilbert Shoe Co., giraffe.
Rolston Co., camel.
Pure Milk Co., camel.
Fowlers Canadian Co., sea serpent.
Hilda Cigar Co., lion in cage.
Gillard Co., frog in cage.
Spring Brewing Co., two baby elephants in cage.
Skedden Brush Co., bear in cage.
James Turner Co., Bengal tiger.

An amusing cage, labeled "Canadian Lions," contained nothing more ferocious than a half-dozen fine bacon hogs.

Ed. Dore made a hit as a blonde female circus rider.

But the procession was merely the beginning of the sport. The crowd made a rush for the radial railway, were loaded into coaches, flat cars and everything in the possession of the company on wheels, and soon deposited on the fine shady grounds of the Brant House overlooking the lake.

Mr. A. P. Rogers, assistant secretary, was most assiduous in looking after the comfort of guests.

The Hamilton Old Boys from Toronto were unanimous in declaring the old town all right.

Lieut.-Col. Stoneman presided over the sports to the satisfaction of all.

The megaphone humorist kept the crowd good natured.

That outdoor-indoor baseball match made the crowd dizzy.

After seeing the circus parade, a small group of Berlin travelers expressed an earnest desire to sign the pledge.

AGAINST TRAVELERS' TAX.

The commercial travelers continue to wax wrath over the tax of $300 which the Province of Quebec has imposed upon foreign houses having no place of business in the province. Dozens of travelers, particularly commission men who represent one or more foreign houses, have refused point blank to pay the $300, and a number of them are talking of forming a pool for the purpose of supplying funds to fight the tax in the courts.

The Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association have taken the matter up in connection with the tax which has been imposed upon commercial salesmen by the Province of British Columbia. They contend that the tax is in open violation of the British North America Act, by reason of its interfering with trade and commerce. The association are also of the opinion that, should the Act be allowed to stand, other provinces will retaliate and there will no longer be interprovincial trade.

TORONTO RETAIL GROCERS MEET.

The regular monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association was held in the Temple Building on Monday evening, July 17. Notwithstanding the extreme heat there was a large attendance, and the principal order of business, i.e., settling up after the annual picnic, passed off without a hitch.

It is thought that the Association will net about two hundred dollars. The main consideration, however, was the signal success of the outing, which was easily the best the Toronto grocers have yet given. The wholesale grocery trade extended their active support this year as never before, and contributed in no small way to the enjoyment of the day. The members of the picnic committee expressed themselves as highly grateful to the officials of the M.C.R. for their courteous treatment of the crowd—and in particular for their kindness in holding the train at Falls View for the benefit of the excursionists.

YOU CAN'T FOOL THE COOK

won its first success in the kitchens of practical housewives. The recipes printed on the boxes were not the conventionally absurd kind, compiled as if for royal households or millionaires' palaces, but were of the common-sense kind. They "worked" and at once became widely popular, popularizing at the same time the "Brantford" brand of Corn Starch.

Ground slowly, without overheating, bolted through silk to microscopic fineness, free from grit or grain and with the delicate aroma and delicious, natural flavor of bottom-land corn retained, was quickly recognized as very different from and superior to other brands. Good advertising lent a finishing touch to success.

Quebec Markets.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, July 20, 1905.

THE general position of the grocery trade may be said to be quiet. With the exception of sugar shipments, which are heavy, there is no noticeable activity in any lines. Teas are on the quiet side, with prices somewhat firmer both in London and at growing countries' shipping points. Canned goods are inactive on account of the large arrival of fresh fruits and vegetables. Jobbers look for nothing heavy in the way of orders for canned goods at this time of the year. Coffees have a bullish tendency. Spices continue firm, with no lower prices apparently likely. Molasses and corn syrups are comparatively stagnant. Currants shown an interesting change upward on account of the undoubted support of the Greek Government of the syndicate's action to restrict over-exportation and loss to producers and shippers. Provisions are unchanged with trade only fair. Butter and cheese are both steady with good cable inquiries. Eggs are also firm and under fair demand. Flour is somewhat dull, with feed, on the contrary, active and in good demand. Rolled oats are quiet. Fresh fish are obtaining good sale, and supplies are good, despite the very warm weather prevailing.

Sugar—Business is reported good, shipments from refineries are heavy, and jobbers report good and growing demand from retailers. Market is unchanged, and it is not expected that prices will recede under the $5 mark. Fluctuations in the beet and raw market are not sufficiently heavy to warrant radical changes.

Syrups and Molasses—Molasses is quiet. Little trading done, and prices unchanged. Advices from Barbadoes report market cleaned up, and last shipments have left the island. In some quarters lower prices are looked for. It is reported that sales have been made at 33c. on dock. Corn syrups, considering the warm weather, are in fair demand.

Tea—Business is reported as tending to a quiet side. Since our last issue a great deal of interest has been centred in China Congons, and recent cables from Foo-Chow advise an advance of about 5 per cent. in teas for pure China greens. Pingsuev market has opened up about same as last year, except that the crop up to the present is 35 per cent. short of that of last season, and since its opening there has been a steady upward tendency. Ceylon greens are quiet, and blacks also show no great activity. Japan teas, considering the enormous shortage of nearly 12,000,000 pounds, are low, and it is to be expected that there will be a considerable advance before the third crop teas can come in.

Coffee—Local market on the quiet side. Reports from Brazil advise stronger market for both prompt and future shipments. Watt, Scott & Goodacre, in their report of the 18th inst., say:

"It is worthy of note, as reported in the daily papers, that Wall street is again attracted to the Coffee Exchange, throwing its influence in with the bulls.

"With this force added to a very largely increased legitimate buying interest, we do not think the roasters can much longer manipulate the position, although it is true that coffees are not yet coming into Rio and Santos at the rate of 60,000 or 70,000 bags a day, as will be the case in September-October.

"Best authorities maintain that reactions will only be temporary, and that from week to week the average will be a gain. The week ending 1st inst. shows an advance of from ten to fifteen points.

"We quote on spot: Rios, Santos and Santos-Bourbons at 8 7-8c. and 9 5-8c.; Maracaibo Cucutas, to arrive at 10 3-8c.; for shipment from London Mexicans at 50s. upwards; Bogotas 52s. upwards f.o.b.; for shipment from Aden, Mochas at 55s. and 75s. 6d c. and f.

Spices—Spices maintain the firm tone assumed a few weeks ago, and the general feeling in the trade is that this firmness will be maintained, as crop statistics indicate stortage in many of the leading lines, such as pepper, cloves, nutmegs and cassia. Local business is quiet. The approach of the picking season will, however, stimulate the demand.

Canned Goods—Only a fair jobbing trade is passing. Dealers look forward with keen expectation to the new prices of corn and tomatoes, and the feeling prevails that these also will assume some of the decline made in peas. No new features are reported in the salmon situation.

Fish—Fish business is very good for this time of the year, as the demand continues to be good and steady, particularly for fresh fish. The season for restigouche and gaspe salmon is pretty nearly over, and as a result the price is higher. Lake fish, trout, white fish come in every day in good order and of fine quality. Dore, however, is a little scarce, in fact just enough to supply demand. Mackerel and brook trout are not very plentiful either. Halibut is still arriving; the price is not so easy. In other lines, such as smoked and salt fish, there is not much doing. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits — The dried fruit market remains in its usual mid-summer dormant condition, with the exception of currants, which, in view of the almost certain intention of the Greek Government to endorse the acton of the syndicate which has been formed to prevent over-exportation, have shown a marked activity and considerable increase in price. It is too early vet to state positively what the final results will be, but it is undoubted that it will be of a nature to improve the condition of the producer and to withdraw from export a large portion of the crop that has hitherto been sold recklessly, with the result that the markets have been depreciated below the cost of production. We may, therefore, expect early to see the price of currants higher than last year, and with apparently no chance of price receding below paying basis.

Re Valencia raisins, Wm. Rogers & Co. report that present crop is still doing well, and will apparently result in a larger quantity than last year, and they accordingly expect opening prices correspondingly lower.

In California dried fruits the extremely and continued hot weather has had a serious effect on the prune, peach and apricot crop, and already prices are enhanced. It is undoubtedly a fact that the shortage will affect sales. Spot stocks of California dried fruits are light.

Country Produce.

Maple Products—Warm weather checks sale of maple products badly. There is but a very limited demand at quotations. In fact business is dull both in sugar and syrup. No improvement is expected before the Fall. We quote:

Pure new sugar, per lb		0 10
Pure Beauce County, per lb	0 06	0 07

Honey—Honey is in little demand, and dealers say that it moves slowly. This is due to the great heat and to the best qualities being out of the market. The new honey, however, will arrive in the beginning of August, and this will probably give a little more activity to the trade.

Beans—There are no changes to report in beans. Stocks are still light, and prices continue firm and as follows:

Hops—Hops continue very quiet. There is hardly any demand, and local stocks are light. This year's crop promises to be only fair, and is expected to come out about September. Some dealers think that there might be some improvement in the trade when the new stocks arrive. No change in prices.

Sugar—The sugar market is in a very uncertain condition this week. New York refiners have declined 10c. all round, and Acadia granulated has dropped 5c. In Acadia quotations there was a slight typographical error last week, which is corrected in this week's issue. This now makes a differential of 15c. per 100 lbs. in favor of Acadia granulated, which may, however, be only temporary.

Beet sugar, after declining to 9s. 9d., recovered to 11s., and has since declined to 10s. 6¾d., equal to parity of 4.22 N.Y. for 96 test centrifugals. This description advanced on two sales 1-32 each time, going to 4 1-16. According to later reports from principal N.Y. refiners forced sales brought it down to former basis of 4c. American buyers, owing to the disappointing movement in refined, are indifferent buyers of raw sugars. There are no special indications and owing to the undertainty of the market it would seem wise to buy cautiously. Our quotations are as follows:

Coffee—There is nothing of special interest to report in the coffee market, and for the week actual trading has been decidedly quiet, with very few coffees moving. The market in Rios is a little stiffer, an advance of 1-2c. being reported from the lowest point six weeks ago. We quote as follows:

Teas—Samples of medium Japan teas to hand do not show as good value as offerings in finer teas. General reports of local conditions agree that the sale of Japan tea in Ontario this season will be of very moderate proportion, not only because medium Japans do not show good value as compared with Ceylon, but owing to a general falling off in the consumption of green tea. The domestic trade are taking decidedly more interest in Ceylon greens, which are showing exceptional value, and quite an active market is the result.

The London market continues to show a firm tendency, and the quality of tea showing is supposed to be improving, though experts say that this hardly follows if one is to judge from the quality of the samples submitted. Locally, low grade teas of all kinds are firm and in some cases higher, including Japans. We quote:

Spices—Latest cable advices record an advance of 3s. per cwt. in black pepper and 1s. 6d per cwt. in white pepper. Cloves are up 6d per cwt., and a firmer tone prevails generally. The wholesale trade report that business shows signs of improvement as the season for pickling approaches. Our quotations are as follows:

Foreign Dried Fruits—Last week's market reports contained a detailed statement of the probable effect of the legislation in Greece on the currant market for the coming season. Latest cables from Greece say that there is an excited market owing to a strong probability, amounting almost to a certainty, that the Greek Parliament will pass the bill conferring upon a syndicate, backed by the Bank of Athens, a concession empowering it in the event of excessive crop to so regulate exports as to bring them into close relation with consumption and the fixing of a minimum export price. The duration of the syndicate's concession will be twenty years. All currants purchased, as above stated, by the syndicate must be transformed into wine or alcohol for export or home consumption, but in any case of increased export demand beyond the syndicate's original yearly estimate, it would be entitled to sell out of the quantity purchased to local exporters at a price not less than equal to 15s. 6d per cwt. f.o.b.

On the strength of this, prices have been advanced from 12s. 6d c.i.f. to 15s. 6d, an advance of 3d for the most common quality.

William Rogers & Co., Dènia, in their latest report, say that the weather, on the whole, has been favorable for the development of Valencia raisin vines. It is too early to estimate the size of the crop, although it is thought that it will exceed last year's. Prices will probably rule at a moderate figure. The prune situation shows constantly increasing strength as the actual conditions in California develop. A total yield of 70,000,000 is considered a conservative estimate and the probability of a reduction from that figure increases.

This is the season when orders are placed for such fancy fruits as Malaga rasins, figs, etc. The usual volume of trade along this line is reported. We quote:

Foreign Nuts—Actual business is quiet, as usual at this season of the year; the only feature to record is a cable from Bordeaux (France) during the week, advising that the crop of Bordeaux walnuts is shorter than anticipated, and that prices will likely range somewhat higher than last year. Country Produce.

Eggs—Receipts of eggs are somewhat lighter than a week ago, and, owing to the hot weather, the consumptive demand shows a decided falling off. The trade are beginning to complain about the poor quality of stuff arriving; the hot weather seems to have induced additional arrivals of seconds, and in many cases shipments have to be culled right and left. Quotations continue unchanged from last week. We quote:

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

Grain—The grain market is without special feature, notwithstanding the general easier feeling consequent upon the favorable condition of the growing grain crops in Ontario and the Northwest. Manitoba Northern No. 1 is quoted 1c. higher than last week and No. 3 1c. lower. Red and white wheat are each 5c. below the level of last week's quotations and oats are selling ½c. cheaper. We quote as follows:

Hides, Tallow, Skins and Wool—Receipts of hides and wool are light owing to good demand and the readiness of local dealers to pick up stock in the country. PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. A. P. Bartlett, of Libby, McNeil & Libby, Chicago, has recently been visiting the grocery trade in Montreal and Quebec in company with Mr. W. H. Dunn, eastern agent, and reports business away ahead of previous years for Libby food products.

Mr. M. Bull, president Royal Crown Soap Co., Winnipeg, was a visitor to Montreal this week, in the interest of the business. Royal Crown soap orders are evidently coming in freely as a very large addition is being made to the already large plant. The "Witch Hazel" brand of toiler soap is winning its way rapidly to the front.

Mr. Geo. Mann, manager Montreal branch Salada Tea Co., has undergone an operation of the right eye at the Montreal General Hospital. Dr. Sterling reported that the operation was a complete success and Mr. Mann will be able to resume his duties by the end of this week. A former operation on the left eye, also performed by Dr. Sterling about a year ago had completely restored the strength and health of that organ.

Mr. John N. Christie, representing Carter, Galbraith & Co., wholesale grocers, Montreal, left on a month's well-earned vacation for Gaspe Basin, P.Q. Mr. Christie, whose specialty and hobby is "Tea," is an old and experienced grocery and tea salesman and his rugged figure and genial countenance will be missed in the Ottawa valley and Eastern Ontario district. Mrs. Christie accompanies him. He is a constant reader of the Grocer and one of its best friends. We wish him and Mrs. Christie an enjoyable and beneficial holiday.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Mr. W. H. Dunn, Montreal, expects arrival in a few days of a straight car of E. D. Smith's (Winona) preserved strawberries. A car of assorted fruits (preserved) will be shipped a few weeks later.

S. J. Major, Limited, Ottawa, are offering low quotations on vinegar. In view of the near approach of the pickling season buyers will find it to their interest to write for quotations.

Provost & Allard, Ottawa, are offering special values in 5-gallon pails; price $1.90 f.o.b. Ottawa. Also special value in Canadian Canners (Aylmer pack) canned soups in 2s and 3s.

The F. J. Castle Co., Limited, have been appointed agents for the sale of Blue Ribbon tea for Ottawa City and district, and report big business since their taking hold of this well-known brand.

Buyers of canned fruits will do well to communicate with H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto, who are sellers at interesting prices.

A good seller for hot weather is the line of Rowat's Lime Juice, Raspberry Vinegar, etc., in fancy glass decanters. These retail at 25c. and show the dealer a handsome margin. To be had only from the Eby, Blain Co., Limited, Toronto.

Puffed rice in barrels, about 30 lbs. each, may be had from H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto.

The Eby, Blain Co., Limited, Toronto, report very satisfactory sales for "Norka," the new breakfast food, which they are putting on the market. It is selling well with the retail trade.

White & Co., Limited, Toronto, received last week 5 cars peaches, aggregating over 5,000 boxes of this one variety of fruit. They expect about the same quantity this week; varieties Texas, Elbertas and California Crawfords.

H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto, are selling British Columbia fresh herring at a very low price.

B. O. Beland, Montreal, has received 87 cases of French mineral water, naturally sparkling, from the Roman Springs, France. There are some attractive prices in this line.

"Sugars Limited," Montreal, expect their first carload of raspberries this week. They have employed an extra staff and have 100,000 cans ready for filling.

TRADING STAMPS DOOMED.

The Trading Stamp Bill has passed the House of Commons and the Senate, which makes practically certain legislation for which a very large percentage of the Canadian grocery trade have long been agitating.

AS IT AGAIN.

The Cowan Co., Toronto, are at it again. The Grocer has to acknowledge receipt of a pretty illustrated booklet entitled "Striking Facts About Toronto," which this progressive firm are distributing amongst their many friends and patrons.

THE QUAKERS

are busy packing peas at their factory in Prince Edward County, the best pea growing section of this province, and more, the Quakers are packing more peas this year than ever before, notwithstanding that there has been such a large carry over of last season's pack. Now this may look odd to people who do not understand the situation, but when we tell you that we were thousands of cases shie on our orders last season, and that we have a bigger call than ever for our goods for this, you will know the reason for our action. Our prices will be exactly the same as the low figures which have been named to market a big jag of old goods and a light pack of new in other directions. We leave it to you—is not the fact that we are always oversold the best evidence that we are turning out the goods that the people want. Look around the stores at the tail end of any season and more particularly when there has been an extra heavy pack of any kinds, ours are not the goods which are then lining the shelves and crowding the storehouse.

The Quaker goods are in demand and will continue to be in demand because the quality will be the best and the labels the most attractive.

The Quaker is on top and will stay on top if money and brains will do it.

Hamilton and Brantford Retail Grocers' Annual Picnic

THE 19th of July opened well for the consummation of picnic pleasures; the early morning awoke in its gayest mood, and to a casual observer it would appear as though all Hamilton were "en fete."

The retail grocers' annual picnic, which began some 20 years ago in a modest way by a few of the then friendly grocers of Hamilton joining together for mutual rest, has developed by the natural sequence of circumstances into an event of first importance to Hamilton, and speaks well for the spirit of enterprise among the grocery, provision and allied trades. Wholesaler and retailer alike combine to make the day's holiday not only an event in the year's doings, but the event of annual significance.

This year has undoubtedly eclipsed all others; about 7,000 tickets were prepared in readiness for the occasion; special counters were erected at the G.T.R. stations, and special clerks drafted from the freight offices for sale of these tickets alone. The up-town office was kept open several hours late the previous night to meet the demand. Some 80 coaches were provided expressly for the excursion, but these had to be supplemented by several additional ones. At 8 a.m. the King street depot had run out of the tickets apportioned to them and had to draw upon the quickly disappearing stock at Stuart street depot.

Notwithstanding this unexpected rush, however, not a single hitch occurred to mar the success of enjoyment of the occasion. Trains were packed beyond ordinary capacity. The committee, however, made conspicuous by the gay badges of white and red, vied with one another in giving consideration to their guests. Each train reached its destination well on schedule time, and on arriving was met by a freight trolly to carry the legion of parcels for which picnic parties are famous to the camping ground. A fine service of cars were also in waiting for the excursionists themselves.

As the morning advanced a brief cause of depression passed over the whole company in the appearance of a slight thunderstorm, the elements threatening to do their worst. The wisdom, however, of supplementing the games committee by a powerful contingent of the "gentlemen of the road" made itself at once apparent. Thunderstorm or no thunderstorm, these gentlemen meant their orders to be "promptly executed," and the retail grocers of Hamilton and Brantford were made to again fall in line with the worthy drummers, solicituous as ever for their well being. A picked team for the ball game was soon in evidence, and the ball game began in real earnest. Hamilton v. Brantford. The fates were now propitious, the sun shone upon the whole scene and gladness and gaity ran high. Mr. C. W. Griffin was installed as score, and played the role throughout the day as champion pioneer of each succeeding game. The ball game was, without doubt, the event of the day, played as it was with a degree of skill only equaled by the energy displayed.

The field was made gay with the ready wit and chaff of onlookers and committee men, prominent among whom might be heard the well-known voices of such men as Mr. I. Price, Mr. F. Small, Mr. A. P. Rogers, etc. The game was ultimately won by Hamilton scoring 12 to Brantford's 8.

After the ball game the parties scattered, the committeemen mostly adjourning to the hotel, where an excellent cold lunch was provided. Sharp at two arrangements were made for the carrying out of the lengthy programme of races. There were races for men of various descriptions, first the potato race, which caused a good deal of merriment, the shoe race and the time-honored sack race, the latter won by a smart Hamilton boy, and then the old man's race, won by three old grocers—Mr. S. Hunt first, Mr. M. Cummings second, Mr. M. Summary third.

The single ladies' race caused a good deal of excitement, and was very smartly contested; won by three Hamilton lassies. The married ladies were determined not to be behind their single sisters, and at once entered into the fighting spirit. The starter had no lit-

Having got them off all right, the 50 yards run ended in a little friendly scrapping, notwithstanding that the judge had taken the precaution of securing three sturdy travelers who were to seize the three winners immediately they crossed the line. Quite a few of the unembraced protested stoutly that it should have been their turn. "Mere man's" decision, however, was final, and the prizes were

THE RETAIL STORE OUTING.

MORE and more retail houses of fair size find it pays to come into close contact with their help on an entirely different basis than that of every day business. Now is the accepted season for such a union. Trade is quiet and the Summer outing offers the most satisfactory opportunities for amusement. The arrangements are simple and every retailer can easily follow his own suggestions. A meeting place appointed, the gathering proceeds to some pleasure grove or picnic grounds, and the day is spent in various forms of recreation. It is preferable that the firm pays the expense of such an outing. Cases have been heard where clerks' picnics have degenerated into begging epistles to friendly jobbers.

It is unquestioned that an outing of this kind is a good investment. It conduces to co-operation in the business and the members of the firm appear in a new manner. They are hosts, not employers. The talk created by such an undertaking is the best kind of an advertisement, and the relish with which the clerks appreciate this entertainment bears fruit for many a day. The outlay should not only mean increased efficiency among the Secretary H.R.G. Association.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Special Report from the Winnipeg Office of THE CANADIAN GROCER.

Market quotations corrected by telegraph up till 12 a.m. Thursday, July 20th, 1905.)

ALL departments of the wholesale grocery trade are feeling the stimulating effects of warm Summer weather with the best of crop prospects. Orders are coming in briskly, and good business is expected during the exhibition, while so many retailers are n town attending the Retailers' Convention.

Values are steady this week, and there are not many important changes in price to note. Sugar is steady at the price quoted last week, but sales are not heavy, as the future of the market is still very uncertain. New apricots are now on the market, and the opening price is about what was predicted in the columns some weeks ago. Peaches promise to be higher than last year. New prices are given below on B.C. canned salmon. It will be noticed that the opening prices are much lower than those prevailing during the last year. The Spring salmon is now on the market, but the bulk of the season's catch will not be delivered by the canners until October. New canned lobsters are on the local market and are quoted below.

Sugar—The price is steady at the figures quoted last week, but as the future of the market is still very uncertain, buying is pretty well confined to immediate requirements. We quote, subject to possible late changes recorded in "Last Minute Manitoba Markets :"

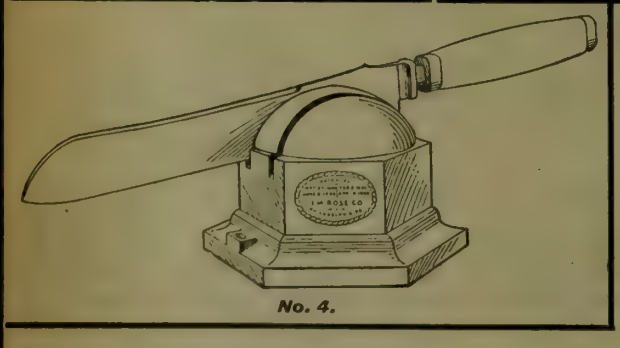
ROSE AUTOMATIC KNIFE GRINDERS



No. 4.

THE ROSE AUTOMATIC KNIFE GRINDERS are efficient, economical, and indispensable articles for grinding a keen edge on knives, etc. They are self-acting, miniature grindstones of solid emery, which require no water, grind hard or soft steel with equal ease and satisfaction, and do not heat or glaze. They are easy to operate, give uniform edges, and are absolutely reliable in all respects. Every grocer should have No. 4 for himself and sell the other lines to his customers.

No. 4 is manufactured specially for grocers. It consists of heavy cast shell capable of bearing the wear and tear of shop usage. The revolving emery wheels, being heavier than those used in other models, will outlast them. Price, postpaid, $1.75.

No. 3 is manufactured specially for household use, and is ornamental as well as serviceable. On the table it proves itself most effective, grinding the carver perfectly. Retail price, 65c.

We also carry No. 5, to retail at 35c., and the AUTOMATIC SCISSORS GRINDER, to retail at 50c., both for household use.

Make Change Without Loss

Mistakes that occur in making change are avoided by system. A customer gave this reason why she trades with Mr. Hardy:

"Mr. Hardy's National Cash Register counts the money that is taken in, and if a mistake is made in making change you can always have it corrected.

"I once made a 10-cent purchase and handed the clerk $5. He handed me 90 cents. I did not notice the error until I reached home. I called Mr. Hardy's attention to it and he opened his National Cash Register and balanced his cash. It showed that there were four dollars more in the drawer than called for by the sales record."

A National Cash Register accurately records each transaction, whether cash, credit, money received on account, money paid or money changed, and shows the clerk's initial.

Let our representative call and explain our system to you.

WORTHLESS bills of the defunct New Brunswick State Bank of New Jersey have been put in circulation recently in Vancouver and New Westminster. The bills are not only of a bank thirty years defunct, but they are counterfeit as well. A prominent banker said the other day that the bills of this bank are sometimes seen in the United States yet, but they are the genuine bill, though they are long since rendered valueless. These counterfeits detected here are apparently from a good plate, but are printed on cheap paper and easily detected by experts. The New Westminster police have a man in charge who was caught passing one of the bills. A number of them have been traced to him.

The announcement from Ottawa that the Government has decided to deport all American silver is not altogether acceptable in this province. There are two American railways running into Vancouver, and numerous steamers also regularly call here. This and the great interchange between the British Columbia cities and those of the neighboring state of Washington, will render the proposition difficult if not impossible. On conservative estimate, fully 40 per cent. of the silver currency in circulation here is American, and a large portion of it is the silver dollar.

The strawberry crop has now been about all handled, and the most optimistic expectations have been more than fulfilled. The estimate of total shipments of strawberries from this new producing district for the season is 15,000 crates, compared with 4,000 crates last year and 2,000 crates the year before.

Added to the increase in amount shipped is the vast improvement in methods of handling and shipping. Uniformity in size of crates, attention to having full weight, careful packing and re-handling to bring the shipments up to standard, and the use of Dominion express refrigerator cars, each holding 750 or 800 crates, have been factors in making success. The fact that the growers were well organized and that the handling of the fruit was in the hands of one or two firms acting as factors contributed to the splendid result. The berries netted almost $2 per crate to the grower.

Cherries in limited quantities and other fruits are also being shipped. There will be a large crop of raspberries marketed following the strawberry season. Tens of thousands of fruit trees have been planted in this district, and many of these will be in bearing in another two or three years. Every available acre of land along the shores of Kootenay Lake and River is being brought under cultivation and the fringe of settlement is becoming deeper all the time. The district promises well as a fruit producer.

The fruit crop in other districts of the province is very satisfactory this year also. On Vancouver Island the progress is very marked, and no feature of the recent visit of Chief Commissioner A. McNeill, of the Dominion Fruit Department, was more impressive than his unreserved praise of the conditions he found in the fruit-growing industry, and especially with the means being used to handle and market the crop. He was very deeply impressed with the future of the Island, and indeed of every part of the province as a producer of fruit.

On Vancouver Island the C.P.R., since acquiring the E. & N. Ry. and its big land grant, have made great plans for development. There is plenty of room for settlements, and the railway company already have big excursions arranged, to bring farmers from the Northwest to visit the Island and see its possibilities for those who have amassed a competence in the prairie country and wish to change their occupation to the somewhat more agreeable one of fruit-raising, with its allied industries.

On the mainland, everywhere, in the lower Fraser Valley, and on the lands adjacent to the City of Vancouver and New Westminster, there are being wrought great changes. Land is being rapidly cleared and brought under cultivation, many people setting out ten-acre orchards and engaging in the raising of small fruits, for which the demand is always keen, both locally and from the Northwest. In the clearing of the land, explosives and the use of big logging engines to remove the stumps have worked a revolution in methods. On the Island, it is part of the C.P.R.'s plan to select suitable areas and clear them, putting them on the market cleared at a price to cover the additional cost, and as they will have the work done under economical conditions, the cost will be very reasonable. Mr. J. S. Dennis, commissioner of lands for the C. P.R., addressed the Victoria Board of Trade the other day, and he told them that it was proposed to select areas of 2,000 acres and clear them. He did not anticipate the price of the land would be over $70 per acre cleared.

Close to the City of Vancouver, and in the Municipality of North Vancouver, also, there are large clearings being made this year. In the former district lands were sold by the Government last season and many of these plots are now all cleared or being cleared. They will be set out in fruit.

In the Okanagan district the advance is even greater than on the coast, for the reason that preparation for a big development has been going on for a number of years, and the returns are now large and coming swiftly. The opening of the Similkameen district this year by the building of railways from both south and north is attracting a great deal of attention to that section.

The shipment of freight north continues to be heavy. So heavy is the movement in fact, that taken with the Oriental trade and the receipts direct from the Old Country, the wharves are filled to their utmost capacity at present. The regular steamers running north are not able to handle all the freight offering and the C.P.R. has put on the steamer Amur in addition, while the Seattle steamers are also taking out large cargoes from here. The City of Topeka took out 350 tons on the 10th, including 5,000 sacks of Chinese sugar, which arrived by the Athenian a few days previously. She also had 2,200 sacks of oats and left 3,600 sacks behind as she had no more space. The other American vessels are getting similar cargoes here.

LONDON FRUIT LETTER.

London, June 8, 1905.

IN spite of the anxiety felt by many of the English fruit growers on account of the bad weather of a few weeks ago, it seems as though, after all, crops will be fairly good for all soft fruits, and although there will be no glut, it is probable that there will be just enough to supply the ordinary requirements of the trade.

The outlook for the pulp business is not a bit brighter and selling is very slow. This falls very severely upon Australian and Tasmanian shippers, who secure the bulk of the trade with Britain. When remarking in a previous issue of The Grocer that a great deal of pulp had been returned to Australia, the reference was almost solely to gooseberry pulp, which was very slow of sale. The raspberry and black currant found customers in the usual way, although it was a difficult matter to find buyers.

Canada's trade with Britain in pulps is, of course, very young, and there will be the usual difficulties in the way of progress at first. For at least thirty years Australia has been engaged in the pulping business, and during that period she has not only succeeded in securing a firm footing on this market in pulps, but also has gone into the jam manufacturing industry as well. Australian jams are well known on the British market. As far as pulp is concerned, trade between Australia and England is at least fifteen years old, and one firm alone claims to have handled as much as 1,000 tons last season, which, as has been said, was an extremely bad one.

At present Canadian pulp requires improvement in quality and also in price, if it is intended to enter the British market seriously. The general liking seems to be for large tins, as these can be handled cheaper. For instance, it would make quite a considerable difference in cost to handle and open 500 cases containing 6-lb. cans than if they were packed in 14-lb. cans or 12-lb. cans. Both Australian and Tasmanian shippers pack in the larger cans. In the matter of labelling, Canadian shippers of pulp seem to use more attractive labels than other countries, and this is the case not with pulps only, but with many brands of canned fruits and meats also. An attractive label goes a very long way with the English consumer.

For no very good reason there is a duty of 7s. per ton on plum pulp entering Britain, and this is causing no little trouble to those wishing to ship this line over here. The origin of this duty must be traced back to the time when the sugar duty came into force. At that time the duty was imposed on all preserves and similar goods containing sugar, and, owing to some misunderstanding, plum pulp was considered liable to the duty, although it does not contain any sugar whatever. Those who have protested against the duty have pointed out that other pulps do not pay any duty when entering Britain, but, lest they should do harm instead of good, their efforts to have the duty removed have not been very serious.

With regard to the export fruit trade to Canada, advices are to hand to the effect that the Denia raisin crop will probably be about 30,000 tons, which is considerably larger than last year. Shipments to Canada will probably begin as usual about August 25, and good business is expected. At the last moment, however, word comes that the phylloxera has appeared amongst the Denia crops, and, if this is true, it is probable that a great deal of the fruit will suffer from the pest.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Green Fruit.

Toronto, July 21, 1905.

THE season for domestic fruit is now in full swing, the attention of the trade for the present being directed to raspberries, currants, and gooseberries. Arrivals of raspberries have been free during the week; a good crop is expected and prices accordingly have dropped to a seasonable level. Huckleberries are also beginning to come freely to the market. California apricots are off the market, as well as strawberries. This week has witnessed the importation of several straight car lots of California lemons, quite an unusual occurrence in this market. The reason is the scarcity of Messina stock. California lemons, which formerly have been used by the Ontario trade only in small quantities, are thought inferior to other varieties because of their comparatively poor keeping qualities and pulpy nature. We quote:

Vegetables.

Domestic vegetables of all kinds are arriving on this market in great profusion. New potatoes, which are quoted at 90c. per bushel, will in the course of the next few days have taken the place of old potatoes. Mississippi and Texas tomatoes have been replaced by Jersey stock. Spinach and squash have been crossed from our list. Green peppers are selling at $1 per basket, and cucumbers at 75c. Considerable quantities of Kalamazoo celery are noticed on the market this week, quotations ranging from 35 to 40c. a dozen. We quote:

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

Montreal, July 19, 1905.

With the continued hot weather, the fruit market has seen an improvement. The demand has grown larger and with a strong market prices have gone up. Lemons have attained top prices and are scarce.

At an auction on Monday, fifteen cars of fruits were sold quickly. Five cars of California fruits brought: for plums, $1 to $1.65; peaches, $1.30 to $1.75; pears, $3 to $3.25. Two cars of watermelons sold between 22 and 25c. a melon. One car of Elberta peaches in 4-basket crates sold at from $1 to $1.10. There is a good demand for lemons, which sell readily at $5 to $5.50 per box. Three cars of bananas were sold also, extra fancy jumbos between $1.50 and $1.65. There is but a fair demand for them owing to high prices; only 20 cars of these fruits came in last week, and this being below the average figures of usual weekly receipts, is one cause of their higher price. There are no apricots on the market.

The apple crop this year will be, it is thought, quite large and of fine quality. Peach apples are said to be specially good. Home-grown muskmelons will arrive in about ten days. Some boxes of blueberries are seen here and there, but only in small lots and not especially good looking. They sell at about 80c. per box. Some Three Rivers blueberries will come this week, but the Saguenays are not expected before the beginning of next month. Limes are in a purely nominal demand and very scarce. They sell at last week's quotations, $10 per barrel. Pineapples, not very plentiful and in good demand, sell at high prices. We quote:

general demand continues good and prices easy. Tomatoes are scarce and in good demand. Cabbage, which is plentiful, also obtains good sales. Beans and cucumbers are selling very well at quotations. Florida tomatoes are out of the market. American tomatoes (Delaine and Jersey) came in in a two-car lot last week and met with ready demand. Canadian are expected in about two weeks. Canadian celery arrives in small lots. There is a good demand for it at 40c. per doz. Radishes are still a drag, but moving very slowly, as they are in such a small demand. Green Fruit.

Bananas, for best stock, hold firm in price. Oranges are high, a few late Valencia and some early Jamaicas being offered. Lemons, which sell quite freely, are high. There is very little sale for melons. Pines are also light sellers. Early in the week native strawberries dropped very low, but are now more firmly held. A few pears, Californias, are offered; full prices asked. California plums are now fine quality. Apples as yet are poor.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS

THE big lines are busy and trade is going along well. From the lake and river routes good news is also reported, and the business is at its Summer zenith. Wheat engagements from Fort William to Montreal have been made at 5¼c. and lake and rail at 5½c. The all-rail rate is 4c. Plenty of corn has been booked from Chicago to Montreal at 4c., and it is understood that for this week a shade lower has been quoted and paid.

From Chicago to Buffalo the rate has been for the week 1½c. per bushel on corn.

shipped and mostly consigned to Liverpool or London. By the ss. Southwark for Liverpool, the Ogilvie Milling Co. had a quantity of flour running into 1,000 sacks and about a similar quantity of oatmeal. Lumber is going forward in large quantities.

The boats sailing to London direct have been carrying immense general cargoes and plenty of grain. The ss. Monmouth to London took in grain alone 23,929 bush. of wheat and 17,069 bush. of corn. In addition there were quantities of provisions, meats and flour. Asbestos, agricultural implements, car-premiums to be distributed amount, including medals, plate and specials, to upwards of $40,000 in value, of which $35,000 is in actual cash. Field Marshal Lord Roberts, V.C., is expected to officiate at the opening ceremonies on Tuesday, Aug. 29, and to be a constant visitor during the first week. The famous band of the Irish Guards, considered the finest military musical organization in the United Kingdom, and the favorite household band of His Majesty the King, will give two concerts on the grounds daily. These rates are for general information only, and are subject to change at any time without notice; it is therefore important that all contracts must be reported by wire and confirmation obtained before closing with shippers, and unless specifically stated to be prompt shipment, or shipped within ten days after date of contract from the west.

The above rates are exchanged on basis of $4.80 to £1 Stg., excepting that when freight is prepaid, the ocean proportion of the through rate must be col'ected on basis of $4.86 to the pound sterling.

If freight is offered other than specified above, on which steamship connections are accustomed to quote a weight or measurement rate at their option, prompt replies will be facilitated by giving, when applying for rate, the relative weight and measurement of the merchandise.

Shipping from Montreal is alive and the Allan line ss. Victorian took an immense cargo last week and has landed safely in the Old Country. She had 18,030 bush. wheat, over 3,000 pkgs. butter, and 10,843 boxes of cheese. Plenty of bacon and provisions generally were

GREEK CURRANT REPORT.

THE following report has been issued on the currant situation: "We have to advise a buoyant and rising market for currants, partly due to the abnormal state of the weather, which engenders fears that the 'peronosporus' malady might at any moment appear amongst the currant vines, and cause considerable destruction to the growing crop, but principally in consequence of the public declaration of the promoter of the currant syndicate to the effect that the capital necessary for the carrying out of the enterprise has been fully subscribed abroad, and that it now only requires the ratification of the Greek Parliament to come into operation so soon as the growing crop of currants is ready for shipment in August. One of the objects of the syndicate is to reduce the amount of currants available for export to about consumption requirements, and thus ensure reasonable prices for the article. The concession sought for by the syndicate empowers it, in the event of excessive currant crops, to prohibit the exports from certain districts which produce the lower qualities to the extent necessary to bring export and consumption into close relation. Growers in the prohibited districts would be entitled to sell all their produce to the syndicate at a price which, at to-day's exchange, is equivalent to 12s. 6d per cwt. net, f.o.b., in quarter-cases, so that, should the concession be granted, it is reasonable to suppose that the lowest price at which any currants will be obtainable in the open market will be somewhat above what the syndicate would be compelled to pay for the lowest quality. Dealers in currants abroad, should the concession be granted, may reckon upon an annual export of currants not exceeding consumption requirements (say about 125,000 tons), and a minimum price for currants of 12s. 6d f.o.b. per cwt. The duration of the syndicate's concession would be for 20 years. All currants purchased as above stated by the syndicate must be transformed locally into wine or alcohol for export or home consumption; but in any case of increased export demand beyond the syndicate's original yearly estimate, it would be entitled to sell out of the quantity purchased to local exporters at a price not less than equal to 15s. 6d per cwt., f.o.b. The scheme has received favorable consideration in this country, and will most probably receive the sanction of the Greek Parliament."

The assassination of the Greek Premier, it is feared, may delay the legislation referred to above.

OLD HOMESTEAD FOR QUALITY

The Old Homestead Canning Co. did not erect a solid concrete and steel-frame factory last year, or double its capacity this year for nothing. They built that factory to last, to stand the test of time. They gave the name "Old Homestead" to their goods to last, to stand the test of the consuming public.

They had an idea that an independent factory situated in the heart of the canning district fitted out with the most approved and up-to-date appliances, and consequently turning out canned goods of the very finest quality, would be supported by the public and by the trade.

They were right.

OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND CANNED GOODS

were a success from the start. The public recognized their superior quality and appreciated it.

The Old Homestead factory is now in the midst of its second season, and with its cleanly interior and surroundings, and freshly gathered fruit and vegetables, is turning out the finest canned goods in Canada.

REACHED THE HUNDRED MARK.

ONE hundred million bushels is the extent of this year's wheat crop in the Canadian Northwest, according to an estimate made by W. Whyte, second vice-president of the C.P.R. Mr. Whyte bases his estimate on the total of four million acres under crop, and the yield of 25 bushels per acre in 1902. The crops on the whole are better than in 1902, so that, barring accidents, one hundred million bushels should, he thinks, be a conservative figure. West of Portage la Prairie the crops were never better. East of that point the wheat fields are spotted in places, owing to too much wet, but the damage is inconsiderable. Because of the war in Russia, which prevented the sowing of the usual amount of wheat, and the increasing population of the United States coupled with a stationary acreage there, prices are likely to continue good. The C.P.R. are making preparations to handle their share of the crop, and when the movement begins will be able to move 400 cars each way per day from Winnipeg to Lake Superior.

In Ontario the crops got an early start, but later cold weather and excessive moisture over a large area greatly retarded growth. The outlook, however, is for a yield largely in excess of a year ago and of better quality, particularly in the southeast of the province. The hay crop, which will be a record one, is now being cut in many sections.

COMPARED WITH LAST YEAR.

The following statistics of this year's prospective grain crop in the United States, in comparison with last year's actual harvest, have been prepared by the New York Produce Exchange:

The largest corn crop harvested was in 1899, 2,666,440,000 bushels. This is the only crop which exceeded this year's promise.

Winter wheat—1905, 413,150,000 bushels, 29,723,000 acres; harvest 1904, 332,-935,346 bushels, 26,865,850 acres.

Spring Wheat—1905, 292,376,000 bushels, 17,613,000 acres; harvest 1904, 219,-464,171 bushels, 17,200,020 acres.

Total wheat—1905, 705,526,000 bushels, 47,336,000 acres; harvest 1904, 552,-399,517 bushels, 44,074,875 acres.

Total corn—1905, 2,651,110,000 bushels, 91,011,000 acres; harvest 1904, 2,467,-180,934 bushels, 92,231,581 acres.

Total oats—1905, 949,698,000 bushels, 27,680,000 acres; harvest 1904, 89,555,-552 bushels, 27,842,669 acres.

Total barley — 1905, 141,262,000 bushels, 4,974,000 acres; harvest 1904, 139,-748,958 bushels, 5,145,878 acres.

RICE MARKET RECOVERING.

A current issue of the Grocery World contains the story of the complete demoralization of the American rice market, from which foreign demand and a prospective short crop are now extricating it. The writer states that the rice industry has had a tremendous blow, due mainly to overproduction and that the price for American rice became so low that it was exported and sold abroad in competition with foreign rice raised and milled by cheap labor. The enormous surplus which has lain like a dead weight on top of the market for a year or more has now been cleaned up, and to accentuate the effect of this the coming crop will be about one-third short.

FLOUR FOR SPANISH MARKET.

Canadian flour exporters will be interested in knowing the requirements of the Spanish market, i.e., rich, cheap flour; No. 1 hard patent is not wanted. Flour is worth there $6 per 220 lbs. The duty, recently reduced, is now equivalent to 81c. per 220 lbs. Freight and other charges amount to about 90c. per 220 lbs., so that, taking everything into consideration, the margin is very small. Nobody in Spain will buy f.o.b. for cash; flour must be sold on three or six months' credit.

RETALIATING AGAINST U.S.

According to latest advices, Chinese associations have determined to stock flour mills with Chinese capital and under Chinese control, to supply the Chinese market. At present a good deal of American flour is exported to China, though, owing to the increase in the output of the Shanghai mills, the trade is threatened.

TRADE POSSIBILITIES.

A. W. Donly, Canadian commercial agent in Mexico, reports to the Trade and Commerce Department that Canadian grain exporters are likely to have a firstrate opportunity to work up a good trade with Mexico this season on account of the failure of the wheat crop there. Wheat is now selling at $1.50 in gold per bush., and Mexican farmers are holding out for more.

CEREAL NOTES.

Nothing more has been done by cereal manufacturers in the United States towards the abolition of premium schemes.

German flour was offered in Newfoundland the past month at 50 cents per barrel less than prices quoted for either Canadian or American flour. That does not look as if Germany needed to put her excessive tariff on flour into effect next year; not, at least, for the purpose of protecting her millers

The Lake of the Woods Milling Co. are about to erect ten new elevators, to be in use this season. Each elevator will cost $5,000. The locations are now being determined, and they will be distributed over the whole west. With this generous addition, the number of Lake of the Woods elevators in the west will be brought up to about seventy-five.

Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

THE SUMMER TRADE.

MIDSUMMER business has been good in the tobacco trade. The season has been exceptionally favorable. General prosperity has given a good healthy tone to commerce. Canada has been singularly free from labor troubles and now, with a record-breaking crop in sight, the same conditions of freedom of money and strength of buying are likely to persist.

Is the grocer getting the fullest benefit of these prosperous conditions? It is in the luxuries that prosperity first makes itself felt. The tobacco department can be made a lucrative department of the store if advantage is taken of the present opportunity. The goods are being sold and there is no reason why the grocer should not get his share of the business.

Government reports show a constant increase in the amount of tobacco used in this country. The smoking public is rapidly increasing. The cost of running a complete store for the sale of tobacco is necessarily great. The grocery store can run this department with practically no increase in cost beyond the small capital used in laying in a stock. The grocer has thus a great advantage over his competitors. Let him use it.

CLASSIFICATION OF CIGARS.

OF recent years the inclination of smokers toward light-hued cigars has assumed the proportions of a "craze," and the producers are finding much difficulty in meeting the demand. The manufacturers and Cuban tobacco raisers would now gladly correct the error, but after having carefully classified their products under the style of claros, colorados, maduros, etc., for decades, they find it next to impossible to dispel the delusion.

The ordinary maker of Havana cigars uses but one grade or blend of tobacco in the body or filler of his cigars. Exactly the same stock is used in his claros as in his maduros. After the cigars are made, however, his "selector" takes them in hand and classifies them according to the relative shades of the wrappers. This is done to effect a uniformity in the appearance of each box of cigars, and to enable the dealer to readily indulge the whims of the self-deluded smoker.

Inasmuch as the wrapper constitutes not more that one-tenth of the cigar, it will readily be seen that the degree of its strength or mildness is very inconsiderable in effect. In this connection, however, it is interesting to note that tobacco tradesmen versed in the intricacies of the industry rigidly bar the light-colored wrapper from their own smoking tables, knowing that it generally indicates that leaf was prematurely cut and improperly cured, and that it impairs the flavor and burn of the cigar. Cubans, who, by the way, are notably partial to mild tobacco, avoid smoking light-colored cigars just as they avoid eating a green orange or an unripe banana.

The fact is, that while the dark cigar is richer in flavor and more aromatic in the burning, it contains a smaller percentage of nicotine than does the light-colored leaf. Light cigars are mild to taste only—to nerves they are decidedly stronger in their effect.

But what enjoyment there is, says J. Edward Cowes, the cigar expert, in one of those cigars where the filler is matched to the color of the wrapper, with the result that the wrapper is always an index to the character of the smoke. After the match is applied and the smoker gets the first fragrant whiff of the burning weed, he forgets all about the cost, but prays, instead, that he may live long in a land where such supreme enjoyment is purchasable at any price.

A GREEK TOBACCO COMPANY.

The Bureau of American Republics is advised that a company is being formed in Greece under the auspices of the Bank of Athens and with the support of the principal tobacco merchants of Volo for the purpose of improving the cultivation of tobacco, developing the export trade and manufacturing cigarettes for export. Although the culture of tobacco has improved in Greece, still the quality produced is inferior to Turkish tobacco and with the object of improving it the government has for the past two years been distributing to growers Kavalla, Xanthi and Yenidje seed which have given very satisfactory results. Experiments have convinced the promoters of the undertaking that Thessaly can produce as good tobaccos as Turkey if only certain changes are made in the methods of cultivation. As Egyptian cigarettes are made of Turkish and Greek tobaccos they hope to be able to manufacture cigarettes cheaper in Greece if the various qualities used in Egypt are grown in the country. The principal market for Greek tobacco at present is Alexandria, but considerable quantities are also exported to Italy, Roumania, Germany, Tunis, and the northern provinces of Russia.

WESTERN CIGAR FACTORY.

The largest cigar factory between Toronto and Winnipeg will be erected in Fort William in the near future. The promoters of the enterprise belong to Fort William, and they expect to be in working order by July 30. A large order for leaf has already been placed and the cigar-makers will report in the course of a few days.

MINORS PROHIBITED TO SMOKE IN JAPAN.

Consular advices to the Department of Commerce and Labor state that under a law passed by the Japanese Government in 1900 minors under twenty years of age are not allowed to smoke in Japan. The law provides for the confiscation by the police of "smoking instruments" found in the possession of any youth under the age of twenty years, as well as his store of tobacco. The parents or guardians of children who knowingly permit the offense are amenable to a fine of fifty cents and dealers caught furnishing the youth tobacco are subject to a fine of $5.

AMERICAN REPORTS QUESTIONED.

Following closely on the exposure of the frauds in the United States Government reports on cotton, charges have been made against the department on their tobacco reports. It is maintained that the tobacco trust has been given advance information, thus placing it in a position to take advantage of conditions before the small dealers. A rigid investigation will be held and the statistical department may have to submit to a general reconstruction.

ANTI-CIGARETTE LEGISLATION.

The reform wave that has been spreading over the United States has not overlooked the tobacco business, for in a number of states the legislatures have enacted laws that prohibit the sale of cigarettes and cigarette tobacco not only to minors but to everyone else. The laws are most stringent, too, since the sale is not only stopped but it is illegal and punishable by fine to even give them away. Indiana, Wisconsin and Nebraska are among the states that have recently passed such laws.

Down with Acids

In our crusade against Commercial Acid Vinegars — Flavorings, Colorings and other adulterations—we have never lost faith in the belief that would win the day, not because it was called "Golden Russet Vinegar," but because it was pure fruit vinegar. The situation is so clear to us that we can scarcely understand why some grocers persist in keeping acid vinegars. Where one customer buys acid vinegar, ten buy fruit vinegar—ten wise customers.

80,000

CASES

Canned Fruits and Vegetables

That is the amount of our first order to the Canadian Canners, Limited, for the 1905 PACK.

It is 10,000 cases more than our last year's first order for the 1904 PACK, and our subsequent orders will easily carry our total purchases for the present season much over 100,000 cases.

Eighty thousand Cases of Canned Fruits and Vegetables is by far the largest single individual order ever booked in Canada.

To us Figures Talk! Let them Talk to You!

We are placing on the market, this year, Canned Fruits and Vegetables under our registered brand, "GAZELLE." These goods we guarantee will be the very best packed in Canada or elsewhere and their embossed labels the most original, attractive and artistic yet seen anywhere, being the finest production of the highest skilful workmanship in lithographing. Every tin will be wrapped in vari-colored tissue paper.

The prices will not be higher than those of the Canadian Canners, Limited, for their best brands.

CEYLON TEAS

CEYLON TEAS are the Pedals of the Tea Business. They regulate the speed of Trade. If they are "worked up" trade "whirs." If they are treated in "coasting" fashion trade goes nonchalantly.

Is your Tea Policy firmly placed on the Pedals of the Tea Business? If not, you have no regulating power. You are depending on "spasmodic-speed" orders. Why not quit the "coasting" and place your policy on the CEYLON TEA pedals? You will then have "control" of the demand.

Montreal Retail Grocers' Annual Picnic

THE twenty-fifth annual picnic, or, as expressed in the words of the programme of the association, "Pique-Nique Annuel de L'Association des Epiciers de Montreal," was held last Wednesday, July 19. The outing this year was arranged for an excursion to

Mr. A. Laurendeau,
Secretary Montreal Retail Grocers' Association.

Cornwall, and that lovely and thrifty town on the St. Lawrence was selected by the committee on account of the pleasant time that had been spent there by the grocers some six years ago. The morning of the 19th looked ominously like rain, but as it always does look like a "wet day" at the start when the grocers excurt, but turns out fine and clear later, the dark clouds did not prevent about 700 grocers and friends from gathering at Bonaventure Station at 8 and 9 o'clock, and the two special trains carried away a very optimistic and happy crowd.

On arrival at Cornwall the excursionists were met at the station by Mayor Phillips and civic delegation, accompanied by the local band. After an address of welcome had been extended by the mayor and the freedom of the factory town thrown in, the excursionists took the trolley cars to Cornwall's lovely St. Lawrence Park. Here booths and pavilions had been erected to serve the inner man and permit the younger members to enjoy themselves in the mazy dance. The games and races were run off in the adjoining grounds of the Cornwall Lacrosse Club, and passed off in the usual picnic style—some with evident satisfaction to the participants and others with more or less grumbling. It was apparent to The Grocer that there was an evident lack of proper management in some of the events, and the committee in charge of the games could with advantage have taken a course of instruction from the managers of some of the prominent Montreal athletic associations. It is to be hoped that next year's picnic will see an improvement in respect to more prompt and regular running off of the various events. In every other respect the affair was most enjoyable, as the weather was ideal, not too warm with just enough breeze to temper the sun's rays.

The number of games and races totaled twenty-three, and space prevents our enumerating the list in its entirety. However among those that created the liveliest interest may be mentioned the baseball match between the Point St. Charles Grocery Clerks and the Westmount Grocers' B.B. Club, which resulted in a victory for the "Pointers" by score of 4 to 2. The prizes in this event were handsome solid gold stick pins, given by the Cowan Cocoa Co., Limited, Toronto.

Mr. P. Daoust,
President Montreal Retail Grocers' Association.

The Comfort Soap race for ladies was participated in by seventeen wives and sweethearts of members of the association. This race was conducted under the management of Mr. F. D. Cockburn, manager of the Montreal branch of Comfort Soap, assisted by Mr. Frank Adams of the same branch, and Mr. Fred. Perry, the solid and genial Quebec traveler. A photo taken before the race of the participants is here reproduced. The prizes in this event were beautiful and valuable, the first being a gold watch, second a silver watch, the two events being won respectively by Mrs. Rhodes and Mrs. A. Laurandeau, wife of Mr. Laurandeau, secretary.

The tug-of-war between Montreal and Ottawa grocers was won by the Montreal contingent. The 100 yard race of the Delegates of the Federation of Retail Dealers of Montreal, won by Mr. J. A. Maynard, second Mr. J. A. Beaudry, and third Mr. P. Daoust, president of the Grocers' Association. The 100 yard race of chairmen of committees was won by Mr. A. E. Landry, of the city traveling staff of Hudon, Hebert & Cie., and the prize was a handsome and valuable bronze statue valued at $40, presented by L. Chaput, Fils & Cie. Mr. Landry seems to have a regular "cinch" on this race, as this was the eleventh year in which he has carried off the first prize.

The judges of the games were Mr. Jos. L. Ethier, of Laporte, Martin & Cie.; Mr. Armand Chaput, of L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., and Mr. W. G. Middleton, of the Tamilkande Tea Co., and arduous though their work was at times they carried it out thoroughly and well.

The general committee consisted of N. Chartrand, Ald. N. Lapointe, A. Bastien, Ald. E. Turner, J. A. Beaudry, P. Bruneau, Treasurer V. Raby, and their work and oversight of affairs was commendable.

At two o'clock a banquet was held at the Rossmore House, presided over by President Daoust and Vice-President E. Upton. Among the guests present were the following well-known Ottawa grocers: W. H. Scott of F. A. Scott & Co.; H. Ellis, of Ellis Bros., secretary Ottawa Grocers' Association; A. Driscoll, of H. H. Brennan & Co.; F. Hub-

Mr. P. Bruneau,
Treasurer Montreal Retail Grocers' Association

and, of Bate & Co.; H. W. Booth, J. Thompson, W. Lanthier, D. Halliday, A. Johnstone, P. Lamoreaux, also James Eadie, Eastern Ontario organizer of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada; Armand Chaput, of L. Chaput, Fils & Cie.; Jos. L. Ethier, of Laporte, Martin & Cie.; Mayor Phillips, of Cornwall; J. A. Beaudry, secretary federation; N. Chartrand, Ald. N. A. Lapointe, H. P. Nightingale, of "Le Prix Courant;" W. H. Seyler, of The Canadian Grocer, etc. Speeches were delivered by P. Daoust, president, Mr. Chaput, H. Ellis, on behalf of the Ottawa grocers; Jos. L. Ethier, Mayor Phillips, and Mr. Raby. The thanks of the visiting grocers were tendered to Mayor Phillips by President Daoust. His worship replied, thanking the Montreal grocers for selecting Cornwall as the outing spot of the association. Mr. Ellis made a speech of much interest, expressing the thanks of himself and his fellow Ottawa grocers for the invitation, and in return inviting their hosts to attend the picnic of the Ottawa Retail Grocers on August 7, to Carleton Place, promising all a good time. At the conclusion of the banquet a return was made to the park and the balance of the games run off.

At 6 and 6.30 the two special trains carried the party back to Montreal, all feeling that a pleasant and happy outing had came to a successful end.

Mr. J. A. Beaudry,
Secretary Federation of Montreal Retail Merchants.

"Pique-Nique" Notes.

Some of those balloons that were sent up appeared very wobbly, and seemed to have a special fondness for the blue St. Lawrence.

First miss in many years for Mr. Fred Hodge, of Chase & Sanborn. His decisions as one of the judges were always appreciated.

Mr. W. H. Scott, of the Ottawa delegation, was looking for pointers. Wonder did he get any! Echo answers, "we wonder."

Now, ho! for the great picnic of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association to Carleton Place on the Capital City's Civic Holiday, August 7.

Perrin's Biscuits were much in evidence in the genial personality of Mr. Chas. Woods, city traveler for London's well-known biscuit makers.

A. W. Childs, traveler for Laporte, Martin & Cie., was here, there and everywhere, and found many friends to assist him in making the day pass pleasantly.

Mr. A. G. Middleton
Of Tamilkande Tea Co., one of the judges.

Mr. Fred Perry, on his box of Comfort, looked cool, comfortable and contented. That duck suit was not quite so white on arrival at Montreal—the "soot" of the engine played havoc with it.

St. Lambert "across the bridge" was represented by Mr. Hector Bisaillon, and as a dancer he certainly was one of the best. He enjoyed the "light fantastic" supremely, if appearances count for anything.

Mr. Jos. L. Ethier
Of Laporte, Martin & Cie, Montreal, one of the judges

Mr. D. Dineen of Mathewson's Sons appeared to be thoroughly popular, and took pains to make every one as happy as he could. His sister, Miss Dineen, who was visiting here fron Chicago, was chaperoned by Mr. Dineen and Mr. J. A. Lapointe.

"Heinz Pickles" were around in the person of A. Caron, traveler for Quebec Province for the 57 varieties. How many "varieties" Mr. Caron demonstrated that day is not known to the scribe, but what there were were well advertised.

Our old friend and subscriber, Mr. J. A. Berthiaume, the Park avenue grocer, was apparently one of the best-known local grocers attending. As an exponent of the terpsichorean art Mr. Berthiaume is a winner, he having secured second prize for waltzing in the dancing competition.

By the way, what was the matter with that important section of the grocers' association, the English-speaking grocers? Where was Mr. A. D. Fraser, Mr. Geo. Graham, Mr. John Robertson, and the other old veterans? Ex-Secretary J. P. Dixon, where was he?

Mr. Ed. Cowan, of the Cowan Cocoa Co., Limited, was one of the most popular young men on the grounds. The way Eddy runs a base ball match would do Tommy Bannon's heart good to see. Manager Kreitner would make no mistake in keeping his eye on Eddy for next season. Certainly "Cowan's Cocoa" was well to the front.

The joyful news that trading stamps were doomed by the passage of the bill by the Senate that day only reached the ears of the grocers on arrival at the Montreal station—but it was joyful news. Secretary Beaudry, who had worked so hard and long to kill the evil of the grocers, wore "the smile that won't come off."

Ald. N. A. Lapointe is always a welcome and conspicuous, as well as popular, attendant at the grocers' outings.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL.

Ottawa, Ont., July 26, 1905.

THE bill prohibiting the use of trading stamps passed both houses of parliament and becomes law on November 1 next. It will be a criminal offence to issue them, punishable by heavy fines.

There was considerable opposition to the measure in the Commons. In the Senate also the bill was strenuously opposed. One Senator spoke against the bill for several hours. It is said that it was the intention of those favoring the trading stamp interests to "talk" the bill out of the Senate. The House of Commons had adjourned and the members were beginning to leave for their homes. The Senate was not ready for prorogation, on account of the prolonged criticism of the bill. For a time it looked somewhat as if, in order to facilitate prorogation, the bill would be laid aside for the present session. But the Government flatly refused to go on with prorogation till the bill was disposed of in the Upper House, and also refused to grant the Senators any pay—with their increased allowances for the present session.

Furthermore, a Senator supporting the bill suggested that an amendment be brought in making the measure even more severe than it was. The opponents of the bill took the hint, and it was soon given its third reading in the Senate in practically the same form as when presented to the House of Commons several days ago. The new law is an amendment to the criminal code.

The trading stamp people, it is understood, are making active preparations to fight the measure in the law courts. They claim that the legislation is an "illegal restraint of trade." They will demand $200,000 damages. It will be remembered that the Minister of Justice said the legislation was of a novel character. The bill was opposed by several members in the House, and a number of those who did not oppose it regarded it as unworkable in some respects. The legal fight will consequently be watched with a good deal of interest. Your correspondent interviewed several Ottawa grocers this week to ascertain their views on the practice of issuing trading stamps. Very few look upon them with favor; the majority appear to be pleased that the Act prohibiting them has been passed.

Celebrated Soap Race. Montreal Retail Grocers' Picnic, Cornwall, July 19, 1905.

Goodall Bros., Wellington Street.

Mr. Goodall said: The trading stamp business has been a great nuisance, and I am very glad it is to be done away with, because the trading stamp people have practically been living on the public. This is my candid opinion.

H. Armstrong, Pretoria and O'Connor.

It is the best thing that ever happened for both trades people and public alike, that the trading stamp pest has been put out of business. When a customer asks for a pound of sugar now he need not fear light weight. I am very glad to know that they will not be in use now for any lengthy period.

W. J. Eastcott, Bank Street.

It was nothing but a system of blackmail, this trading stamp business; I don't think a merchant could use them honestly if he expected to pay one hundred cents on the dollar. It is a good thing for the country at large that they have been abolished.

P. D. Herbert, Bank Street.

Undoubtedly we give away five per cent. of our profits each year to the trading stamp company, which we might better have in our pockets. They were a very good thing to bring trade, but I am very glad to think they are a thing of the past.

G. E. Hopper, Bank Street.

I am pleased to think that this bill has passed legislature. It is impossible to give trading stamps with groceries and give them honestly; because, for every dollar's worth of groceries we sell we have to pay the trading stamp company five per cent.; or, in other words, 33 1-3 per cent. of our living profits, which is just about 15 to 20 per cent. on groceries.

Mr. York, Concession Street.

I was always against trading stamps; they were the greatest curse the country ever had. I handled the green cash coupons myself, and found there was nothing honest nor straight in them, and I was very glad to give them up, for I found that they were hurting my business. It will be a great boon to the grocery trade when the law goes into effect.

H. Ellis, Concession Street.

I am very glad trading stamps are a thing of the past. They have been harmful to trade, in the grocery line especially.

Trade in Ottawa this week has been very brisk. Sugar has had the call; fruit preserving has, no doubt, been the cause of the increased demand. Fruits still continue high, but are of the very best stock.

A BOOK ON COTTON.

Cotton Manual: By J. T. Broadbent. Boston: Lord and Nagle Co. Toronto: The MacLean Publishing Co. Price, 75 cents.

This little volume is one of the most instructive treatises which have appeared for some time. No one on the continent is more capable of dealing with the subject of cotton than the author, and his concise and clear statements represent the study and experience of years. The scope of the present work is outlined in the preface. "It will serve as a handy reference book for persons connected with, or interested in, cotton manufacturing, as the arrangement in catechism form will assist in readily obtaining a direct answer to questions bearing upon any particular branch of the study; at the same time the entire volume forms a treatise on cotton from the seed to the mill."

The universal consumption of cotton makes a work on this subject of great general interest. To the drygoodsman and cotton manufacturer it is a necessity. An intelligent consideration of the subject would put a man in a position both to buy and sell more advantageously. In view of the present excitement over this staple the book is particularly timely.

The Trade Calculator and Ready Reckoner—By W. de Vos, Kandy, Ceylon.

For merchants and manufacturers having business with India or the east this book is invaluable. Besides a complete list of weights and measures with their various English and American equivalents, there are numerous tables for the conversion of native money into dollars and cents, interest tables, etc. A valuable section is devoted to quick methods of estimating freight rates by water or rail and tables are also given for working out custom dues. Altogether the book is complete in the treatment of the work which it undertakes.

ISN'T IT SILLY?

It's more than funny!" It's silly and childish—the appeal to sentiment addressed to the retail trade of the country by a few Canning Firms and one of their friends, against a particular concern by much the largest in that business. Their sole complaint is that the Canadian Canners, Limited, is quoting prices too low, and that is also their only argument for seeking the sympathy of the retail trade. It looks rather more like a cry for help!

We feel sure the retailers are very little interested, if at all, in the many articles which have been written on this subject. The Wholesale Trade read them with perhaps just a little less indifference, because they find them amusing. Who has ever heard of a firm succeeding in taking business away from a larger competitor, or getting the preference over him, by holding that competitor responsible for the low figures ruling? It is pure and simple business common sense and fairness that the firm who makes the low prices is entitled to the orders, and the intelligent retailer will place them with it, through the wholesale trade, if he is acquainted with the true facts.

If the Canadian Canners' methods of conducting their business were not right and their products were not of irreproachable quality, over ninety per cent of the wholesale grocers of the country, including the largest firms, would not buy their canned goods exclusively from them, as at present.

To succeed in antagonizing the retail trade against the products of the Canadian Canners, Limited, as is now being attempted, would require better arguments than have been advanced so far.

THE LARGEST EXCLUSIVELY WHOLESALE GROCERS IN CANADA

N. B. Markets.

Office of The Canadian Grocer,
St. John, N.B., July 24, 1905.

PERHAPS we never so appreciated how beautifully cool St. John is in the Summer as this year, when in New York even the dogs and cats die in the streets because of the heat. Away from the salt water, in our own province, and even alongside the salt water, at Halifax, they are not as pleasantly cool as we are. And then the beauty of our surroundings, it is a great mystery so few western Canadians come here. The very much larger number of the tourists are Americans. They have one advantage—they can come by water, and it is a beautiful trip.

Rice continues firm, with quite a wide range of quality offering. Even in such a cheap line it seems a matter of buying at the lowest price, rather than of quality with many. Cream of tartar is firmer.

Oil—Sales of burning oils continue good. The very low price is still held. The orders for Fall have been largely booked. To secure this business buyers get exceedingly good terms. They are fully protected in regard to price. In lubricating, sales are good. Paint oils have a fair demand. Turpentine is still very high. Linseeds are low. Cod oil is in light supply. Prices are low.

Salt—As reported, Liverpool coarse salt is held at rather higher figures. The sale has been large. In fine just a steady sale. Cheese salt in barrels is not so scarce, but the Canadian shippers seem to find it impossible to fill orders.

Canned Goods—Spot sales are just fair. The association do not control the trade here, several of the largest buyers being outside. Locally all the dealers are agreed on selling price. The extreme low price on new peas has led to the idea that all vegetables will be cheap; this does not follow. Both canners and dealers are carrying peas over while on tomatoes market is bare. New strawberries are held at full figures. Salmon is rather lower than last year. Gallon apples are quoted as last season, but this is a line in which sales have been slow for some years. In domestic fish, sardines are plentiful. Other lines such as haddies, etc., short.

Dried Fruit—The chief interest is in the California market. Prunes, which opened so much higher than last year, have already advanced a half cent. Small sizes, which are in demand here, are particularly scarce. Evaporated peaches have also advanced a half cent. Apricots, which opened low, are unchanged. There is much interest in how raisins will open. It is thought at quite full figures. Valencias open quite low. Malaga, loose, on the other hand are quoted high. There is yet no word about currants. Spot market firmer. Peels, figs and dates will show little change. Evaporated apples are higher, but sell slowly. Valencia onions are to hand and quality is good. Dried apples could be bought low.

Molasses— Situation is unchanged. Barbadoes and Porto Rico are the two grades offered. Prices are comparatively low, but are quite firmly held.

Sugar—Prices are unchanged. There is a good steady sale at this season. Stocks are rather light. There is not yet much confidence in the market.

Fish—Salmon continue quite plentiful. It has been a good season. Prices are rather lower. A few shad are seen. In dry codfish, high figures still rule, but not so firmly held. Pickled herring also are shaded a little, prices have been extarios are off somewhat in price. Manivery low, tend somewhat firmer. Boneless fish unchanged.

Flour, Feed and Meal—In flour, Ontario are off somewhat in price. Manitoba flour seems firm with fair sales. Feed has but a limited inquiry. Oats are scarce and high. Oatmeal firmly held; market is well stocked. Cornmeal is quoted rather higher. While quite often changing in price, changes are slight. Beans, while very dull, are quoted higher.

Green Fruit.

Dealers continue very busy. Oranges high and scarce. Lemons high with a fair sale. Bananas hold firm and sell freely. Some very fair new apples are now being received. Strawberries have been very plentiful. Our local cultivated berries are particularly good. The ruling retail price has been three boxes for a quarter. California pears are high. The first car is to hand. In peaches and plums even figures quoted. Melons and pines have but a limited sale.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, July 27, 1905.

THERE has been quite an advance in the cheese market, very largely unexpected, but after all, circumstances seem to warrant the advance, perhaps not quite to the full extent of the boom in the country, but meanwhile the situation is certainly very "bullish."

The cheese market has been ruled for some time by the covering of "short sales" which were made at low prices, so that sellers here are losing heavily, while the more fortunate British importers are getting a considerable quantity of cheap cheese, which have kept the markets across the Atlantic down, and thus the legitimate order trade is much handicapped, as importers of these cheap cheese in Great Britain are willing to turn over their purchases at a moderate profit, which means at prices less than what goods for prompt shipment could be secured here.

But now, we are past the June make and actually on July-made cheese, when many expected a reaction to lower prices; instead, we are getting an advance.

The reason of this is that the recent hot weather and the troublesome flies have caused a considerable shrinkage in the flow of milk, and, with the large demand for butter, the make of cheese is actually short; further, with no accumulation of stocks, either here or in Great Britain, there is meanwhile absolutely nothing to check the bullish movement; the demand is on and the supplies are barely enough for this demand; and those who need goods to supply their natural trade must pay the market price.

It is as yet not certain that British importers will follow this very sudden advance in prices at once, but eventually they will have to do this, if they keep on sending their orders here at current quotations. There may be a still further advance expected, taking the cost of present holdings here into consideration. A decline in prices is meanwhile hardly possible; the awkward part is now that the popular "six-penny cut" is not profitable at present cost, and if this price is raised by the retailers, it may check the consumption and cause a slow, dragging market here.

Butter has scored another advance; the price of 23c. per pound has been paid in the country and yet the demand has not been checked; our friends across the Atlantic do not like to pay these prices, as they can no longer retail the butter at a shilling per pound, but the actual demand has been the cause of the advance and present prices are quite likely to hold on.

Evidently, so far this season, this is a year of high prices, which should be a stimulus to the farmers of Canada to increase their herds of cattle and their production of both cheese and butter.

LONDON PRODUCE LETTER.

By our London, Eng., Correspondent.

ALTHOUGH it is officially reported that the London butter market rules firmer, it cannot truthfully be said that business is very brisk. There has been an advance of 2s on fine Canadian, but otherwise prices remain as last week, and a ready sale is not being secured, particularly in saltless. As far as the Eastern Townships are concerned, saltless makes 102s. with difficulty, and salt the same figure. Considering present c.i.f. prices, viz., 102s. salt, and 102s. 6d. saltless, those on the spot should find a readier sale. In all probability the present holiday season has a great deal to do with these dull times, for outward trains are packed with Londoners off to the seaside and holiday resorts. Russian butter on the spot is fetching 90s. to 92s. medium, and 94s. to 98s. best. Latest reports announce that Copenhagen prices remain unaltered (finest 110s. to 112s.) but should prices go up 100s. will be asked for Russian. The shortage of butter from all sources against last year is 7,000 tons, and cold stores are depleted. The excessively dry weather, also, is having a material effect on cattle. Canada is particularly fortunate in apparently having an ample supply of butter, and when about the middle of August conditions become more settled and the demand improves, good business should be done. No more New Zealand is yet reported, either on the spot or on the way, to fill the gap caused by last week's clearing out. In fact there is not an ounce of New Zealand to be had. Some New South Wales and Queensland butter is on the way here, and stiffish prices are being asked for this. Whether the prices asked will be realized time alone will show. Reports from Australia say that later on supplies from that quarter of the globe will be larger, so that Canadian prices will have to be kept as low as possible. Up to now Canadian quotations have been away up. Imports of Canadian butter here from May 1 to July 8 amount to 28,894 cwts. as against 29,756 cwts. last year.

The Butter Bill is still hanging fire. Mr. Balfour, while admitting the present adulterated practices to be against "the general interests of the agricultural community," claims that the introduction of the bill into the House "at a period of the Session when controversy proves absolutely fatal to any progress," would prove an obstacle to more important matters, and so the matter stands at present.

The improvement in the bacon market, which was commented upon last week, is still on the upward grade, and the increased demand has resulted in improved prices all round. Continental bacon has gone up something like 5s., and Canadian pea-fed bacon has advanced also. Advices show that there has been a falling off in Irish killings. Canadian long hams (green) fetch 59s. to 64s., a slightly stiffer figure than last week. These are London prices. In Liverpool the bacon demand is small, as is also the demand for butter and cheese. Reports from Manchester also say that business is very slow and that the heat is having a bad effect on butter, so that it would appear that all over the country the position may be described as dull, with a tendency to slight improvement.

The cheese position is the brightest at present, and prices are firm with a probability of continued good demand. Fine Canadian have advanced from 47s. to 47s. 6d. and 48s. 6d. New Zealand cheese is following the fate of that country's butter, and is rapidly being cleared up.

PACKING CO. EXCURSION.

The employes of the Ingersoll Packing Co. held their eighth annual excursion and picnic at Port Burwell on Wednesday, July 20, when about four hundred treated themselves to the outing. Games and sports were indulged in and the resources of Lake View Park generally were taxed to the utmost to provide the pleasure seekers with suitable holiday amusement.

Arrangements have been completed for the erection of a large pork packing plant by the D. Gunn Co., at the Union Stock Yards Co., Toronto, to cost in the neighborhood of $225,000.

GERMANS OPPOSE TARIFF.

The German people are being aroused to the bad results which are bound to follow the reactionary tariff policy which their government is about to adopt towards the United States at the instigation of the agrarian element. Consul General Guenther at Frankfort, who is probably the best-posted American consular official in Germany, with the exception of the consul general at Berlin, reports that in an overwhelming majority, the shipping lines, manufacturing and exporting interests, and the working population of Germany, are averse to the new commercial treaties and look with dread upon the prospective effects of the new tariff law.

The chambers of commerce and trade in their annual reports to the government express themselves in a similar way, and have rather dark forebodings as to the future.

Provisions—An active demand for provisions of all kinds is recorded during the week under review. Owing to the hot weather which has led to a falling off in receipts of hogs the price of cured meat is generally higher than it was a week ago. Quotations on hogs this week vary from $6.70 to $6.85, and one country buyer is of the opinion that $7 will rule before the week is out. Export quotations on bacon range from 54s to 62s., considerably higher than last week. This is due to increased demand, and lighter deliveries of hogs in Canada and Denmark.

Hogs on foot are quoted $7.00 to $7.30; dressed $9.75 to $10.00. There is a brisk demand for hams, the market having advanced a cent. Hams of 8 to 12 lbs. are worth 14 1-2c.; 12 to 18 lbs., 14c.; 18 to 25 lbs., 13 1-2c.; picnic, 11c.; bacon, 13 1-2c.; Windsor bacon, 13 1-2c. Lard is firm at quotations. We quote:

Cheese—This has been a boom week in cheese partly owing to the covering of short sales, and the absence of stocks made advance imperative. As yet the market abroad has not responded, a current cable from Bristol being to the effect that there was nothing doing at prices prevailing. We quote Western Ontario 12 1-2c., Eastern Ontaro 10 3-8c., Quebec 10 1-8c. seconds 9 1-2 to 9 3-4c.

Eggs—There is a good demand for eggs with prices firm and of an unward tendency. Receipts are slow and show considerable loss off. Straight gathered stock are worth 16c. to 16 1-2c., straight candled 17c. to 17 1-2c., No. 1 17c. to 18c., and selected 20c. to 21c.

Provisions—Pork, barrelled, is somewhat higher in price and sales are very light. Beef, particularly American, is very scarce. Higher values rule. Pure lard is held firm at high prices. Refined lard has held slightly advanced. Fresh beef is reported exceedingly dull, and prices in both western and domestic are lower. Veal, which is not so freely received, holds quite firm. Lamb which has a good demand, is lower. Mutton, low. Pork is little offered.

TRAVELERS' ADVICE CARDS

There is more or less similarity in the advice cards sent out by travelers to their customers, and a deviation from the orthodox and accepted style is readily remarked upon. The F. J. Castle Co., Limited, Ottawa, traveling staff have lately employed a new style card. Instead of the usual small print giving notice of coming of salesmen with the traveler's name in small, almost inconspicuous type, the name of the salesman is printed in large, bold letters across the centre of the card, with the statement that C. E. Fitzsimmons, or other traveler, as the case may be, will call on or about the ———, with the name of the firm in fair-sized type at foot. As an attention arrester no merchant can fail to be struck with the fact that "somebody" is coming to see him, and that "somebody's" name will impress itself upon his memory. The Grocer was bound to admit that it was a "telling card."

Tenders opened July 24 for the business and plant of the Canada Biscuit Works, Toronto, but were so low that the assets will likely be sold in separate parcels by auction.

Conceit and Ability

ARE as far apart as the poles. Conceit promises much without the ability to fulfil. Allow us to demonstrate our ability to produce the best line of goods in America. Peas are now receiving particular attention. It is a ten to one shot many dealers will load up with old stock, no need to say what that quality is. We have installed the most modern machinery in the world for canning peas and we know how to operate the same. Now, with a technical knowledge and practical experience of more than 25 years' canning peas, does it not stand to reason that we are able to produce the nicest canned green peas in this or any country. No section of the world is so specially adapted to the growing of delicious peas as Canada; and by our special process we know that the consumer will buy 10 cans of "Autumn Leaf Brand" Frankford canned peas to one of any other if you have them in stock. We put up six grades of peas and label every grade true to name. It is very important to know what you are buying. Cut the tins, see the clear appearance of the syrup, taste the peas; note they are young and tender, canned the same day as picked. No need to wash or rinse our peas, but warm them up in the same syrup they are canned in and you will have as delicious a pea as is possible to get picked in your own garden. Again, we say, it is to both your own and customer's benefit that you should demonstrate the facts mentioned above. If your Jobber does not handle our goods get on the line with us.

RESPECTFULLY YOURS,

Old Ideas!

When Windsor Salt is ready for the market it has passed the most critical examination of the largest and most progressive Salt Factory in Canada. There are no old fogy ideas in force at the Canadian Salt Co.'s Works. Where Windsor Salt is made everything is up-to-date.

We believe in progression. Old-fashioned ideas were well enough in their day and so was the candle light, but the world moves and you must be up and doing if you would keep in touch with it.

Old fogy ideas have no part in the making of Windsor Salt

BUILD UP SMALL INDUSTRIES.

PROSPERITY has been so general in this country of late that the very air seems to breathe of it and people look for it as a matter of course. At the present time the grassy meadows, the fields of growing grain, the loaded orchards and the contented cattle proclaim the fact, while the activity in the warehouse, the busy mill and workshop, running night and day in many instances, tell more plainly than many written chapters the prosperous state of affairs. In spite of this there is many an older settled town and village in Canada at a standstill, when such need not be. The large cities are growing larger, the west and north are being settled in a satisfactory manner and yet a large number of the smaller centres look on and wonder why they do not share in the general advance. They cannot imagine why things do not come their way.

The reason is obvious. They are asleep. Like the ancient town of legendary fame, they have sat down to rest, unable to realize that they have within themselves the potential energy—brains and capital—that rightly directed would double the municipality's population in a few years. While this is not a general state of affairs, the places that should feel guilty on the subject are not few. There isn't a town in Canada included in this category but has men of means, whose capital is unproductive—unproductive beyond the interest of a savings' bank or a loan or mortgage. Such capital placed toward starting a number of small industries of the right sort in the community would act as a magician's wand and change the whole order of things within half a generation.

In most cases towns owe their present size to a few men of pluck and enterprise, who, starting in a small way, have built up manufacturing industries that have been the mainstay of the people.

Since this has been, what greater results might be expected to-day where conditions for manufacturing are so much better than formerly. Because some places have had their fingers burned bonusing something that has not been successful, the moneyed men therein twist a few extra coils around the necks of their money bags and shake their heads at the thought of promoting an industry. Bonusing questionable industries has been an evil in the past and must continue so. A concern started with the sounding of trumpets and the clashing of cymbals by outside individuals with a town's money may succeed all right—many times it hasn't—but let the same industry be started with private capital, the men interested sitting at the directors' board, and there is little danger of the outcome.

Half a dozen smaller concerns covering a variety of manufacture give more stability to a place than a single plant six times as large as the average of the others. If the towns that have not grown appreciably within the past few years would give the matter a thought, and if the men who have the stock in trade to promote industry are public-spirited enough to do so, the way to bring their native or adopted place forward should be clear before them. A number of industries started either under one or separate management and rightly looked after can hardly fail to bring about the desired result.

THE HOLIDAY SEASON.

DURING July and August nature extends an invitation to business men to break away from the strenuous life of modern commercialism and fraternize with the birds and plant life of farm and forest. Nature is at its best at this season, and the influence of the fresh air and Summer warmth, free from the cares of business life, is what is most needed by the man who has been giving his best energies for months or years in developing the business he is engaged in.

It is a good investment to exchange a few dollars for health and happiness, and every man owes it to himself, as well as to those dependent upon him, to take a brief respite from business activity during the warm Summer season. And if this reasoning is correct it applies to the clerk as well as the merchant. A holiday will do the clerk as much good as the employer, and recognition of faithful services by the granting of a week or fortnight's holidays at the employer's expense will do much in encouraging the employe to do his utmost to further the interests of the appreciative merchant.

A fresh, vigorous brain will give better service than a fagged one. The saving of a few dollars now by economizing on a vacation will not pay if it means a break down next season and a heavy doctor's bill to pay then. The Summer is the time of gladness, and it is a paying investment to partake liberally of the opportunities provided for communing with nature. Take a holiday this month and encourage those associated with you in business to do likewise.

THE MAPLE SYRUP QUESTION.

"CAN any good thing come out of Canada," is a question which would rouse the righteous indignation of any loyal Canadian, and yet we sit still and wink while certain manufacturers turn out spurious food products. The difficulty is not that the manufactured product is not wholesome—but that it is a sham—and the consumer does not get what he bargains for. The practise may have the warrant of expediency or economy, as far as local trade is concerned. The manufacturer, however, is living only for the present who allows his trade-mark to be affixed to an article that is not what it is represented to be. Even now the English consumer is complaining because maple syrup "Made in Canada" is lacking in the real maple flavor. It is to be regretted that a few Canadian manufacturers are so forgetful of their interests as to necessitate what might be appropriately dubbed a Government detective service. Out of 212 samples of maple syrup and sugar collected by the Inland Revenue Department in February last, no less than 116 were found to be adulterated, leaving 8 doubtful and 88 (or less than a third) genuine. Two collections were made, one previous to the maple sugar season, and one after. In the first lot only 24.3 per cent. of the samples were found to be pure, while 63.4 per cent. were genuine in the next collection. By way of extenuation—poor as the plea may be—it is urged that where the samples were found impure the cause was always "adulteration by foreign sugar." We suppose the manufacturers must have in view an article "for price" when they indulge in mixing. In fairness to the consumer, however, such manufactured products should be labeled "compound," and it is to be hoped that the Inland Revenue Department will continue to prosecute the good work it has begun in this direction until the nefarious practice is stamped out for all time.

SHOULD RETAILERS SOLICIT?

IN these days of fierce competition it is frequently debated whether the retail trade should adopt the aggressive methods of wholesale dealers and endeavor to force business upon the consumer.

Should the grocer fold his hands and wait for business to come to him, serene in the consciousness that he doesn't need to become a pedlar, or should he emulate the manufacturers or jobbers from whom he himself buys and put a little more of the personal element into his business?

In considering this question, the dealer cannot deny that it is always desirable to increase the number of sales; and, in the grocery business especially, the best means to do it is to make buying as convenient and pleasant as possible. And this latter problem, too, will be differently solved in different localities; different methods would have to be adopted in large cities and in country towns.

In large cities some retailers are trying to capture this trade by adopting the Marshal Field method of making their places of business pleasant and comfortable for customers, some going so far as to instal free telephone booths and reading and writing rooms. But in the smaller places this is quite impracticable.

Even in the least populous localities, however, the grocer can add to his business by keeping his store neat and attractive. If a customer comes in to buy a pound of tea, it is because he needs it. But, if he happen to see a nice array of fancy bottled goods it is often possible for the salesman, by a little judicious urging, to sell him a great deal more than he intended buying at first.

The number of Canadian grocers who go so far as to send their men out to solicit trade direct is rapidly increasing. Many have adopted the plan because they feel the necessity of giving the very best possible service to their patrons, and prefer, moreover, not to allow competitors the ghost of a chance of getting into the good graces of trade they have fought for and won. They have come to realize the value of the personal element in an aggressive campaign—to a large extent the secret of successful merchandising in competition with home trade, as well as the mail-order houses which threaten to become an important feature of Canadian trade.

COPYING CANADA.

ONCE again the Mother Country has followed the lead of her "Premier Colony" in matters of trade; this time in the formation of an association, representative of British manufacturers and trades interested in export business, to be known as the Manufacturers' Association of Great Britain. The object of the new institution will be similar to that of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, namely, co-ordinating the various industrial forces and co-operating among the leading manufacturers and merchants, chambers of commerce, etc., to promote and expand British trade in foreign and colonial markets.

Watch the temperature of your store, says the scribe, and see to it that your warehouse, storeroom and cellar are properly ventilated. Midsummer weather is here and unless you are careful your grocery stock will be damaged by the excessive heat and humidity of August. Neglect to keep the air of your store pure and in circulation will rob you of profit faster than you can make it, and keep you guessing why your capital is not increasing in proportion to volume of business done.

The working machinery provides for commercial agents in all parts of the world, similar to the Canadian commercial agency system. These agents will report on openings for trade and local changes and conditions within their respective spheres, and disseminate such information among firms whom it will most benefit. A trade index of British manufacturers will also be compiled in the chief commercial languages of the world, and distributed free to chambers of commerce, mercantile houses, and other business interests at home and abroad. Information regarding the commercial standing of business firms or mercantile houses, railway rates and shipping freights all over the world, will be collected and supplied, and a staff organized capable of corresponding on technical and commercial subjects in any language, and of translating commercial catalogues and similar documents. One of the main objects of the association will be the dissemination of knowledge of British goods in all possible over-sea markets.

PROGRESSIVE JAPAN.

THE newly-discovered nation of Japan continues to forge ahead in a way that surprises even the most sanguine of her supporters. In manufacturing, the Japs are already in the very front rank, and so keen has Japanese competition become in their home market that British and German traders show signs of alarm. A few years ago the foreigner brought his goods to Japan and succeeded in cultivating a first-class demand for them. It was not long before it began to dawn upon the unsophisticated Jap that he was paying out money to a stranger for something that might as well be produced at home. Directly he set about copying articles of foreign manufacture with such imitative skill that even the connoisseur to-day finds it difficult to distinguish between the copy and the original.

Japan has not been slow to make the most of such opportunities as were afforded at the Osaka Exhibition, held recently in Japan, and it would not be surprising if her aggressiveness in trade and commerce were to extend to Canada within the next few years. Even now there is talk of certain Japanese interests going into the fish canning business for export trade.

Ernest L. Harris, commercial agent at Eibenstock, Germany, writes to the New York Journal of Commerce on the subject as follows:

"The products of Japan's industries are gradually forcing themselves into various markets of the world, where their competition is being felt by English and German traders. Japanese ingenuity and industry are beginning to exert an influence to such an extent that their exports are increasing, while at the same time the markets in Japan are passing more and more into the hands of home manufacturers. This is causing a reduction of imports. It has long been thought that the Japanese were masters of the art of imitation, but it is now generally admitted the world over that they also possess powers of great initiative.

"A recent report of the British consul at Kobe records the fact that the import of cotton yarns shows a big decrease, due to the increased growth of the Japanese industry, which is gradually but surely ousting Lancashire coarse cottons from the Japanese market. Among woolen manufacturers the outlook for imported goods is not bright. The manufacture of flannels in Osaka has improved to such an extent that imports of this article have fallen off considerably. Japanese manufacturers today are producing the cheapest kind of cotton underwear, socks, toilet soap and lamps. The indigo and tobacco trades are also rapidly passing into Japanese hands."

A GOOD PROFIT and A GOOD ARTICLE

is that kind of a combination for the dealer.

When a stock of this well-known brand of Laundry Starch is put in, the grocer feels that he is not taking any long chances. It is distinctly a case of "backing the favorite." He knows it will "move"—and quickly; no bargain sales from tubs at the season's end, of miscellaneous nondescripts. What a satisfaction it is to sell a Starch that you know from trial in your own home to be the "real thing."

Attractive packages, heavy advertising, everything, in fact, that could be done to help the grocer has been and will be done continuously.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

Quebec Markets.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, July 27th, 1905.

JOBBERS on the whole are quite satisfied with conditions, considering the season. The demand for sugar has been larger than usual, in fact, the last week, say refiners, was the largest in years. A reduction of 2 cents on Barbadoes molasses was the result of slowness of movement noticed heretofore. Syrup is a little better. Teas are showing a little more life than last week, while coffees are without particular feature. Spices are more active and firm. Canned goods are being watched closely and old pack goods are being unloaded. Fish are meeting a good demand with receipts rather slack. Both rice and tapioca are firmer. In California dried fruits the indications are for higher prices. In Mediterranean fruits, currants have advanced in consequence of the signing of the convention by the Greek Government. There is a bullish movement in dairy products and provisions. Hogs are higher and pork products consequently firmer. Butter, cheese and eggs also show an advance upon last week. Flour is quiet but firm, while rolled oats are without change. Collections are reported about fair.

Sugar—There is no change to report in the sugar market this week up to time of writing. The demand is good and keeps prices steady, which were perhaps a little inclined to weakness. We quote:

Syrups and Molasses—On Thursday of last week the prices of Barbadoes were reduced 2 cents as the demand was found to be slow, and jobbers were of opinion that the reduction would result in greater movement. It is the opinion of some of the trade that less molasses is being used. The demand for syrup is reported a little better. We quote:

Teas—The market in teas generally is firm. The gain in Japan has been fully maintained with no prospect of lower prices. Business has been fairly good and quality received here so far shows up all right. There is no change to report in Ceylons. The opening market has shown increased offerings and better quality with firm tendency. Increased offerings in green Ceylons are also reported and have been taken up readily. Indians are a little firmer than last year. The local market in Japan, although quiet, is beginning to respond, and the feeling is good.

Spices—The spice market sees an improving activity and a larger demand for peppers and other leading lines. The tone is very firm and prices may go up shortly. This is due, as stated last week, to shortage in pepper and nutmeg crops as well as in some others.

Canned Goods—The interest of the trade is centered in these lines and the prices for the remaining fruits and vegetables are eagerly awaited. In the meantime orders are being placed for future delivery. Some houses finding themselves with peas, strawberries and salmon of last year's pack on hand in larger quantities than they can readily dispose of, are getting out from under at a loss. But retailers are as a general thing buying on a from hand to mouth basis.

Fish—According to opinion of leading fish dealers, the trade is in a very satisfactory condition, the demand being good for this time of the year. Stocks of fresh fish are getting light, however, owing to small arrivals and large requirements. Gaspe salmon and mackerel are about finished. Very few only are coming in. Dore is scarcer and prices, it is believed, will go up shortly.

About the only lines in sufficient supply on the local market are the lake fish, trout and white fish, which arrived in good lots, and haddock and steak cod. Generally all other kinds are not plentiful. There is little doing in salt and smoked fish. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits—Except in currants the market in Mediterranean dried fruits remains in its usual Mid-summer dormant conditon. Currants are buoyant. The convention having been signed by the Greek Government, prices have advanced at least 1s. per cwt. and with but a smallt stock of last year's crop remaining in first hands it would not be surprising to see a still further advance in the near future. The market for California dried fruits is very firm indeed. Freshly seeded 1904 raisins are now 1-2c above the opening price with a further advance in sight. Prunes are very strong and the present prices demanded by growers are fully 1-4c. to 1-2c. above what early sales have been made at. Higher prices will certainly rule for first class standard goods. The apricot market is unchanged. No intimation is to be had as to the prices of new raisins, but the crop promises well, although somewhat late. The outlook for California goods is strong. It is said that considerable old stock seeded raisins, even as old as 1903, is being put on the trade.

Evaporated Apples—There is no change in the condition of the trade to report. Hot weather preventing consumption of evaporated and dried fruits, the demand is only nominal and sales but occasional and small. Evaporated apples, 6 1-4c. to 6 1-2c.; dried apples, 3c. to 3 1-2c.

Flour, Feed and Meal.

Flour—No important change has taken place in flour. The prevailing tone of the market is firm but said to be a little quiet. Wheat continues firm and high and consequently the cost of flour will not decline. Exports are not very large, English buyers refusing to buy on account of our high prices. On the whole the local market is featureless. We quote:

Feed—Feed continues to be in fair demand; bran particularly is firmer owing to a better demand, mainly for exports. In consequence the margin of prices is much reduced. Mouillie, though, is somewhat quiet. We quote:

Rolled Oats—Rolled oats are still on the quiet side. Oatmeal is in very small demand as well as oats, which are lower. Prices remain firm and unchanged as yet. We quote:

Grain—A quiet grain market rules for the week, the only changes being a drop of 2c. in red and white wheat, and 1-2c. in oats. There is some new wheat offering on the market already which has a tendency to add interest to the trade. We quote:

B. C. Markets.

Vancouver, July 20, 1905.

SELF-SUPPORTING in so far as agricultural and dairy products are concerned, will be the realized ambition of the Province of British Columbia in another decade. There will, of course, be one important exception, and that is in the supply of flour. British Columbia can hardly ever hope to extend its wheat-producing area. There is at present a fair quantity of wheat raised in the Okanagan district, but the acreage now raising wheat will become so valuable as fruit-growing land that the change will be made soon or late. The lack of wheat, however, is bound never to be felt, as the vast market of the Northwest will absorb all the surplus fruit raised in the province for many years to come, and in return British Columbia will continue to reciprocate by purchasing the flour and wheat needed for consumption here.

The predicted movement towards expansion in all branches of agricultural industry is becoming fulfilled, and the advance this year is not only remarkable, but it is extremely gratifying to those whose efforts have been towards the establishment of the industry on a basis that will make of it a factor in the province's prosperity.

This year, the promising crop returns in almost every line and the very large number of people coming into the country to locate on land, have both turned attention to agriculture. New districts are being rapidly filled up in the northern part of the province long in advance of transportation. The Pemberton Meadows District, Bulkley Valley, Nechaco Valley, and other localities, have been investigated by numerous people and land secured. The Similkameen, which is so soon to be in communication by rail with the rest of the province, is being filled up, and the land movement amounts to a boon. This district, so close to the coast, when railway connection is complete, and so favored as to climate, is bound to be a great rival of the Okanagan. The latter district has this year increased the number of its settlers more than in any previous season. The Fraser Valley, too, has been having somewhat of a boom in settlers, and much new land has been brought under cultivation.

LAST MINUTE PROVISION MARKET.

Montreal, Thursday, July 27, 12.30 p.m.

BUTTER—Tone continues firm; active demand. Fancy, 22½c.; good to fine, 22c.

CHEESE—Market active and demand good. Eastern, 10⅝c. to 10¾c.; Ontario, 10½c. to 10⅝c.

EGGS — Demand steadily improving. Selected fresh gathered, 17c.; straight, 15½c. to 16c.

PROVISIONS — Market very strong; live hogs, scarce owing to light receipts, good demand; firm at 7½c. to 7⅝c.; dressed hogs, scarce, brisk demand, 9⅜c. to 10c., expect higher prices; hams, 13½c. to 14½c.; bacon, 13½c., both in good demand and not plentiful; higher figures expected.

In the Fraser Valley the oat crop is the large grain factor, and that, with hay and dairy products, makes the chief source of revenue of the settlers of the lower Fraser Valley. In the Chilliwack District fruit is a large factor, and in some other districts up the river, such as Langley, Maple Ridge and Agassiz, the fruit is also a big item. In Kent and Chilliwack municipalities, and at Squamish, at the head of Howe Sound, hops form one of the principal products. This is also one of the industries of the Okanagan round Vernon.

From Kamloops comes the report that a large number of cattle have been shipped back to Calgary to be fattened on the ranges there, as the up-land ranges round Kamloops have become too dry. The snowfall last Winter was very light, and the district, known as the Dry Belt, is never noted for rainfall in Summer. On the other hand, the Alberta ranges have had an unusually heavy rainfall this season, and the grass is therefore much better than usual. It was decided by some large stockmen that it would pay in the end to take the cattle down to the plains to finish them off in time for Fall shipment.

The steamer Henriette took north this week a cargo of 1,000 tons of flour and feed, consigned to Dawson and other northern points. Some of the consignments were for N.W.M.P. posts along the Yukon. The White Pass & Yukon Railway Co. announces a cut of $7 per ton on hay and oats and other feed. The rate for the time being will thus be $48 per ton on hay and $43 per ton on oats and feed from Victoria and Vancouver to Dawson. The announcement was made to run the rate concurrently with the special commodity tariff from July 1 to Aug. 15, so that all shipments of hay and feed made since July 1 will be given the benefit of the new rate.

One reason for the temporary cut rate is to urge early shipments, as dealers in the past have held back on feed and hay to get the new crop to ship in. In other seasons the result has been that large quantities of feed and hay have been hung up at White Horse, and there has been a shortage down the Yukon all Winter.

The B. C. Sugar Refinery this week received 700 tons of raw sugar ex Kosmos line steamer Theban, from Corinto, which the steamer picked up en route from Hamburg to this port via South American ports. The refinery receives large quantities from Java, and the shipments from South American points are, as a rule, much smaller.

Eggs, local fresh, have become suddenly scarce. The hot weather may account for it, or that early moulting hens have knocked off laying for the time. Already 40c. per dozen, retail has been paid in some instances. The price wholesale, however, is about 28 to 30c.

Butter is still in fair supply, and practically all local in origin. The season has been an extraordinary heavy one in production, both in creamery and dairy. Creamery quotes at 25 to 27c. wholesale, with dairy about two or three cents lower in range.

Wet weather three days spoiled the last of the cherry crop, and a good many raspberries as well. There are a few cherries still coming in, but many of them were cracked with the wet. The price is 10c. per lb.

Raspberries are fairly plentiful and sell at $2 per crate of 24 one-pound boxes.

Apricots from Washington have taken possession of leading place in the fruit market this week, being in large quantities. The price runs $1 per crate retail. A few apples and pears from California are in, but prices are above normal yet, owing to the small lots in hand. The supply is expected to be larger, especially of pears, after this week.

The arrival of yellow Crawford peaches for preserving commences this week. Reports from California are that the crop is a very good one this year. California plums are in big supply at low prices.

Local fruit does not yet include plums, but from all reports there will be a big crop. The New Westminster Fruit Preserving Co., also the cannery in Vancouver, are putting up large quantities of berries and cherries, and have contracted for big supplies of other fruits later.

The supply of new potatoes from local sources is becoming very liberal, and prices have dropped materially, the average being now 1½c. per lb. Fresh cabbage of local growth, celery and other vegetables, are in good supply. Marrows, cucumbers and onions are also of local production entirely now.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Special Report from the Winnipeg Office of THE CANADIAN GROCER.

Quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, July 27th, 1905.

EXHIBITION week is always a busy one in Winnipeg and as this year it is the occasion of the meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association there is an unusually large number of merchants in the city and the wholesale men are busy extending a welcome to their customers. From all parts of the west, exhibition visitors bring cheering crop reports and it is evident that the western trade expect an unusually prosperous season.

Sugar prices are steady and as this is the season of heavy consumption there is a very strong demand from the retail trade. There are no new developments in the canned goods market, but already the low prices on certain lines have induced very heavy buying. The first arrivals of the new season's apricots were snapped up in a hurry and at the moment it is doubtful whether any of the new goods are obtainable on the local market. However, large supplies will be available in a few days and prices will be lower than for the first arrivals. There are no price changes of importance this week. About the only change worthy of note is an advance from 65 cents to $1.00 per lb. on Horseshoe Snuff.

Sugar—Prices have been steady now for a month. This is the season of increased consumption and orders received are large in spite of the fact that the future of the market is uncertain. Buying is still only for immediate requirements, but those requirements are large. We quote:

N. S. Markets.

Halifax, N.S., July 24, 1905.

JOBBERS report a fairly good trade in groceries with prices steady. Sales of sugar have been large during the week and dealers have been kept busy filling orders. The demand for this article has been even greater than anticipated. The refiners also report the demand heavy. There has been a fractional decline in the price, and the retailers are now selling sugar at 6c., or 17 lbs. for a dollar. Sales of molasses are falling off perceptibly. The price is unchanged. Dealers here have still very large stocks on hand.

Fruits and Vegetables.—New potatoes advanced 25c. per barrel during the week. The demand for new potatoes was exceptionally good and some dealers found difficulty in filling orders. The new potatoes are American and the shipments received here were not very large. It is expected that new Nova Scotia potatoes will be placed on the market by the end of the week. Owing to the backward season local-grown potatoes are much later than usual. Some dealers who had large holdings of old potatoes, finding that there was a shortage of new stock, took advantage of the market and advanced the price ten cents per bushel. American cabbage is quoted at $1.75 to $2 per barrel. A small quantity of local-grown cabbage was placed on the market on Saturday. The article was only about half matured, but it fetched 60 cents per dozen. Carrots, turnips and beets, all local grown, are now on the market, each being quoted at 50c. per dozen. Beans are worth $1.75 to $2 per box, tomatoes $3 per crate of 40 lbs., and cukes at $4 per box. Bananas are quoted at $1.75 to $2 per box, lemons (new) from $5.50 to $6 per case of 300 count, California plums from $1.50 to $2 per box, and Jamaica oranges $4.50. A good shipment of the latter was received here, but the fruit is quite green, and the sales have been slow.

The demand for smoked meats and salt pork is good. The supply of the former has not increased very much, and in consequence the price is still very firm. In canned goods the demand is falling off, as the fresh articles are taking their places.

Shipments of strawberries are falling off and the Nova Scotia crop is about over. With the decrease in the receipts the price advanced during the latter part of the week to two boxes for 25c. The first raspberries on the market are bringing 15c. per box, and gooseberries 8c. per quart. No change is announced in the price of flour or fish.

Butter and Eggs.—The market is quiet at present, and prices are steady. Nova Scotia eggs are quoted at 15c. and P.E. Island from 16 to 17c., the shipments from the latter place being light. The demand is only fair. Some slight improvement is noted in the receipts of local-made butter, but not much change in price. Creamery here is quoted at 22 to 23c., choice small tubs the same, and prints 22c.

Cheese.—The opening meeting of the Cheese Board was held at Charlottetown on Friday, when the following sales were reported: Orwell 90, Dundas 64, Stanley Bridge 150, Cornwall 100, Lakeville 100, Red Point 40, Gowan Brae 50, Kinkora 125, New Glasgow 110, Union 60, East River 25, to Dillon & Spillett, for 9½c. Kensington 150, was sold at 9¾c. to Dillon & Spillett. A. J. Biffin bought from Cornwall, East River and Union 150 flat cheese for 9¾c. The following cable was boarded: "Montreal firm, English market steady, Montreal Eastern 9½ to 9¾c., Western 9¾ to 10c., London 48 to 49s." There was a good attendance of salesmen, and all seemed well satisfied with the price, which is 2½c. higher than at the opening last year. The officers elected were: President, Lauchlin Macdonald, East Point; vice-president, Chas. Wayne, St. Peter's; secretary-treasurer, Robert Jenkins. It was decided to take the Kingston instead of the Brockville quotations this year on account of the change of the date of meeting.

WESTERN RETAILERS MEET.

(Special Dispatch.)

THE semi-annual meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada met in Manitoba Hall Wednesday, July 26—morning, afternoon and night. President T. J. Lawlor, of Killarney, presided. Secretary Coulson presented a report showing that the membership is now 204, as the result of six weeks' canvas in 83 towns. The credit system was discussed at great length, and finally a resolution was passed amending the recommendation of last February to the effect that all accounts be closed on November 1, and no credit be extended until April 1. The cash period is therefore shortened one month. Expressions of active sympathy were received from Winnipeg retailers, and the Winnipeg retailers are invited to attend the Thursday night meeting. The Winnipeg wholesalers are also invited to this meeting. At the evening session the question of prices paid for farm produce was discussed at considerable length. A committee was appointed consisting of the president, secretary, and W. F. Moore, of Cartwright, to interview the cold storage companies with the object of arranging for the handling of country butter in Winnipeg, the committee to report at Thursday night's meeting. T. B. Jackson, of Elgin, not being in business now, Wilfrid Ledoux, of Armand, was appointed to his place on the executive. Convention adjourned until Thursday night.

FETE CHAMPETRE.

The retail grocery clerks of Montreal will hold a beautiful "Fete Champetre" at Lariviere Park, Sault.au-Recollet, a nice little village near Montreal, on Sunday, July 30. A fine programme has been prepared for the occasion, and all the games postponed at the Plattsburg picnic will be run off, and valuable prizes given to winners.

IMPROVING OFFICES.

The offices of J. L. Watt & Scott, Wellington street east, Toronto, are receiving a thorough overhauling this week at the hands of the painters and decorators. The interior is being done in white and green, and will, when the decorations are completed, compare very favorably with anything of the sort in town.

BY ROYAL WARRANT MILLERS TO H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

The Standard of all Canadian Flour is

Ogilvie's "Royal Household"

It is a mistaken idea that good grocers are not particular as to the quality of the goods they sell to their customers—self-interest leads them to serve their trade with the best———————

Who sells the Family Flour? Not the "flour and feed" merchants, but the family grocers, and the women look to them to supply the best—The time has gone by, though, when the housewife would take anything that the grocer would suggest, and the wise grocer no longer suggests anything just as good when "Royal Household" is asked for.

Have you ever thought over the fact that if the baking turns out right with the flour you supply your customers they will come back again? Good flour means "good trade."

Ogilvie's "Royal Household" Flour is not only "good flour," but is the Best Flour.

Brusson's French Alimentary Pastes are among the best, manufactured from the genuine Russian wheat "Taganrog." L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal, have just received a second shipment.

Owing to local fruits ruling scarce and higher in price than usual, California peaches, peas and plums are having a good market. White & Co., Limited, Toronto, are handling a good many cars of this fruit at auction.

JOINED THE BENEDICTS.

Mr. W. M. Littler, manager of Montreal branch of the Walter M. Lowney Co., of Boston, who is usually not addicted to hiding himself or his actions from the public, made a diversion last week which The Grocer hopes will be of life-long benefit. Ostensibly departing on a trip to the Maritime Provinces, he crossed over into the city of baked beans and brown bread and "took unto himself a wife." Besides the business attractions that made trips to the Hub necessary, there was another and a more directly personal lodestone that at stated intervals drew him to the Athens of America. The deed is done and the annexation of another American citizen completed. The Grocer wishes Mr. and Mrs. Littler a pleasant journey through life, and may their pathway be strewn with everything that is as sweet and good as Lowney's chocolates.

CANADIAN EXHIBIT.

Canada is making an extensive exhibit —chiefly of horticultural and agricultural products—at the Pittsburg Exhibition, which opens Aug. 30 and lasts two months. The purpose is to attract immigration to Canada.

ATTRACTIVE LABELS.

The old saying that "goods well labelled are half sold" should certainly apply to the new and handsome labels prepared for Hudon, Hebert & Cie.'s Montreal stock of canned fruits, fish and vegetables. The labels are uniformly of birch bark imitation, and the registered "Gazelle" brand shows up clearly and strikingly beautiful, while the various kinds of fruit, vegetables, etc., are shown in most perfect, natural shapes and colors. The labels are all embossed. Taken as a work of the lithographer's art, they strike one as being as nearly perfect as anything in this line can be made. As attractive lines for grocers' shelves they should bear out our opening remarks. Hudon, Hebert & Cie.'s artistic sense should be appreciated by all dealers in canned goods and groceries.

TRAVELERS' VACATION.

Mr. J. F. Holden and Mr. J. W. Powell, Western Ontario representatives of E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, Toronto, will this year spend their annual two weeks' vacation at home. As these gentlemen have done considerable traveling so far this year, this will give them a much needed rest, and both expect to be in fine fettle for renewing the campaign in favor of Gillett's goods.

B. C. PACKERS DIRECTORS.

At an informal meeting of the British Columbia Packers' Association last week the following directors were appointed: Alexander Ewen, Aemilius Jarvis, E. W. Rollins, E. E. Evans, Campbell Sweeny, William Murray, K. K. McLaren, William Braid and Robert Kelly. The officials of the association will not be chosen till the annual meeting in Jersey City, New Jersey, in August.

CURRANT BILL VOTED.

Just as we go to press a cablegram is received from Hancock & Wood, Patras, advising a very excited currant market, and that the Syndicate Bill has been voted.

Davidson & Hay, wholesale grocers, Toronto, are having some alterations made in their Yonge street warehouse this week. They are installing a large two-storey fire-proof vault.

Make Change Without Loss

Mistakes that occur in making change are avoided by system. A customer gave this reason why she trades with Mr. Hardy:

"Mr. Hardy's National Cash Register counts the money that is taken in, and if a mistake is made in making change you can always have it corrected.

"I once made a 10-cent purchase and handed the clerk $5. He handed me 90 cents. I did not notice the error until I reached home. I called Mr. Hardy's attention to it and he opened his National Cash Register and balanced his cash. It showed that there were four dollars more in the drawer than called for by the sales record."

A National Cash Register accurately records each transaction, whether cash, credit, money received on account, money paid or money changed, and shows the clerk's initial.

Let our representative call and explain our system to you.

VICTORIA B. C., BOARD OF TRADE.

THE twenty-sixth annual meeting of the Victoria, B.C., Board of Trade, held on July 14, 1905, was attended by a large and representative gathering of Victoria business men. The main order of business was the election of officers for the ensuing year, and resulting as follows :

President, W. T. Oliver, (acclamation); secretary, F. Elworthy, (acclamation); vice-president, J. A. Mara; council, D. R. Ker, C. F. Todd, Stephen Jones, S. J. Pitts, P. McQuade, Capt. J. G. Cox, H. B. Thomson, H. F. Bullen, S. Leiser, T. M. Henderson, R. P. Butchart, F. A. Paulin, H. G. Wilson, J. S. Gibb and T. W. Paterson.

The following twelve members were elected to the board of arbitration : D. R. Ker, G. H. Barnard, C. F. Todd, D. E. Campbell, R. P. Butchart, H. B. Thomson, Capt. J. G. Cox, E. V. Bodwell, J. A. Sayward, L. Goodacre, Richard Hall, H. F. Bullen.

In referring to the B. C. tax on commercial travelers, the Hon. R. G. Tatlow said it had proved a difficult one to collect. It was almost impossible to get information correctly, and the Government found that the merchants carrying stocks thought the Act was not being effectually enforced. In the last couple of months, however, about 125 commercial travelers' taxes had been collected. There had been talk of the Act being disallowed at Ottawa, but unless and until that happened B. C. citizens were asked to give the measure their hearty support.

Government returns showed that the revenue from the lumber industry this year had reached $400,000 or $100,000 in excess of the estimate of last year,—a satisfactory condition of affairs when it is remembered that during a greater part of the year the industry had been in a depressed condition owing to overproduction and competition from the United States.

The annual report also dealt with trap fishing and salmon canning, the cement works, the wharf improvements, the new C.P.R. hotel, the development of the deep sea fisheries in prospect, and the inauguration of the whaling industry as factors in the future prosperity of the City of Victoria.

PEA PACK COMPLETED.

The Simcoe factory, owned and operated by the Canadian Canners, Limited, has just finished packing peas for the season. To give some idea of what this factory accomplished, its pack was, day in and day out, from 60,000 to 84,000 cans of peas per day, besides large quantities of other goods. Eighty-four thousand cans of peas was their highest in that line alone for one day. It does not look as if the country will suffer this year for a shortage of peas, although the low price and extra fine quality will doubtless stimulate consumption.

Frenzied Business

The gentlemen under the Mountain claim that we are making a kick because they have put peas too low, and that the price is put where it is in the interest of the trade. We cannot see where the interest of the trade is taken into consideration in making this price. There must be considerable peas held by the wholesale and retail trade, and when these gentlemen with a stroke of the pen can knock 25% in value off these goods we cannot see where the trade is benefitted. The only people benefitted are the consumers, and we are not interested in them only to the extent of giving them a first-class article at a reasonable profit. We confess, that through the panicky frenzy of these gentlemen over a couple of hundred thousand cases of old peas, they have forced us to supply every man, woman and child who eat Quaker Peas with this article at cost, with the addition of a penny on every can. Peas at 60c., after deducting brokerage, discounts, freights, and royalties we have to pay on machines used in packing them, net less than forty-five cents per dozen, and we think this is Frenzied Business that it would take a Lawson to do justice to. If the wholesale or retail trade were being benefitted we would not discuss it for a moment, but say: "Go it, boys. It is only temporary, and they have given us many a good show in the past--let us give them one now."

This Isn't Frenzied Business

A number of drummers on a Friday night returning home, passed the station here, opposite which is the Quaker Canning Factory. Looking at the factory, one remarked : " How do you account for the success of that concern ? A few years ago they were unknown ; now their goods are everywhere between the two oceans. They do little or no travelling, a very small amount of advertising, and no great amount of push in any direction. They have a fellow named Tom Owens who runs the business, but he don't travel more than two miles an hour, and the furthest he is ever known to go from home, once or twice a year you may see him around Eckardt's in Toronto or Mathewson's in Montreal, but that is the extent of it."

After this duck had his say the rest of the crowd were mum. Presume they didn't know the reason. The following are a few reasons out of thousands : In the first place, for the foundation of the business, we are right in the garden of the Bay of Quinte District, celebrated for growing the finest flavored fruits and vegetables in the world. In the second, probably no firm on earth has given the same amount of attention to the seed part of the business that we have. In peas, we buy select hand-picked stock from the Cleveland and John H. Allan Seed Co., Picton, two of the largest and most reputable seed houses in the world. In tomatoes, we grow the celebrated Livingstone Stone Tomato, the hardest, smoothest, firmest and best all-round tomato for canning purposes that the world has yet produced. In corn, we use almost exclusively seed imported from Maine, where they grow and pack corn that sells for just double the price ordinary corn grown in other parts of the U. S. sells for. In bean seed, we have paid Woodford's, of New York City, as high as nine dollars per bushel, when our competitors thought two-dollar seed was good enough for them.

GREEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

LONDON, ENG., FRUIT LETTER.

By Our Own Correspond nt.

A CONSIDERABLE amount of the matter embodied in this article was gathered from the London manager of the Canadian Canners, Limited, and it should prove of interest as throwing additional light on the position of Canadian canned goods on the British markets. While previous correspondence has been but an expression of opinion as put forth by some of the leading jobbers and brokers in London, this is a review from another standpoint. It deals with the position as seen by those who are making the greatest efforts to push Canadian canned goods in the Old Country at the present time.

As far as the brokers are concerned, there can be no doubt that they are affected in a manner by no means palatable to them by the selling arrangements of the Canadian Canners, Limited, for the establishment of a branch office right on the spot means that they can no longer expect to secure brokerage from a concern which has gone to the trouble of opening up for itself. If they are to handle these goods at all, then, they must take what they can get from the people to whom they sell. These latter, when they are in a mood to buy Canadian goods, are naturally adverse to paying even one per cent. to brokers for stuff which they can secure more advantageously by going direct to the office of the canners themselves. Consequently the brokers' business is reduced to a minimum as far as Canadian canned goods are concerned, and they endeavor to push United States, French and Italian products in place of Canadian. As to how much influence the brokers and middlemen have with jobbers time alone will show. Even if, as some of them claim, they can prevail upon jobbers to purchase the lines offered by them in preference to Canadian, it has to be seen whether, with the improvement in packing and uniform quality which the Canadian canners claim will result from their establishing a branch office in London, dealers will decide to break through custom if it be in their own interests. By establishing an office right in loco the services of middlemen will be dispensed with, and it will be possible to go to dealers direct without regard to those who, by reason of their handling innumerable other lines, cannot give that attention to a single set of goods which spells success.

It is considered that quality and price are the two factors which are to decide the success or failure of Canadian canned goods in Britain. In those years which preceded the opening of a London office, it is claimed that, owing to the fact that the bulk of Canadian goods were distributed through brokers whose interest was divided amongst other lines, prices varied in a most confusing manner, and when goods were sent to Britain from Canada in packages unsuitable to the requirements of the market this evil was not brought to the notice of the canners in the manner it should have been. As one would expect, the brokers were unable to find time to give all that mass of detailed information as to the best lines to pack, etc., so that, in course of time, it was decided that it would be necessary to send over some one who could keep prices even; make special reports as to uniformity of quality and condition of packages; and settle all claims.

It is said that so unsatisfactory was the old method of selling through brokers that whatever disinclination some dealers may have had to purchase Canadian canned goods may be put down to the fact that, during that period, the lack of information supplied to Canadian canners was so great as to prevent them from catering to the demands of the British trade in the manner which was necessary to success. Many mistakes were consequently made, the evil effects of which it has been the task of the London representative during the past few months to overcome.

As to the feeling amongst British dealers that there is a tendency for goods to deteriorate in quality when many concerns combine and individual interest and enthusiasm are taken away, the remedy lies in constantly keeping the quality up and by settling all claims promptly, so as to prove that goods are first-class and sure to give satisfaction. In this way it is hoped that in the course of time dealers will be educated up to the point of getting their canned goods direct from the canners instead of taking them from brokers as before. Some of the brokers, of course, will smilingly make the best of a bad job, and continue to handle Canadian canned goods in the hope of securing their one per cent. or so from the dealers—since they cannot get it from the canners themselves. But others, when they find Canadian goods getting a firmer hold on the market, will probably put up a stiff fight and push their goods with greater energy, for the success of a scheme such as is now being put into practice by the Canadian combination would form a precedent which, if copied generally, would spell ruin to them. In fact, it is said that already a new phase of business methods is coming about, and as far as big manufacturers are concerned brokers have seen their best days. It is a question which time alone can solve, but at present London boasts a dozen or so big brokerage concerns which may be relied upon to "die hard."

Although few of the independent canning concerns in Canada have yet got a strong hold on British taste, it might be repeated that the general opinion is that there is a splendid opening for almost all lines of canned fruits and vegetables, and many lines of canned meats. Quality alone will bring success. Suitable and attractive packages will bring additional success, but needless to say, there will be keen competition all along the line. Several houses on this side have expressed interest in these new canning concerns which have sprung into existence of late, and it may be that before long they too will be reaching out to get their share of British trade. Such firms as these have at any rate several predecessors whose methods, successful or otherwise, should prove worthy of study.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Green Fruit.

Toronto, July 18, 1905.

THE warm weather has induced a first-class consumptive demand for all kinds of fruit and vegetables. In contrast with former years at this season, local arrivals of domestic fruit have been very moderate. This is due in part to the fact that the yield of early fruit in Ontario this year so far has only been fair, but principally to the fact that the facilities for distribution are much better and the trade are experiencing very little difficulty from fruit being congested in certain districts. The season for imported fruit and vegetables was never better, and the wholesale trade complain that they find it more or less difficult to obtain a sufficient supply to meet the requirements of the market.

Pineapples are selling at $3 to $3.50. There are very few on the market, and they arrive but in small lots, owing to high prices in New York. There is but a limited demand for them.

Raspberries are scarce this year, and but few are seen on the market. It is expected that in about ten days all shipments will be over; prices range between 10c. and 12c. per box. Ontario strawberries are finished. New apples are coming on in small lots and selling at $4.50 to $5 bbl. Brunswick berries are selling at 12c. to 13c. a box. Vegetables.

Vegetables as well as fruits have enjoyed a large and steady demand during the hot days of last week. This week, however, the weather being rainy and cool, has considerably reduced the consumption of vegetables, and in consequence business has been somewhat dragging at the beginning of this week. Demand is only fair. Home-grown vegetables, such as cabbage, cucumbers, onions, celery, sell at fair figures.

Home-grown products continue to arrive freely, but not in particularly large lots. On last Friday the market was practically flooded with vegetables of all kinds brought in by farmers; but the large stocks moved but slowly on account of prices not being very easy. Spinach is practically out of the market. Cabbage is in large quantities and sells at from 25c. to 40c. We quote:

FRAUDULENT SARDINES.

According to latest U. S. consular reports packers of French sardines are greatly exercised over frauds which Spanish and Portuguese packers are practising upon them. They contend that the reputation of the French sardine is being impaired by inferior Spanish and Portuguese fish which are palmed off as genuine French sardines.

It is believed to be high time that a law should intervene to place a high duty upon the entry into France of foreign sardines. The Spaniards and the Portuguese ship into France large boxes containing 140 to 150 sardines. These receptacles are subjected to the operation of "depoting"—that is, they are divided into boxes of smaller size, which are then sold as French products. This substitution brings the fish into contact with the air, and causes the need of reboiling, which diminishes still more the value of a foreign product already inferior. This commerce has assumed very disturbing proportions. The imports of these poor fish into France, which in 1897 were 2,476,425 pounds, reached 13,545,180 pounds in 1904.

These sardines are sold more cheaply than the French, which are nearly always of first quality, the reasons for the cheapness being that foreign workmen are paid less than in France, and in Spain and Portugal the fishing is all the year, while in France the season is only profitable during certain months. Furthermore, these two countries remit upon exportation from their territory the duties upon the oil and the tin boxes.

LOBSTER SEASON MUST CLOSE.

The Department of Marine and Fisheries have decided that fishing operations must cease this year on the date prescribed by law. The fishermen in some districts appealed for fifteen to thirty days longer fishing, owing to the lateness of ice, and loss of traps and gear due to stormy weather. The Minister obtained reports from various fishing inspectors, and from these it appears that the fishing on the whole has been very fair; in fact, better than was generally anticipated. Many canneries have already closed down, having completed their expected packs. The feeling against extension was general, and the department's action will be enective in furthering the improvement of the lobster industry, which has seriously declined, largely owing to over fishing.

TO PREVENT SALMON FRAUDS.

The Council of the Victoria, B.C., Board of Trade have adopted the following resolution in a report from the fisheries committee: "Whereas Rivers Inlet and similar northern salmon is reported to have been sold in previous years and now offered in Australia as Skeena River fish, to the detriment of those doing a bona-fide business; resolved that this Board of Trade considers such practice undesirable, and will use its efforts to stop it, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the honorable the Attorney-General for British Columbia."

CANNERS NEGOTIATE.

At a meeting of the Fraser River Canners' Association on July 10, final arrangements regarding the canners' dealings with the fishermen on the Fraser River this season were completed.

The prices to be paid on the river remain as at first announced, viz., 12½c. per fish during July, and 10c. from Aug. 1 to the close of the season on Aug. 25. The canners have agreed to deduct from the wage account of all union fishermen sufficient sums to pay the dues of each man to the union.

LOBSTER CATCH.

The total lobster pack of Cape Breton for the present season will not exceed twenty thousand cases valued at $250,000. The catch on the western shore, as a whole, will aggregate about $400,000. Prices paid to the fishermen average fifty cents per hundred weight less than last year, owing to the decline in the market for the canned article.

FISH GOSSIP.

Large quantities of Alaska salmon will be packed for the Japanese Government during the present season.

The new salmon cannery built in Esquimalt for Todd & Munsie began operations on July 12.

The Labrador fisheries are reported a complete failure owing to immense ice floes blocking the coast fleet.

The new hatchery at Pemberton Meadows, B.C., has just been completed. It will accommodate 30,000,000 salmon fry.

The Minister of Fisheries for Ontario has granted pound net licenses to fishermen on the Georgian Bay for the present year.

The Canadian commercial agent at Manchester, Eng., complains that brands of good British Columbia canned salmon are being used by British dealers on inferior Alaska fish.

News comes from Northern British Columbia ports that the sockeyes are running in the Naas and Skeena Rivers, and that the canneries are working to their utmost capacity to handle the catch.

According to latest despatches sockeye salmon are running fast in the Fraser River. The average per boat is increasing daily, and high boats are catching 150. Traps on Puget Sound are making average catches of 3,000.

In order to prevent the lower part of Lake Superior from being depleted of fish and to give independent fishermen a chance to ply their trade, the Ontario Government have cancelled all licenses between the Soo and Pancake Bay, a distance of fifty miles.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS

BOTH Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Systems are complaining of shortage of supplies, and freights have taken a slump. Reasons are not available for this condition of affairs, but the fact is that produce and grain is not offering freely. The present high prices of both Canadian and American wheat preclude any heavy transportation business, and no improvement is looked for until completion of harvest. The Russian situation has a comforting aspect to the official grain men. The war and threatened famine in certain parts of Russia are bound to restrict and reduce the enormously heavy shipments of wheat that have been made to England, and this fact, combined with the prospect of a plentiful harvest, will tend greatly ta relieve the situation.

The departure of the SS. Angota, of the Elder-Dempster line, on Friday, opened up a new direct service between Canada and Cuba and Mexican ports. A full cargo is promised, in fact more than was anticipated, and the inauguration of the new line is looked forward to by shippers with a great deal of satisfaction and hope. The experiment of sending a vessel to Cuban ports from the St. Lawrence will prove a success, as is evident from the fact that she will sail with a full general cargo, and a number of passengers.

The Angota will call at Halifax, whence she will sail direct to the port of Nassau, after which she will call at Havana, and later to four Mexican ports.

The cargo for Nassau consists of 275 barrels of flour, 40 tons of hay, and 750 bushels of oats.

For Havana the cargo consists of 800 tons of paving blocks, 500 tons of hay, 30 tons of paper, and 30 tons of peas, 400 tons of fish from Halifax, and 140,000 feet of lumber.

For Mexican ports the Angota has on board 200 tons of hay, 100 tons of furniture, and 100 tons of miscellaneous cargo.

The vessel is in command of Captain Jones, and it is expected that the round trip will occupy at least seven weeks.

AN UNFORTUNATE MISTAKE.

In the Great West number of The Grocer a few mistakes and omissions were noticed by the editor after the number made its appearance. For example, no reference whatever was made to the western branch of the Mooney Biscuit & Candy Co., Limited. A sketch of this firm's Winnipeg history was prepared some weeks ago and pigeon-holed for use at the proper time, but in some unaccountable manner was overlooked. The Grocer regrets the oversight, as the object was to make the article on Winnipeg's wholesale firms as nearly complete as possible.

The Mooney Biscuit & Candy Co. have been established in Winnipeg now for more than a year, the western branch being in charge of James R. McRea. They have handsome premises at 214 Princess street. The stocks of the western grocery stores bear effective testimony to the fact that the Mooney biscuits and candies are proving as popular in the west as in the east.

WATT, SCOTT & GOODACRE, - MONTREAL

.VISITOR FROM JOHANNESBURG.

THE GROCER had the pleasure of an interview last week with Mr. Robert Douglas, broker and commission merchant, Johannesburg, South Africa. Mr. Douglas, who is a Canadian and has been making South Africa his home for some years, is on a trip to his native land, combining business with pleasure—principally business. Representing as he does a number of prominent United States firms he is still patriotic enough to wish that Canadian manufacturers and exporters might extend their energies toward securing a share of the very profitable trade of his adopted country. There are many lines which he thinks Canadians could export with profit, and among some of them he mentioned hams and bacon, which come from England; brooms, agricultural implements of all kinds, now practically controlled by the United States. Canadian plows could find a good market, most of those sold now being made by the Oliver Plow Works of Chicago Edge tools, also, could be profitably exported, these being supplied principally from East Angus, Mass. There is a lot of Canadian butter and cheese now imported into South Africa, but not nearly as much as could be disposed of advantageously there, and these lines should be more strenuously pushed.

The Canadian trade commissioner is doing good work, but it is necessary, according to Mr. Douglas' views and experience, that Canadian manufacturers and shippers send representatives and demonstrators to the Transvaal and Cape Colony to properly place their goods before the trade and community. The United States and Germany are the most enterprising trade getters, and it is largely due to their sending properly qualified and pushing representatives into the field, that the preponderance of goods from those countries prevails. One of the handicaps to Canadian merchants in the South African field is the infrequent and irregular sailings from Canadian ports. There are fortnightly sailings from New York, Hamburg and Bremen, and the monthly boats from Montreal during the season of navigation are insufficient to assure importers of prompt deliveries.

The lack of push and enterprise of Canadian manufacturers was commented on strongly by Mr. Douglas. It was mentioned by him that often when orders are transmitted by commission merchants and dealers in Johannesburg and other business centres in South Africa, they are either incompletely or indifferently filled. This feature does not encourage native dealers to continue or increase their business transactions with Canadians. American and German shippers, on the other hand, will go out of their way and to considerable trouble and expense to fill all orders according to instructions and with the promptest despatch. It is natural that trade should "follow the flag," and all things being equal English and Canadian houses would in most cases secure the preference, but when dependence upon correct filling of orders is insecure the business instincts and experiences of the South African merchants lead them to deal with foreigners.

Mr. Douglas' business takes him from Cape Town to the Zambezi, and the story is the same all along the line. "If Canada wants business with South Africa she will just have to compete with Germany and the United States in every up-to-date and energetic way," was how Mr. Douglas expressed himself. "There are a number of lines in which reciprocal trade could be done, such as fruits," continued Mr. Douglas, "as the pears, peaches and plums of Cape Colony, on the Rhodes estates, which are largely engaged in the cultivation and expansion of these products, are of the finest quality and most prolific in growth. Canada, of course, is a great fruit country, and it might seem like sending coal to Newcastle to ship South African fruits here, but Canada is a large consumer of Californian and other fruits, and then why not of South African ?"

Mr. Douglas goes west this week, and after a few months' tour of the principal Canadian and United States commercial centres will leave for Johannesburg.

Are Asked for Again

It is a fact worth noting that where Old Homestead Canned Goods were sold last year they are asked for again.

The trade found the handsome Old Homestead label enclosed an article of the first class quality. They found they could depend upon the uniformity of the goods, that they were all grown in the same locality, packed in the same factory, put up by the same process, and that in fact the to stand for choice fruit and vegetables, to give permanent satisfaction and to build up trade. They found that their customers soon recognized the superior quality of Old Homestead goods and asked for them again.

If your canned goods were not satisfactory last year, if your customers complained they were not what they used to be, give Old Homestead goods a trial. They are sold on their merits. They are not surpassed by any goods on the Canadian market.

SUNK TO VANISHING POINT.

ACCORDING to Bradstreet's latest summary of trade conditions in the United States, wheat exports in the form of grain sunk to the vanishing point during the fiscal year 1904, when they were the smallest in thirty-three years, namely, 4,391,061 bush., valued at $3,899,725, compared with 153,252,795 bush., valued at $190,546,305 in 1880. Flour exports, i.e., 8,756,915 barrels valued at $39,866,441 in 1904, were less than half those of the record years 1900 and 1901, and the aggregate of wheat exports in all forms has been really trifling when compared with those of the anywhere recent past. The export value of all wheat is about $1 per bush., a price not approached heretofore since 1898, and exceeded only in the high priced years of 1880, 1881 and 1892. Bradstreet's hints at the desirability of the United States reaping large cereal crops of good quality if even a portion of their vanished export trade is to be regained.

IT WILL COME.

There is no good to be done by shutting our eyes to the fact that in the—perhaps—near future British and Irish millers will have to reckon seriously with Canadian flour. We are well in touch with the happenings in the Dominion, and it is no secret that this contingency is being actively prepared for. Canadians are saying in so many words that if they are to supply the food requirements of the British Empire within the next few years, as they seem likely to do, there is no reason why they should not supply it in a manufactured form instead of sending the raw material as heretofore. They argue—and the argument is a sound one—that the benefits to be derived therefrom are simply incalculable as judged by the results of the last five years. It is further said that there is no reason why Canada should not send quantities of flour over the border into the United States seeing that several American authorities have given it as their opinion that the States have about reached their limit in wheat growing, and that the population continues to increase in so marked and rapid a manner. In Canada, on the other hand, the grain-growing possibilities are as yet in the embryonic stage, and even now the American miller is looking there for wheat, although he finds it an expensive luxury and very inconvenient, and besides, he has to pay duty on the offal and by-products which cannot be exported. Further than that, again, there is said to be a movement among certain large American millers in favor of following the American farmers into Canada and building mills there, so that with Canadian millers coming to the Old Country things all round promise to be more lively than ever. We shall see what we shall see; but in the interval the time should be well spent by the millers of this country so that the new and well equipped Dominion millers do not steal a march upon us. Canadian mills will be newer and better than American mills, and the product will naturally be better also.—London Miller.

HARVEST BEGINS.

Hailstorms throughout Central Alberta have inflicted considerable damage on the growing grain crops during the past week. Even distribution of heat and moisture, however, has left general conditions excellent. The Fall wheat harvest has commenced, and within the next week will be general. The yield south of Lethbridge alone is now estimated at two million bushels.

BACK TO CANADA.

A shipment of Manitoba wheat stored in Boston, for shipment to Europe, was purchased by Canadian interests this week and will be brought back to Berlin and Hanover, Ont., where it will be used for milling purposes. This wheat, which under ordinary circumstances would have been shipped out of the country weeks ago, had been lying in store pending the time when it could be exported at a profit. It was finally sold for shipment back to Canada at a rate much higher than the market is in England at the present time.

CEREALS IN BLOCKS.

An American inventor recently devised a form of cereal food product which has a number of interesting features. The main thought in manufacture was to take some of the older foods of recognized nutritive value, such as oatmeal, cracked wheat, farina, cornmeal, barley food, etc., and put them up in such form that they could be kept for a reasonably long time free from contamination by germs or insect life.

The inventor started with the idea that the two chief elements in stimulating the development of these impurities were heat and moisture, and his experiments in the removal of the principal causes for this deterioration resulted in the production of small cubes so closely compacted that they no longer absorb moisture to any extent from the air.

CEREAL NOTES.

Pressure is being brought to bear on the Administration of the United States from various sources in the west to either abolish or materially modify the crop report system of the Department of Agriculture.

The United States has had a new market opened for its rice products through the recent action of the Cuban Congress in giving American rice a preferential duty over rice imported from other countries.

A scheme is on foot to irrigate the wheat lands of India, having in view the development of the grain growing industry in that country on a mammoth scale. The proposed work will take ten years to complete and will cost in the neighborhood of six millions sterling.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

CONDITIONS in the tobacco trade during the past week have been well up to the average. There has been nothing to curtail the buying. Weather conditions have been favorable, though excessively hot some days; general prosperity is felt, and an optimistic tone has followed the continued reports of big crops in Ontario and the west. Under the circumstances dealers are inclined to stock well, and the public have responded with brisk buying.

Somewhat unsettled conditions obtain in Quebec. The American dealers are just now looking into the meaning of the Quebec tax on travelers, and they begin to see that it will press pretty heavily on them. It is pointed out that the trade is hampered enough already with excessive dues and with the new provincial tax coming into force a still further burden is imposed. As the American dealers point out, the tax will eventually come out of the Quebec manufacturers' pockets, and they have decided that they were contributing quite sufficient before.

THE SOURCE OF TOBACCO.

AS all men are aware, Cuban tobacco is the best in the world. What makes it so no one knows. None of the many learned scientists who have laboriously investigated the matter have been able to discover the secret. What is more, wherever the secret may be hiding—in the soil, in the plant, or in the atmosphere—it seems to be safe in Cuba's possession; for all the numberless efforts to transplant and to reproduce the high-grade Cuban tobacco in other countries with satisfactory results, or to equal its excellence by the most assiduous cultivation of other tobaccos, have so far totally failed.

Curiously, too, this very superior grade of tobacco is produced in only one of the six provinces of Cuba—Pinar del Rio, the most westerly province — and in only one section of that province, namely, the sunny southern slope of its central mountain range. The land of this district, stretching along down the slope nearly to the sea for perhaps 15 miles and covering a space of perhaps 500 square miles, is entirely of the tertiary geological formation, and is said by the encyclopedias, rather superfluously, to be "peculiarly well suited for the cultivation of fine tobacco." The district is called, in common parlance, "Vuelta Abajo," and all attempts to equal in the other provinces the excellence of this "Vuelta Abajo" tobacco have proved futile. As in the analogous case of the wines produced from a few small vineyards in the French province of Champagne, which have a characteristically delicious flavor unattainable by other vintages, so for some inscrutable reason the tobacco raised in the "Vuelta Abajo" of Pinar del Rio remains unapproached and unapproachable in excellence through the centuries.

Tobacco of superior quality is grown throughout Cuba, in all of its provinces, but Pinar del Rio contains nearly three-quarters of the total tobacco acreage of the island, and Habana province nearly one-quarter, so that the tobacco area of the other four provinces, as is obvious, amounts to comparatively little. Santa Clara, however, produces a large crop on a relatively small acreage.

Unlike the sugar cane, which is an exotic, the tobacco plant is indigenous to Cuba, and the natives were found contentedly smoking it when the island was discovered by Columbus in 1492. It became an article of export as early as the sixteenth century, and ever since then has been one of the chief commercial products of the island. Spain imposed very high taxes and tariffs upon it and derived from it much revenue, and even as early as 1750 annual exportation of tobacco from Cuba was about 20,000,000 pounds. It is said that somewhere near an equal amount was annually smuggled out of the island; and if so, the total product, making due allowance for home consumption, must have been as much as 45,000,000 pounds annually in the eighteenth century. In 1894 the total product was 62,000,000 pounds. Since the war the amount raised has been somewhat less than this. In common with the sugar and other industries, the tobacco plantations suffered severely during the revolutionary struggle.

TARIFF ON TOBACCO.

The Department of Commerce and Labor has received and published the new customs tariff of Newfoundland as recently amended. Section 6 of the new tariff provides a duty of $5 per hundred pounds on tobacco coming from foreign countries which levy an import duty on fish, the origin of Newfoundland. The tariff imposes on tobacco and its manufactures the following import duties: Manufactured tobacco, 6 per cent. ad valorem and 33 cents per pound; leaf, stripped or partly manufactured, 5 per cent. ad valorem and 40 cents per pound; leaf and stems, 40 cents per pound; stems for manufacturing snuff, 50 cents per one hundred pounds; cigars, $10 per thousand and 20 per cent. ad valorem; cigarettes, 30 per cent. ad valorem; tobacco pipes of all kinds, pipe mounts, cigar and cigarette cases, cigar and cigarette holders, and cases for same, smokers' sets and cases therefor, and tobacco pouches, 40 per cent. ad valorem; snuff, 50 cents per pound.

PIPE TOBACCO.

Smoking tobacco in packages and plug forms an important part of the grocer's stock. Even more than cigars, this form of the seductive weed can be kept and sold to the ordinary customers. The family men who deal at the grocery store are, as a general thing, more addicted to the use of the pipe than cigars. The homely method of smoking sticks and grows stronger with age. Do not slight this side of your business. The sales are regular and satisfactory, and the profits are worth while.

ARE YOU FAIR?

I ask a trial for my famous Cigars, the Pebble (5c.) and Pharaoh (10c.). Have you given them a trial? If not, are you condemning the Cigars or the opportunity? No reason why you shouldn't sell Cigars! You might as well sell them as some other grocer. They do not take up much time or much room. And, then think of that offer of mine!

T&B is out to please everybody every time. Smokers want the goods. In T&B they get them. Acquiring the knack of suiting the many, takes time at first, but when acquired it is a shortcut to satisfaction, which, of course, means a shortcut to sales. That is why grocers have difficulty in tabulating the troubles they experience in selling T&B. There are no troubles in connection with it—nothing but Profit. No doubt you intend to start keeping T&B.

GLEANED FROM THE TRAVELERS

MR. LOU WALSH St. Marys, manager of the late John W. Walsh's grocery business, met with an accident while driving last week, spraining his back.

Walsh Bros., Stratford, have opened up house-cleaning operations in their liquor store, and are improving their premises generally in readiness for Fall trade.

Mr. T. S. Ford, Mitchell, is anticipating a pleasure trip to Vancouver and the west. His many friends wish him an enjoyable holiday.

Mr. B. B. Gunn, Seaforth, member for the Dominion House, has returned from a long and tedious session on Parliament Hill. The trade will be able to find him at his place of business from now on.

Mr. A. Young, Seaforth, one of the most up-to-date grocers in Western Ontario, reports business good, notwithstanding the season of the year. Mr. Young is enjoying first-class health nad is moving about in his usual "speedy" way.

Mr. Dill, Seaforth, reports trade as fairly good.

Mr. C. A. Nairn, Goderich, is taking his Summer holidays. The trade hope he may thoroughly enjoy a well-earned rest. Mr. T. Nairn will also leave shortly on a holiday trip.

Mr. G. M. Elliott, Goderich, remarks that fruit in his locality is not so plentiful as last year, and that the trade have already felt the effect of the shortage.

BIG COLD STORAGE CONCERN.

A meeting of a large number of prominent Canadian business men and politicians was held in Ottawa recently to consider the formation of a $5,000,000 cold storage and transportation company. The concern will be the largest of its kind ever established in Canada. Its charter, which will be immediately applied for, will seek the right to carry on the business of a general cold storage and transportation company, to establish cold storage plants at all points deemed expedient; to build and operate steamships; to construct refrigerator cars for use on any railway, and the right to acquire at any time any existing company doing business in the same direction.

The most up-to-date cold storage system for the transportation of Canadian farm products will be introduced, and in this connection cold storage plants will be erected at various strategic points throughout the Dominion and also at the ports of arrival in the British Isles.

FRANCE COMMENTS.

The June issue of the Commercial and Industrial Union, published in Paris, France, contains an interesting contribution by M. Poindron on "The Economic future of Canada." From an educational point of view it is valuable as showing the enormous possibilities of Canada and what France, as well as Canada, has to gain from closer international relations between the two countries.

ERECTING NEW WAREHOUSE.

Nicholson & Bain, wholesale commission merchants and brokers, Winnipeg, are about to let the contract for a warehouse to be erected in Calgary. This firm have had a branch establishment in Calgary for over a year, but their rapidly increasing business demands more commodious premises.

TO PROHIBIT GUESSING CONTESTS

Uncle Sam has decided to take a hand in the gift enterprise business and through a ruling of the post office department proposes to exclude from the mails all newspapers and other publications carrying advertisements with reference to guessing contests and similar devices for inducing trade.

The wholesale grocers of the United States are forming a national association for purposes of mutual protection.

THE PRACTICAL GROCER

A Manual and Guide for

The Grocer, The Provision Merchant, and Allied Trades

By W. H. SIMMONDS, F.J.I.

With Contributions by Specialists, Trade Experts, and Members of the Trades. Illustrated by a Series of Separately Printed Plates.

THE PRACTICAL GROCER has no forerunner in its own field. Its aim is to bring together, within reasonable compass, all the most useful information and advice upon the grocery trade and the trades usually allied with it. The scope of the work is wide. It provides all that is required for every member of the trade to make a science of his calling. Not only are the goods of each branch of the trade dealt with in detail, their production, characteristics, uses, storage, trade terms, weight, adulteration, analyses, recipes, &c., being given, and a general view of the sources of supply; but whole sections of the book are devoted to the several branches of the business itself: arrangement of shops, management, routine, proprietorship, book-keeping and office matters, control of branches, trade law, associations,—in short everything with which the grocer or other trader, as trader, master, or assistant, is concerned.

"THE FAIRBANK PLAN"

and see just what "The Fairbank Plan" is. While we spend hundreds of thousands of dollars every year advertising the six great Fairbank specialties:

Gold Dust Washing Powder
Fairy Soap, Copco Soap
Fairbank's Glycerine-Tar Soap
Fairbank's Scouring Soap

and educating the public regarding them; and while we intend to continue doing this, we realize fully that advertising alone has not accomplished the splendid results we have enjoyed in the sale of these goods, but that "the man behind the counter" has been an important factor in extending and increasing our trade. It was the realization of this fact that gave birth to "The Fairbank Plan," as a method of rewarding the retail clerks for their earnest co-operation in selling these goods and, consequently, a portion of our immense advertising appropriation is now set aside for the recognition of the dealer and his clerks.

"The Fairbank Plan" is an absolutely fair method of rewarding the clerk in direct proportion to the interest displayed in pushing the six specialties, as each package of these goods is couponed in such a manner that the coupon can be easily removed before the goods pass into the hands of the consumer. For these coupons we offer many valuable articles.

If you will send for an illustrated premium list of "The Fairbank Plan" it will convince you that this is no cheap trading-stamp scheme.

SEMI-ANNUAL MEETING OF

The Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada

Winnipeg, July 26 and 27

SUBSTANTIAL, steady, and highly encouraging progress was shown at the semi-annual meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada, held in Manitoba Hall, Winnipeg, July 26 and 27. It is true that the number of those in attendance was not so large as might have been desired, but this is the fate of all midsummer gatherings of the kind. The Retail Hardware Association, a strong and well organized body, meeting at the same time, had a small meeting, but both associations showed a gratifying increase in the paid-up membership, and members were able to tell of the substantial, tangible benefits which the association only a few months old had already brought them. Merchants from different towns were able to report that the association had put a stop to price cutting on staples, and that hence they were actually making a small profit on sugar, salt and tobacco. Retail grocers know that this is a wonderful showing, for many of them have been accustomed for years to sell these goods either at cost or at a loss.

Mr. T. J. Lawlor,

The burning question in the west is the long credit evil, and the subject was discussed in all its bearings. Finally; the recommendation of the February meeting was endorsed with a slight amendment. Readers of The Grocer will remember that the February convention recommended the closing of all accounts on the first day of November in each year and the enforcement of a strictly cash system until the first day of May, 30 day accounts being considered as cash. It was decided at this meeting that it would be inconvenient to enforce this rule strictly during the month of April, a month when the farmers are buying implements and incurring many expenses of a similar nature. Consequently the cash period was shortened one month, closing now on the first of April. While this policy is strongly recommended by the association, and will, no doubt, be followed closely by the majority of its members, there is no compulsion in the matter, and members were not required to make any pledges.

At the Thursday night meeting, which brought the convention to a close, a number of prominent wholesalers were present to show their active sympathy with the association movement. They made it abundantly evident that the association may rely upon the active sympathy and support of the wholesale interests of Winnipeg, and that pressure will be brought to bear upon any retailers who persist in staying outside the association and pursuing cut-throat methods which are prejudicial to all legitimate trade. A careful perusal of their speeches is recommended.

THE MEMBERSHIP ROLL.

Some idea of the work which has been done by W. A. Coulson, the energetic young secretary, during the last two months, may be gathered from an examination of the list of members given below. It must be remembered that the greater number of these members has been secured during the six weeks or two months spent by Mr. McRobie in active canvas; that the work has only begun, and that several hundred new members will undoubtedly be added before the annual meeting in February. W. Ledoux, Arnaud, Man.

OPENING SESSION.

In opening the first session of the convention on Wednesday morning, July 26, President Lawlor reviewed at considerable length the history of the association, and outlined its objects. The question of "supply accounts" was an important one, and it was the principal grievance against the wholesale trade. Sometimes it was found that a wholesale house would encourage a new man to start a business in a town already well supplied with stores. This should be stopped and a strong association could remedy the matter owing to the influence which they would have with the wholesalers. Then there was the regulation of the prices paid for country produce. It was simply absurd that merchants should frequently pay more for butter and eggs than the market price. Dealers were willing to accept farm produce as cash in payment for goods; they were not looking for a profit on produce, but they did want to get their money for it. By eliminating cut throat competition the association would remedy this trouble.

Then there was the question of long credits—the burning question in the west. For that trouble the association suggested a remedy, and it was for the convention to discuss that remedy.

In reviewing the history of the association, President Lawlor paid a high tribute to the merchants of Boissevain, to whom the credit was due for initiating the movement. For years there had been a disturbing element in Boissevain; the turnover of the merchants had been very large, but their profits at the end of a year were small. They started the association movement, and when they went home from the February meeting they formed their local association with the result that they were now making a profit on staples. In Deloraine and Killarney similar gratifying results had been secured.

At the February meeting the association had instructed the executive to engage a secretary, and after some unavoidable delays W. A. Coulson was appointed secretary and organizer in the latter part of April. He had begun work in Morden, and in the few months he has been on the road he has covered Southern Manitoba. As a result the association had now more than 200 bona fide members, and, of course, the work of organization had only commenced.

A Winnipeg Dealer.

That Winnipeg dealers are in sympathy with the association was evidenced by the remarks of William Wellsband, a city retailer, who spoke after Mr. Lawlor. Mr. Wellsband became a member of the association.

Secretary's Report.

Secretary W. A. Coulson then presented his report of the work accomplished since he became organizer. It was in part as follows:

"My report covers a period of three months, from April 25 to July 25, from the date of my appointment to the present time. In beginning my organization work I commenced with the Town of Morden, on the Deloraine branch, working from that town west as far as Napinka, in the territories, and subsequently finishing that line from Winkler east. The Estevan, Lyleton, Gretna and Hartney sections have also been completed, and part of the Arcola, Brandon and Souris branches, and these would have been finished had the merchants been at home. The membership of this association is now in excess of 200; of these 24 have not yet paid up, but they will do so as soon as the organization of their towns has been completed. All of which is respectfully submitted.

"W. A. COULSON,
"Secretary."

Report Discussed.

G. L. Dodd, Melita, spoke in high praise of Secretary Coulson. He had reason to believe that he was an active, energetic young man, who has accomplished a great deal for the association. The showing made in the few weeks he spent on the road was very creditable. After some further remarks by R. F. Moore, of Cartwright, and some explanations by Mr. Coulson of particular phases of the work, the secretary's report was received and adopted.

General Business.

The meeting was then thrown open for general discussion of association work, and a number of members spoke of the good results already secured by the association.

S. K. Colquhoun.

of Deloraine, spoke briefly and to the point. "The association has done a great deal for us already in Deloraine, as it has enabled us to secure reasonable prices for sugar, tobacco, and salt, in Deloraine, and some surrounding towns. Formerly we sold these goods at a loss; now we are making a small profit."

J. D. Baine.

of Boissevain, also had a good report to present. "I came to the meeting in February with no intention of joining. Frankly, I didn't believe an association would amount to anything. But I was persuaded to join, and after the convention was over we called a meeting of all Boissevain merchants except the hardware. At that and subsequent meetings we arranged prices to be paid for produce and charged for certain staples. We make no changes until all have been notified, and we are now working in harmony together."

The Credit System.

After some further speeches along the same line, President Lawlor introduced the subject of the credit system. He first briefly outlined the scheme recommended last February, viz., the closing of all accounts on November 1st, and the strict maintenance of a cash system of business until the first of May. It was understood, of course, that 30 days accounts should be taken as cash.

"My own opinion," said Mr. Lawlow," is that April 1st is a better date than May 1st. We recognize that it isn't possible to do a cash business in this country the year round. The best we can do is limit the credit period. April is the month when the farmers take up their machinery, and they need credit then."

G. L. Dodd, Melita, did not agree with the president. "I have heard," said he, "that the T. Eaton Co. once refused credit to Senator Cox for some trifling article which he wanted one time when he didn't happen to have any cash on his person. That was business. If you give credit after April and May, you give it on goods for which you must pay yourself long before the farmer pays. The farmer should be prepared to pay cash up to August 1st."

E. H. Glinz, Oak River, thought it would be a mistake to attempt any further curtailment of the credit system than that contemplated. "We must not attempt what is impossible."

President Lawlor remarked that it must be understood the association advocates the curtailment of credit at all times. It was not intended that indiscriminate credit should be given between May and November.

W. H. Stovin, Waskada, was not in favor of any hard and fast rules. He believed more in the application of common sense to individual cases.

J. F. Hunter, Boissevain, was also strongly opposed to any hard and fast rules. "What are we to do with our town customers? They require credit as much after May 1 as before. I would rather give credit the year round to an all round good man than have him buy by mail order. The coupon credit system is the best. The trouble is that customers often buy goods and say 'charge it' without asking for any stated length of credit. Unless we keep our own books it is often the case that we don't know how much credit a man gets. He may be good for a little, but not for a large amount.

"Let us have a local association in each town, and have each merchant report all his accounts to the secretary. Then we can know what every farmer owes in the town."

J. D. Baine, of Boissevain, also thought it a mistake to fix any time for closing the books. He suggested that a committee be formed to draft legislation to be submitted to the Manitoba Government whereby the retailer would be given more adequate security for his accounts.

S. K. Colquhoun, of Deloraine, said he had not lost much by doing a credit business, that very much depended upon one's knowledge of men. He did not care to be bound by any hard and fast rule.

IN A NUTSHELL

THE OBJECTS OF THE ASSOCIATION.

(1) The curtailment of credits with the object of approaching a cash system. All accounts to be closed November 1st and no credit to be given until April 1st. Thirty-day transactions to be treated as cash.

(2) Standard Prices.—All staple goods such as salt, sugar, tobacco, etc., to be retailed at standard uniform prices.

(3) Produce—A uniform price to be paid for butter of good quality and other farm produce, maximum prices to be arranged in each town and not to be exceeded. In no case should butter tubs or packages be supplied free.

(4) Supplying New Accounts.—To induce the wholesale houses to refuse to start up new firms in towns where business is already overdone.

A Cash Experience.

Miles McKay, of Oxbow, said he was sorry that no person had yet spoken of a cash business, for he believed it could be conducted successfully.

"Three years ago in my own general store business I found myself in a position to buy for cash. For a year I ran a cash business and I did $2,000 more trade than in any previous year. Then I built larger, increased my stock, and began to sell goods on credit. Soon I had a large amount on my books, and I saw that if I was to continue the credit system I must regulate it. So I started the coupon system, and have controlled and curtailed credit. In November I am going to make every effort to collect my accounts. The percentage collected last Fall disappointed me, and I am going to return to a cash basis."

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

At the afternoon session the discussion of the credit system was resumed by President Lawlor, who laid stress upon the argument that the time had arrived when, if the credit system must be continued, it must be controlled and conducted on certain terms.

J. H. Elliott spoke of the need of such an association arrangement in Carnduff, Assa. The local merchants are able to arrange their prices for produce on a fair basis, but if they don't give unlimited credit in Carnduff their customers can get it in other towns. There is great need of a curtailment of credit, but Carnduff alone can do very little. His experience was that farmers are buying and speculating in land to the neglect of their store bills. The merchant gets what little is left after the claims of the banks and land companies have been satisfied.

Wilfrid Ledoux, of Arnaud, said that in his seven years' business experience he had had his own troubles with long credits. In those years he had been in business in different parts of the country. In the Dauphin and Swan River districts he had kept pretty well to a cash business, but in Arnaud business is on credit basis the year round with about half the population.

"We give ten per cent. discount for cash in Summer and Fall, but so many are speculating in land that this does not prove very attractive. About half our sales consist of 30 days' goods, such as sugar, so you see we have our own troubles. We could sell cheaper on a cash basis, and there is always a danger of losing cash customers while we conduct a credit business. I think the association plan of curtailing credit is practicable."

The Association Plan Tried.

After a few remarks from W. Coblentz, of Altona, Chas. Stewart, of Rosenfeld, told of his successful experience with the association plan of closing all accounts in November, and insisting upon cash during the Winter. He had worked this plan successfully until compelled to abandon it because an opposition store used it against him. He had no doubt that if all the merchants in a town would give the plan a fair trial it would work. He thought his own experience proved it.

J. S. Riddell, of Frobisher, Assa., explained that his plan had been to close accounts with cash or notes every three months. The only advantage in the note was that it constituted an acknowledgment of the obligation.

F. Fulston, of Riding Mountain, said that he came from the east last Fall, and was astounded at the amount of credit business done.

"Even the boys," said he, "when they treat the girls to candy, inquire 'Is my face good for that?' Last January we posted up notices of a cash system, and it worked for a little time all right. Then the farmers came in and forced us to give credit by threats of going elsewhere. I think the five months' cash system would work all right if we all stand together."

J. H. Snelgrove thought his own Town of Dunrea the worst long credit town in Western Canada. "They think we don't need any money at all. Men with $300 wheat money in their pockets have asked to have ten cents worth of candy charged. We must have backbone if our plan is to work. I believe we should have a strict cast iron rule, but I think we should make the opening date November 15, as many farmers will not have threshed by the first of the month."

E. H. Glinz, Oak River, remarked that the credit evil grew worse as the country grew older. New settlers frequently had money, but the older ones all had the land speculation mania. The Oak River section was steadily growing worse.

An Important Question.

F. Fulston, of Riding Mountain, asked what could be done if a competitor in any town who was not a member of the association persisted in giving indiscriminate credit.

President Lawlor's reply was to the point. "Very few merchants," said he, "who are doing a credit business, are independent of the wholesale houses. Now the wholesale men are just as anxious for the success of this association as are its own officers. If any dealer persists in giving indiscriminate credit in any town, thereby hindering the main work of the association, we can lay the matter before the wholesale trade, explain that this dealer is running contrary to the wishes of the majority, and they will put the brakes on him. Moreover, we can use our influence with the wholesale houses to have all 'supply' accounts stopped. When this association is in working shape the wholesalers will not be willing to offend us all for the benefit of one, and we can count upon their support in all fair measures."

J. F. Hunter, Boissevain, again objected strongly to the adoption of any hard and fast rules. "In this stage of the association's existence our work should be mainly educational. Many dealers are afraid to come in because of this rule. I think the man who sells cattle in February has as good an asset as the man who sells wheat in the Fall, and he is just as much entitled to credit. I object to a hard and fast rule."

E. H. Glinz, of Oak River, replied to Mr. Hunter. "Perhaps I am weak," said he, "perhaps I am lacking in backbone. I can't do this thing alone, but I am convinced I can work with others."

The Secretary.

The president now called on Secretary Coulson to take part in the discussion. Mr. Coulson said he had visited 83 towns and 225 merchants. He had found nearly all in favor of the association scheme of dealing with the credit evil. He said the wholesale houses had backed him up nobly in some hot arguments, and he instanced some trouble in the Morden and Winkler section which had been settled satisfactorily by their assistance.

"My biggest difficulty," concluded Mr. Coulson, "has been the lack of confidence of one merchant in his fellow merchant. Often I have had to smooth over personal differences before I could bring merchants together."

After some further discussion it was decided by a practically unanimous vote to amend the recommendation of last February by shortening the cash period one month. The rule is not compulsory, but the association strongly advises its members to close all accounts on November 1, and insist on cash payments until April 1. It was also recommended that a uniform rate of at least 10 per cent. be charged on all overdue accounts.

A committee, composed of President Lawlor and Messrs. Sayles and Glinz, was appointed to invite the wholesale trade to attend a meeting on Thursday night. The convention then adjourned, to meet at 8 o'clock that evening.

WEDNESDAY EVENING MEETING.

At the Wednesday evening meeting the vexed question of prices paid for farm produce was under discussion. G. C. Sayles, of Elva, was the first speaker. This produce question was a sore point with him, as he had seldom been let down easy. Perhaps a better market for farm produce was wanted; at all events it often happened that country merchants pay more for their butter and eggs than they get themselves from the commission and produce houses. This, at least, should be stopped.

A. G. Munro.

A. G. Munro, of Morden, said there was little trouble now in Morden as to the prices paid for butter and eggs. "The big trouble is in the bad quality of the butter and the difficulty of buying it according to its quality, but I don't think we can do much more in Morden than we are doing."

R. F. Moore.

R. F. Moore, Cartright, thought this subject fully as important as that of credit. Personally he did not have so much trouble in keeping his prices at the market level as in getting a good market. He found a tendency among good butter makers to send their butter to the city, and he could not blame them, as the country store usually pays as much for bad butter as for good.

Mr. G. C. Sayles,
Member of Executive, Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada.

W. G. McLaren.

of Souris, said that since Secretary Coulson had visited their town they had had no trouble about the price of butter and eggs. The Souris merchants were no longer paying more for butter and eggs than they could get for these products—they were paying the market price. He suggested having a cold storage centre, say in Winnipeg, in which association members could store their butter.

Other Speakers.

F. W. Clingan, of Virden, and E. H. Glinz, of Oak River, also spoke of troubles with bad butter, and discussed other aspects of the produce question. The big trouble was that dealers were paying the same price for poor butter as for good. Consequently they in turn were paid practically one price, and that was the price of poor butter.

J. F. Hunter.

of Boissevain, spoke at length on this subject, which he considered fully as difficult as that of handling accounts properly. "In order to get a better price for butter," said he, "it is necessary that we should have a more uniform article. Country butter is hard to sell in the city for table use. We should also remember that city merchants sell butter at a profit, not at cost, as we do in the country. Moreover, the high retail prices we hear about are usually for good creamery butter, so I don't think the produce houses treat us badly.

"But we must stop taking soap grease at the same price as good butter—butter should be graded and bought on its merits. Moreover, it isn't right that we should retail our butter at cost. We sell our town customers our good butter and leave the soap grease for the produce and commission houses."

President Lawlor.

T. J. Lawlor said that in Killarney, since the association got in its good work, a uniform price is paid for butter and eggs, and these products are retailed at a profit.

R. F. Moore.

R. F. Moore explained the difficulty of grading dairy butter and buying it on its merits. "Sometimes our very best customers are the poorest butter makers. Women are very sensitive about the reputation of their butter, and the dealer can't afford to offend them."

President Lawlor.

Mr. Lawlor said that in Killarney the dealers all stand together and grade all butter brought to their stores. "We all refuse to accept bogus bills, and why should we accept bogus butter?"

Mr. Lawlor then explained his method of handling tub butter. He empties every tub that comes to the store, scalds and washes the tub, sprinkles borax in the tub, and lines it with parchment paper. In this way his butter is kept sweet and clean for any length of time, and he always gets a good price for it.

R. F. Moore was not convinced. "I think I know good butter," said he, "but I know a good customer better. I have a splendid customer who brings me a little butter, and it is always very bad. I would not dare offend her by paying less than I pay for good butter."

Mr. Lawlor said that his grocery and produce business was now paying about 10 per cent. more than before just because he followed the association rules.

It was finally decided that a committee composed of President Lawlor, Secretary Coulson and R. F. Moore, interview the cold storage houses and report.

Tribute to Secretary.

Before the meeting adjourned A. G. Munro, of Morden, paid a high tribute to Secretary Coulson, and related his good work in Morden and Winkler. "We couldn't have a better secretary than Mr. Coulson."

New Executive Member.

As T. B. Jackson, of Elgin, is no longer in business, Wilfrid Ledoux, of Arnaud, was elected to his place on the Jersey Cream Yeast Cakes Gillett vs. Lumsden

We have very much pleasure in advising the trade that the Highest Courts in the British Empire have decided in our favor. "Right prevailed against Wrong." We sincerely thank the trade, especially our friends in the wholesale trade, for their kind words and congratulations in our winning above suit.

We also beg to thank you from the bottom of our hearts, the Grocers who have stayed by us through thick and thin, although warned by cards, threatened by salesmen if they handled our goods, who still continued to sell Jersey Cream. To those Grocers who returned our goods, who refused to sell our goods, who hid away our goods, we now expect them to come forward and assist us to collect $50,000 damages.

To those who asked us for bonds—one firm "Ye Gods," sent us a bond drawn up by the solicitors for $10,000 to pay their anticipated losses through writ, for damages threatened by the plaintiff.

We have had our signs torn down, customers threatened by salesmen, and yet our yeast has steadily increased in sales. We feel positive that without this suit we, to-day, would have had the biggest half of the trade in Yeast Cakes in the Dominion.

Gentlemen of the Grocery Trade: We ask you to take an active interest in the sale of Jersey Cream Yeast Cakes. We will study your interest as well as our own, by giving you the best possible goods that can be manufactured in Dry Hop Yeast Cakes.

THURSDAY EVENING MEETING.

At the Thursday evening meeting there were present by invitation a number of Winnipeg's most prominent wholesale merchants, and two or three members of the Western Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers' Association. The following wholesale men were present: A. L. Johnson, of the Ames Holden Co., president of the Winnipeg Board of Trade; A. S. Lock, of Foley, Lock & Larson; Wm. Georgeson, of Codville & Co.; H. M. Belcher, of Gaults' Limited; Thos. Ryan, of Thos. Ryan & Co.; D. K. Elliott and J. Clark, of R. J. Whitla & Co.; J. H. Crosthwaite, of G. F. & J. Galt, and A. McAllister, of the W. E. Sanford Mfg. Co. Among the hardware men noticed by The Grocer were Robert Wyatt, Winnipeg; J. B. Curran, Brandon; J. A. Gilhuly, Arden, and Wm. Gordon, Winnipeg. A few city retailers, not members of associations, were also present.

Before the visitors arrived President Lawlor addressed the meeting briefly, urging the members, if they had not already done so, to form local associations on their return home. "This country is so vast that the arranging of equitable and fair prices on sugar, tobacco and other staple lines can be best attended to by local organizations. It has been done already. In some three or four towns where formerly business was unprofitable because of cut-throat competition, there has already been a great improvement as the result of the work done by local associations formed after our February convention. At that meeting we became acquainted with each other and found that our competitors were not such bad fellows after all."

The committee appointed to interview the cold storage companies announced that they had not yet anything definite to report. The visitors having arrived by this time, the president proceeded to acquaint them with the objects of the association.

President Lawlor.

"In extending to the wholesale trade a hearty welcome to our meeting," said President Lawlor, "I do so after our members have thoroughly discussed a number of different subjects. Our object in inviting you here is to outline to you our aims and the work that we have done. We recognize that the retail interests are in great measure those of the wholesaler also, and we know that we have your hearty support."

Mr. Lawlor then outlined the history of association work in Manitoba. Some ten or twelve years ago an association was formed in Winnipeg during Bonspiel week, an executive was appointed and nothing more was ever heard of it.

"The troubles of the retailer became more aggravated as the years went by. As we all know, about 35 per cent. of the sales of the grocery store consist of sugar, salt and tobacco, and in very many places these goods were handled at an actual loss. That merchant was fortunate who got cost price for these goods. In Boissevain the trouble became very acute, and last Summer the merchants of that town put their heads together and formed an association. They issued circular letters to Southern Manitoba merchants inviting them to meet in Boissevain. The response was encouraging, and it was decided to hold a general meeting in Winnipeg during the Bonspiel week. This convention was a success, and we organized on a permanent basis. Men who had been enemies before met and discussed common interests amicably. We disagreed on many subjects, but after a long discussion we found that our differences of opinion were trifling. We went to our homes and put our ideas into practice, with the result that towns formerly in a very bad way are now in good shape."

SCOPE OF THE ASSOCIATION.

The Retail Merchants' Association, as its name implies, includes the whole of Canada west of the lakes in its territory. It is true that the work of organization has not yet extended far west of Manitoba, but from assurances of support and sympathy received by the executive there can be no doubt that the great majority of western grocers and general merchants will fall in line with the association as soon as they have been visited by the secretary. The movement has the hearty endorsation of the wholesale trade and its success is assured.

After sketching the difficulties of the produce question, Mr. Lawlor took up the credit question and explained the remedy proposed.

"One matter more, gentlemen," he concluded. "We have our sins, and we believe you have yours. Wrong has been done us by the opening of new accounts in western towns where the trade is already overdone. In future we ask you to consider the merits of each case as we put it before you. When our secretary approaches you on this subject, give him a hearing."

President A. L. Johnson.

The popular president of the Winnipeg Board of Trade was the first of the visitors to speak. After expressing his pleasure in meeting the association, and his sympathy with its aims, he proceeded to deal with the credit evil. The wholesale man was better protected than the retailer, as he had access to commercial agency reports, etc., and yet he often made mistakes. It was easy to see how the retailer could make more. In all their efforts to curtail credits the association could count upon the enthusiastic support of the wholesale men.

William Georgeson.

William Georgeson, of Codville & Co., made a good speech. "I know very well that you have many troubles requiring a remedy," said he. "Two weeks ago I was out on one of the western branch lines, and in a little stretch of 50 miles I found the price of butter ranging from 11 to 16 cents per lb. When I asked the reason of the high price I was always told that so and so in the same or another town was responsible for it all." I said, "why don't you get together and stop this? There is an association for this purpose." I found most of them favorable to the idea, and they only require a visit from the secretary to get them in line.

"In the matter of prices for staples the position of the retailer is much the same now as that of the wholesaler a few years ago. For years we tried to get an understanding about the price of staples like sugar, and we couldn't do it. In the end we had to have some one else protect us, and, as you know, the refiner does so now. We sell at the price set by the refiners, and when we make a declaration every three months that neither directly nor indirectly have we deviated from that price, we get a rebate. Now why should not this arrangement extend also to the retail trade? I thing the price of sugar, tobacco and similar staples should be fixed for the retail trade as well as the wholesale. (Applause.) This is not unfair to the consumer, for no consumer has any right to object to a reasonable profit. The general public would be slow to believe that the dealers of this country are making no profit on their staples.

"I am sorry that Mr. Johnson did not touch upon the taxation of peddlers and the general subject of taxation. In Winnipeg the whole principle is wrong for the dealers pay too much as compared with the banks, loan and insurance companies."

Touching on the credit question, Mr. Georgeson explained the necessity of a cheap Chattel Mortgage Act, such as obtains in Dakota, whereby merchants can obtain security without much trouble. The registration of such a mortgage costs 25 cents, and its search 40 cents, in Dakota. There should also be some way of examining debtors who are able to pay in order to prevent frauds. As to the opening of new accounts in towns already well supplied, he agreed that the wholesale houses should pay attention to the representations of the association in each particular case.

D. K. Elliott.

D. K. Elliott, of R. J. Whitla & Co., was the next speaker. He said that there was no class of people doing more to develop the western country than the much abused retailers. He thought that if anything was lacking it was that the storekeepers did not put a sufficiently high value upon themselves or their stocks. Credit was necessary in the west, but it must be carefully controlled.

Thos. Ryan.

Thos. Ryan was surprised to find that there was no profit on sugar, salt and tobacco. In humorous manner he advised his hearers to concentrate their energies on boots and shoes. He was in sympathy with the organization.

A. S. Lock.

A. S. Lock, of Foley, Lock & Larson, was glad to have an opportunity to express his sympathy with the association. Perhaps the wholesalers could help in this credit difficulty. "The first element in the problem is the farmer, the consumer; the second is the retailer, and the third is the wholesaler. Perhaps the remedy will have to come from No. 3 and work back to No. 1. I would advise you to close your accounts by notes and make the farmers pay. The wholesale houses are going to make a big effort to collect their accounts this Fall, and the retailers must do the same.

"In regard to produce, it is absurd to pay more than the market price. You might have your secretary send out prices of produce to you every week, or since that would be a lot of work, you could gain the same end by watching the prices in the trade papers like The Canadian Grocer.

"I am glad to know that in association towns you are now getting a profit on sugar, tobacco and salt. You can do it, for the wholesale men at one time had the same troubles, and they have remedied them."

Mr. Lock recommended strongly the advisability of merchants in the same town comparing accounts, so that each might know when a certain customer owed a large amount. He also explained the difficulties of a wholesale house when a man comes with the cash in his hand to buy a stock, intending to start business in a town already well supplied. He closed with an assurance that courteous treatment would always be extended to the secretary by Foley, Lock & Larson.

"THE CANADIAN GROCER" THE OFFICIAL MEDIUM.

After due consideration, President Lawlor and his associates on the executive have chosen "The Canadian Grocer" as the official medium for association news. They feel the necessity of having one paper as the recognized medium for confidential news intended for the trade only. "The Canadian Grocer" has been chosen because it is strictly a trade journal and is never read by the general public. News of a general character may appear in other papers, but the inner workings of the association will appear only in "The Canadian Grocer."

Other Speakers.

H. M. Belcher, representing Gaults', Limited; J. H. Crosthwaite, representing G. F. & J. Galt, and A. McAllister, of the W. E. Sanford Mfg. Co., spoke briefly, assuring the association of their sympathy and support.

J. D. Baine moved a vote of thanks to the wholesale men, which was carried unanimously. The convention then adjourned.

NEW BROKERAGE FIRM.

J. W. Gorham & Co., Halifax, N.S., after being a life time in the wholesale grocery business, are now going into the wholesale brokers' business, and are on the lookout for agencies, domestic and foreign. This firm have a splendid connection in the Maritime Provinces, and should prove successful in their new enterprise.

IT is easy to buy canned PEAS now at cost; also very easy to criticise them, but it takes a lot of study and hard work to produce a satisfactory canned pea. We hope that every Packer is producing the best pea possible. This will do more to increase the consumption than the cost prices. We are doing our best to make the "AUTUMN LEAF BRAND" just right. We have a few thousand cases more of the medium grade peas to offer at prices that will forever eliminate the Hawker in that line.

"AUTUMN LEAF BRAND CORN."—When it comes to nice fancy sweet sugar corn it is a 100 to one that we lead. Reasons why:—Our Manager learned the corn canning business with the world-renowned corn packer, J. W. Jones, of Portland, Me., commencing August, 1869, and followed the business from that time. He has a thorough technical knowledge as well as the practical experience of all these years, with and at the head of some of the oldest and largest Packers in the U.S., as well as with the most important Packer in Canada. SUGAR TO SOUTH AFRICA.

C. M. Kittson, Canadian agent in South Africa, writing to the Department of Trade and Commerce under date June 24, points out that the Southern African colonies last year imported sugar to the value of $3,425,515. Owing to the decreased output in Mauritius Mr. Kittson thinks that Canada may be able to send refined sugar to the Cape. The duty upon refined sugar and sugar candy in South Africa is five shillings per 100 pounds.

CHANGE IN FIRM.

A CHANGE has just occurred in the firm of Wm. Braid & Co., of Vancouver, Mr. James Beveridge having been admitted as a partner. The firm will remain under the same trade name.

Established some 11 or 12 years ago, Braid & Co. have gained a name that is known from Dawson in the north, to San Francisco and beyond in the south, while their business in the Dominion extends throughout the country. Originally the firm were engaged in the wholesale grocery trade, paying special attention to teas and coffees and this branch became so important that a few years ago it was decided to give up general groceries and devote their energy entirely to teas and coffees.

Mr. Beveridge, the new partner, became connected with the firm 10 years ago. A native of Northumberland, Mr. Beveridge for some years represented a Glasgow tea firm in the North of England. Coming to this country 12 years ago, Mr. Beveridge was at first connected with A. Schilling & Co., a large tea firm of San Francisco. He represented them at first on Puget Sound and then had British Columbia assigned to him as his territory, making his headquarters at Victoria. A year later he joined Braid & Co. as their traveler and has since occupied that position, acting as manager for the firm during the principal partner's absence. As a traveler Mr. Beveridge has proved most successful. It is true that he was the representative of a substantial and reliable house, but he has been connected with it from its earliest days, so that not a little of its success may be ascribed to him.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Aug. 3, 1905.

THERE has been a considerable advance in prices of cheese, which is doubtless partly due to a good demand from British markets, and partly to speculation, but the market has been forced to a point of danger, or rather a point where the demand may be stopped.

The past history of "July booms" is not encouraging for stocking up at present prices. It was doubtless quite legitimate to advance prices up to a certain point. We have so far no accumulation of stocks here. Our cold storage companies are complaining of a very poor season, which simply means that there has been a demand for our cheese fully equal to our supplies, but if this legitimate demand is stopped during the height of our season of production, who dares to stock up for a future demand ?

We are now told that the farmers are feeding their cows, that the flow of milk has increased lately, and that the make of cheese will be large on account of the very profitable prices. We are told, further, that the retailers in Great Britain have laid in full supplies of cheese at the recent lower prices, therefore, if the demand is now checked a good deal of stock may have to be put into cold storage at comparatively high prices, and the profit may be problematic, as we have still three to four months of production to dispose of.

Taking everything into due consideration, it is hardly possible to expect much of a rise on present values, which would simply mean a considerable loss of money if goods were put away in cold storage now.

It was doubtless a clever piece of business, as far as business goes now, that one English house accepted every offer of cheese made to them by cable, leaving a shortage for other orders, and thus becoming one of the causes of the very sudden, sharp advance, but now the same house is selling goods in England below the importing point and making a handsome profit on it.

Speculative houses are now inclined to sell their holdings and, while they are forcing country markets as high as they can without taking any goods themselves, they miss no opportunity of taking a profit on the boom.

Butter is quite similar to cheese in some respects. There is undoubtedly a strong demand for butter from the other side, but, like cheese, the price has been forced up higher than the British markets can stand at the moment.

There continues to be a quick demand for dairy butter at a price out of all proportion as compared with former years, but supply and demand make the market. Supplies of dairy butter are constantly decreasing, and this year, with the very light supplies of Siberian butters on the British markets, our dairy butter is more in demand than ever before.

As mentioned before, creamery butter also continues in demand, but present prices are rather too high for our friends across the Atlantic, as we are now close on to the price of Danish butter, which still rules the British markets for finest quality, and the indications are that we cannot force prices much higher. The make of butter is much larger than in former years, the prices are much above the average, and it is hardly to be expected that there will be a further advance.

To sum up, both cheese and butter are at abnormally high prices for this season of the year, and with a full make of both the dairy farmers of Canada are having a very prosperous year.

LONDON PRODUCE LETTER.

By Our Own Correspondent.

THE spot demand for Canadian butter is good, but prices do not realize what they want c.i.f. If the price of Danish goes up, as is expected, there will be considerable alteration in the general tone of the market. Reports on Irish butter are that there is a distinct shortness and the demand is excellent.

Germany is at present very short of butter, and is buying large quantities of Danish and Dutch. This fact accounts to no small degree for the high prices ruling on the London market, as very little from those countries is finding its way in this direction.

The quality of salted and unsalted, which has come to hand up to the present, deserves all praise. A few parcels of spotted unsalted butter have come along from the western districts, but not many. Boxes have not been kept as clean as might be, and one firm complains about the looseness of the lids of those boxes, which are secured by four nails with the ends of the nails hooked up. This method is satisfactory when the boxes are placed in sacks, but otherwise there is distinct danger of the lids being forced off. A letter on the question of packing butter appeared in this column about two weeks back.

The resolution, adopted by the Agricultural Committee at Ottawa on June 20, was doubtless but a re-echo of the general opinion of all those Canadians who are interested in the export of cattle to Great Britain. On June 20 the committee deprecated the attitude of the Imperial Government towards the entry of Canadian live cattle into Britain, and it was urged that nothing short of the most strenuous endeavors should be made to bring before those who are responsible for the retention of the embargo, the absolute injustice of the measure.

The correspondent of The Canadian Grocer was able to sound the feelings of the trade in the Old Country, and, thanks in no small measure to the Editor of the Meat Trades Journal, London, a considerable amount of interesting information was obtained.

Everybody knows how some ten years ago Britain was scared by a very serious outbreak of foot and mouth disease, in the obliteration of which millions of dollars were expended. It is known also to all how in 1896 an Act was passed, forbidding the importation of Canadian cattle for the purpose of mixing with the herds at home. But nobody seems to know exactly why the embargo remains in force against Canadian cattle, when it has been conclusively proved again and again that there is not, and never has been, any trace of pleuro-pneumonia or any other disease in Canadian cattle shipped for slaughter on arrival at port in Great Britain.

Canadians are not alone in their objections to the shutting out of their cattle, and it must be some consolation to know that there are those in Great Britain who are as anxious to have the embargo removed as the citizens of the Dominion themselves. Indeed this measure, so obnoxious to many, is a double-edged knife, doing damage on the one side to Canadian cattle dealers and exporters, and on the other to British farmers and agriculturists. Canadians do not need to be told what they are losing, but it is not so well known that it is computed that store cattle feeders in the Old Country have lost something like $25,000,000 during the past six years owing to the fact that they have not had the cattle to feed. Moreover, it is said, 250,000 is the yearly decrease in the number of carcases exported from Britain. Why, then, it will be asked is this measure, apparently so suicidal, continued in force.

For two reasons. In the first place, the Board of Agriculture, having been bitten some ten years back, is still suffering from an attack of nervousness, and, while admitting that Canadian cattle are free from disease, consider that there is still the "risk." The other reason simply is that there are those who are profiting by the exclusion of Canadian cattle from the British herds.

To take the latter reason first. The Act of 1896, now that real cause for anxiety has disappeared, has developed into nothing less than a piece of protection of the most objectionable nature. At the present time, Irish cattle breeders are gaining something like £2 or more per head by the exclusion of Canadian cattle, and there is the solid mass of Irish parliamentary votes to be overcome before the prohibition can be removed. As a matter of fact, some of the Irish seats in Parliament are of ridiculous insignificance, and yet each Irish vote, though it may be representative of only 15,000 or so constituents, is equal to some of the English votes representative of 100,000 and more.

As to the "risk," about which the Government says so much, it is little short of insult to harp on such a theme when it has been shown that, even amongst Canadian cattle sent over to be slaughtered at once, no disease can possibly be found. As a member of a recent deputation to the president of the Board of Agriculture said, even an insurance company, on a basis of ten years' freedom from disease, would regard the risk as merely nominal. Anyway, the United States take Canadian cattle without any risk, although they put a restriction on hay and other like goods, which are likely to bring in disease.

It is good to know that there is a national organization in the Old Country whose avowed intention it is to work for the abolition of the obnoxious embargo. About this organization and its origin a little will be said next week.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

TORONTO.

Provisions—Very firm markets rule in provisions this week and a slight advance in nearly all lines of cured meats is the result. Lard, however, is quoted 1-4c. lower than last week, while front quarters of beef are from 3-4c. to 1c. easier. Spring lamb is selling at 12c. while hogs in street lots have advanced until quotations range from $9.25 to $10.00 .We quote for this week:

Hogs, street lots	8 75	9 25

Butter—The market continues strong, with an advance of 1c. in creamery and dairy all round this week. The reason of the advance is in part the increased export demand. Canadian butter is in active request at the present time in Great Britain. Germany is experiencing a butter famine; her supplies come regularly from Siberia, but owing to the increased home consumptive demand, consequent upon the war, Germany has had to withdraw her supplies from other sources, leaving the British market comparatively bare. We quote:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 21	0 22
" solids, fresh		0 21
" in tubs	0 16	0 18

Cheese—The export demand has warranted an unusually high price for cheese during the last few days, and Montreal quotations have been up as high as 11 3-8c. The general feeling of trade here, however, is that this price will gradually settle down. An active demand and strong market is noted locally. Large cheese are quoted at 11 to 11 1-2c., and twins at 11 1-4c. to 11 3-4c. We quote:

	Per lb.
Cheese, large	0 11½
" twins	0 11¾

MONTREAL.

Provisions—Receipt of dressed hogs this week are light, with prices firm at from $9.75 to $10.00, with live at from $7.00 to $7.25. Cured meats are steady with indications of higher prices. We were shown one offer of American clear backs at $19.00, and Woodlawn & Jones fat backs at $18.00 ex store to the wholesale trade, with an advance of about $1 over these prices in a jobbing way. Hams are quoted at 14 1-2c. for 8—12 lbs., 14c. for 12—18 lbs., and 13 1-2c. for 18—25 lbs. Breakfast bacon is quoted at 14c. Lard is firm, and it is understood that stocks are light, and prices are not unlikely to be higher. We quote:

Lard, pure tierces	0 10
" 5-lb. tubs	0 10½
" 20-lb. pails, wood (10½)	2 10
" cases, 10-1b. tins, 60 lbs. in case	0 10⅜

Butter—At prevailing prices the English trade are slow at taking hold. So far the early part of the weekly exports were slow. The market, however, is firm, and holders show no symptoms of shading prices, attributing the dullness to the close of the month, and anticipating that the English trade will come up. The diversion of Siberian butter to Germany has helped to boost the Canadian product, which is 4 cents higher than this time last year. In fact, an old produce man declares that 21 1-2c. was the highest price reached by July butter in 25 years. Provision men have been wary of the market, as with cheese, and have practically no stocks on hand. Exports for last week were 42,879 packages, as against 20,562 last year and 8,124 in 1903, and for the season 235,757 packages as against 147,191 a year ago, and 97,895 in 1903. We quote:

Finest creamery	0 22½ 0 23
Fine	0 22 0 22½
Fresh dairy tubs	0 17 0 18½

Cheese—The export trade is showing little activity, owing to the high prices over here, holders asking 11 3-8c. and 11 1-2c. for finest Ontario, and about 11 1-8c. for Quebecs, being an advance of nearly 2 cents in two weeks. The sharp advance is generally attributed to short sales, and the opinion is generally expressed that when these are satisfied the market will be easier. The trade have been selling close and the decks are pretty clean, and just now the men on the street are asking themselves where they are at. Shipments for last week from this port were 122,961, as against 57,824 same week last year, and 99,817 same week 1903. Total shipments since May 1st have been 875,836, as against 744,542 last year, and 1,050,726 two years ago.

Eggs—Receipts are not so free as trade would like, and the loss off is heavy. Merchants should, if possible, induce farmers to gather and market eggs promptly, as the loss eventually comes out of the producer. The market is about steady at 18c. for ordinary, and 20c. for selects.

ST. JOHN.

Provisions—Barrel pork is firmly held. Stocks are light, particularly of mess pork. It is too early for active sales. Beef is firmly held; there is but a very limited sale. In pure lard, prices still high. There is a fair demand for refined. Smoked meats have but a light sale. In fresh beef, both western and domestic, very dull. Prices are low. In domestic, some of the beef offered is very poor. Lamb holds quite firm. There is a good sale. But little veal seen. Mutton, dull. Pork is out of season. We quote:

Mess pork, per bbl	$17 00 $18 50
Clear pork "	18 00 20 00
Plate beef "	14 00 15 00
Domestic beef, per lb	0 05 0 07

" " pails "	0 10½ 0 11
Refined lard, tubs	0 08 0 08

Butter—Dealers report a better demand at rather higher figures for really good butter. For average stock, sales rather slow.

BENEFITS OF PREFERENCE.

THE London Times, in a recent financial and commercial supplement, illustrates the effect of the preferential tariff of Canada upon Canadian imports from Great Britain and the United States.

It declares that a comparison of the gross total of Canadian imports from the two countries does not fairly illustrate the effect of the preferential tariff and uses only the value of dutiable goods. Of these, Canada, in 1893, was taking rather more than 45 per cent. from the United Kingdom, 40 per cent. from the United States, and less than 15 per cent. from all other countries. By 1897, the year before the preferential provision was adopted, the percentage for the United States had risen to 50, that for Great Britain had fallen to about 30, while that for other countries had advanced to 20 or more. The general effect of the preference given to British goods appears to have been simply to arrest this process of decline for these and of gain for American and other foreign goods. Since 1898 there has been little variation in the percentage of dutiable imports in these three categories. The division has kept near the line of 50 per cent. for the United States and 30 per cent for the United Kingdom, from which the English writer concludes that the tariff preference for the Mother Country "seems just about to neutralize the natural advantages of the United States," in proximity and closer trade communication.

There are, however, classes of goods in which Great Britain cannot be expected to compete with the United States in supplying Canada, such as live animals, fish, breadstuffs, provisions, fruits, fertilizers, petroleum, turpentine and various other products which he enumerates. Accordingly, he presents a diagram showing the change in the value of dutiable imports from the two countries with these non-competing articles eliminated. This shows that the values imported from the United States in 1895 were only about $10,000,000, while those from Great Britain were about $22,500,000. The former increased and the latter diminished until values were approximately equal at about $20,000,000 when the preferential duties took effect. From that time both lines on the diagram show about an equal increase until 1904, when that of the United States reached somewhat higher. The shares in that year were about $40,000,000 for Great Britain and $45,000,000 for the United States. The inference is that but for the preferential tariff the increase of these imports from the United States would have been much larger, and from Great Britain much smaller if any increase at all.

The writer next selects certain manufactures in which Great Britain excels, comprising those of wool, cotton, linen, flax, leather and glass, with carpets, curtains, cordage, jams, confectionery, gunpowder and earthenware, and shows that Canadian imports of these from the Mother Country were about $12,000,000 in value in 1895 and sunk to $10,000,000 in 1897, but after the preference in duties was granted increased rapidly until they reached nearly $24,000,000 in 1904. The value of the same goods imported from the United States in 1895 was only $3,000,000, and though it has increased rather steadily it has not reached as much as $6,000,000 since. This is taken as evidence of a positive and substantial gain to British trade from the preference in duty rates, but it is in a line in which British manufactures have to go along with the tariff discrimination.

Another diagram is given exhibiting a class of articles in which the United States has made a large gain in exporting to Canada, and Great Britain has made little or no gain in spite of the preference. These include silks, gloves, perfumery, brass and copper goods, electrical apparatus and various instruments, and paints, colors, varnishes, etc. The value of those imported from Great Britain was about $2,300,000 in 1895 and $2,000,000 in 1897. It increased at first under the preferential duties, but has hardly got above $2,500,000 since. The value taken from the United States in 1895 was less than $1,500,000, but it increased to about $5,000,000 in 1904 in spite of the discrimination in duties. This is attributed to British manufactures in some of the lines affected, allowing foreigners to surpass them in the novelty of their designs, efficiency of construction, economy of manufacture and selling enterprise. On the whole, the Times inclines to the opinion that British trade with Canada has been saved by the tariff preference, and in some lines largely benefited at the expense mainly of the United States.

THE WINNIPEG EXHIBITION.

WINNIPEG'S annual exhibition, held this year from July 20 to 28, scored another success. It could scarcely be expected that it would this year attain the same standard of excellence as twelve months ago, when it had the prestige and financial assistance attaching to the Dominion Exhibition, and hence comparisons would be unfair. But, while the Winnipeg Exhibition of 1905 was not the Dominion Exhibition of 1904, the directors have no reason to be ashamed of their work.

It is regrettable, but unavoidable, that the Winnipeg Exhibition is held so early in the year, and hence cannot be truly representative of the agricultural resources of Western Canada. At this time of year no adequate display of Western Canada's grains can be made and, although splendid displays of live stock were made, the exhibition fails to impress the visitor from other parts of Canada with the magnificent agricultural resources of the west. It required the presence of a great many threshing exhibits to give the exhibition the character to be expected in a country which is essentially agricultural.

In succeeding exhibitions, the directorate should insist more firmly that exhibits be in their places at the time of opening. This year the exhibition was half over before many of the exhibits were fully installed, and throughout the whole of the fair many exhibits seemed to be only in process of installation. It was Monday afternoon before the majority of the exhibits were in shape and Friday was closing day. But when they were installed the exhibits, although not so numerous as in former years, showed careful preparation and were well worth careful examination. Rumor has it that a number of leading Winnipeg firms agreed not to exhibit this year, and that to some such agreement is due the fact that the number of exhibits in certain lines was not as large this year as in previous years. If this be so a very shortsighted policy was followed and an institution was neglected which is worthy of enthusiastic support. A valuable opportunity for effective advertising was lost. The annual Winnipeg Exhibition is the Mecca of thousands of western visitors who look forward to the occasion as affording pleasant recreation before the strenuous days of harvesting and threshing. The Winnipeg Industrial offers accordingly a valuable opportunity for obtaining effective publicity. With its separately defined departments and classified divisions, it is naturally a great distributor of ideas, and its benefits in this respect and in others are too great and too numerous to be adequately estimated. It is an institution deserving of support, and the manufacturers who exhibited are sure to reap their reward in increased patronage.

AN ASSOCIATION MEDIUM.

AS announced elsewhere in this issue, The Canadian Grocer has been chosen by President T. J. Lawlor and his associates as the official medium for the publication of all confidential news relating to the progress and inner workings of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada. While general news may appear in the daily and other papers, it is in The Canadian Grocer only that western retailers will find the real news of their association. In choosing The Canadian Grocer for this purpose, President Lawlor and his associates were not influenced by personal considerations, but because of the character, circulation and standing of the paper in the west.

In accepting this responsibility, The Canadian Grocer is deeply sensible of the honor conferred upon it and it will be the aim of the management and the editorial staff of the paper always to merit the confidence which has been shown in it. The choice of The Canadian Grocer as a medium for this purpose is a striking tribute to the extent of its circulation and to the powerful influence which it exerts in Western Canada.

In undertaking this work we do not in any way sacrifice our editorial independence, for The Canadian Grocer has never been, and it never will be, the "organ" of any particular interests. Its object is to serve the general interests of the trade. The aims of the association commend themselves to our judgment and so long as it continues the same broad-minded course of conduct, it will have our hearty support.

REPUTATION AN ASSET.

REPUTATION is of great importance to the merchant. It is not the product of a day or two; only consistent fair treatment will win a name for honesty and integrity. But when it is won it is of incalculable value. A merchant who does his business in a town where the same people must deal with him constantly, if he is to succeed, should keep clear of any suggestion even of unfairness. The exaggeration and misrepresentation which are such a common feature of many stores' publicity, are mistaken policy for two reasons. In the first place, as a general rule, the public will not be deceived, and the only effect they will have will be the loss of faith in any of the statements of the firm. In the second place, if the public is deceived for a while, it will eventually find out by experience that unfairness has been practised and retribution will quickly follow. On the other hand, when a merchant has won the confidence of his customers his work is greatly simplified. His opinion is accepted without question, and he leads public opinion in his line of business, and does not follow. This is the only assurance of satisfaction in merchandising.

CANADA WANTS CLEAN BILLS.

CLEANLINESS and decency demand that something should be done to keep filthy bills out of circulation. In Canada the evil is pretty marked and there is an increasing cry for reform.

We have heard of merchants, who have adopted the plan of only handing out crisp, new bills in change. These men are reformers and they are doing a good work, even though there may be a tinge of selfishness in it.

In the United States, every hotel and bank will always issue a clean bill on request. In Canada you generally take what you can get.

Surely sanitary reasons alone should induce the people of this country to rise up and protest against the continuance of the evil. The passing of filthy bills from hand to hand cannot but serve to spread disease germs and undoubtedly much of the sickness in the country can be traced directly to unsanitary money.

A PROTEST.

WE are glad to see that the protest which The Grocer entered against the actions of British Columbia and Quebec, in placing a provincial tax upon travelers, has been supported by the leading commercial men of the country. The Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association has now taken the matter up and is urging the Federal Government to disallow these two Acts. A protest from such an influential body as this should carry great weight with it at Ottawa.

The essence of federation consists in absolute freedom of interprovincial trade. Yet in both the cases cited this freedom has been seriously hampered. That the representative of a British house, resident in Ontario, should not be allowed to do business in the next province without paying an exorbitant license fee is an intolerable injustice. It invites retaliation, and the framers of the laws themselves know the disastrous effects of such a course. We trust, with the Commercial Travelers' Association, that these laws will be voluntarily withdrawn or, if not, will be withdrawn on the invitation of the Dominion Government.

MARITIME BOARD OF TRADE.

A FEW weeks ago there was a meeting held at Regina of the Associated Boards of Trade of the Northwest Territories. At it were present the representative business men of Western Canada. In a few weeks, on August 16, the representative business men of the Maritime Provinces will assemble at Yarmouth, to attend the 11th annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade.

Though no immediate connection between the two gatherings may be apparent, yet there is such a similarity of organization and such an identity of purpose in both that the mind associates one very closely with the other. The western gathering was well attended, and the members were enthusiastic. The eastern gathering promises to be quite as encouraging. The benefits accruing from the discussions at Regina are already being felt. Without doubt, the Maritime Provinces will derive advantages from the deliberations of the Maritime Board.

Just now we can but urge the business men of the provinces to attend the approaching meeting. A great proportion of the success of the gathering will depend on a large and influential attendance. Let everybody who can possibly reach Yarmouth, do so, and encourage by their presence the officers and other members who are so deeply interested in the welfare of the provinces.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT.

The Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, is pursuing the proper course in arranging to have its foreign commercial agents return to Canada at regular intervals, to visit boards of trade and business organizations throughout the country and give addresses upon the export trade and kindred subjects of interest to Canadian business men.

THE WINNIPEG EXHIBITION

WHILE it could scarcely be expected that the Winnipeg Exhibition would this year equal the Dominion Exhibition of a year ago, Western Canada's greatest Industrial has scored another success. Winnipeg's Fair occupies the same relative position in the west as the Toronto Exhibition in Ontario, and Fair week is the annual outing of the western farmers, thousands of whom visit the city every year at this time. As it is impracticable to hold the exhibition in the Fall, when the western farmers are busy harvesting and threshing the wheat crop, the Winnipeg Exhibition cannot do full justice to the agricultural resources of the country, but, nevertheless, the exhibits of grains and live stock were very creditable, and the prominence of the exhibits of threshing outfits showed the importance of the agricultural interests which are the backbone of the west.

It is to be regretted that the manufacturing and industrial exhibits were not so numerous as in previous years. A number of firms apparently came to an agreement not to exhibit this year, and owing to this shortsighted policy the exhibition was not in some departments so representative as it should have been. This policy is undoubtedly shortsighted, for the benefits derived from attractive exhibits at a big fair, which attracts thousands of visitors, can scarcely be overestimated. The exhibition affords a simple way of obtaining profitable publicity, and all considerations of profit aside, it is an institution deserving the hearty support of all business men.

The exhibition opened on Thursday, July 20, but it was not until Monday that the majority of the industrial exhibits were in place, and even then many of them lacked those finishing touches which were added later.

Blue Ribbon Tea Co.

As usual, the Blue Ribbon Tea Co. had a very attractive booth at the Fair, where the packages of tea were piled up in neat fashion. Visitors were invited to stop and sample the tea, which was served by neatly-attired maids, and very many availed themselves of the offer.

McNab & Roberts.

This growing Winnipeg firm had a large space in the Manufacturers' Building devoted to a display of their various lines. Their big showing of soda fountains and fruit extracts did not fail to provoke favorable comment, and many visitors stopped to examine the big Middleby portable brick ovens which were on display.

Red Rose Tea Co.

"Red Rose Tea is Good Tea" was the familiar device which greeted the eyes of those passing the big exhibit of this popular tea and the attendants were there to greet those who cared to stop with a refreshing cup of tea in order to prove the firm's trade slogan. No one was heard to dispute its truth.

St. Lawrence Starch Co.

One of the most artistically arranged exhibits in the Manufacturers' Building was that of the St. Lawrence Starch Co. "Ivory Gloss" starch, "Durham" corn starch, etc., were arranged in a big glass case towering almost to the ceiling and the exhibit of these familiar household brands could not possibly escape the favorable notice of every visitor to the building.

Orange Meat.

One of the popular centres in the Manufacturers' Building was the big "Orange Meat" booth where, under the direction of C. H. Murdoch, the western manager, a number of attendants were busily employed serving interested visitors with this popular breakfast food. The booth was handsomely arranged, the two sizes of "Orange Meat" packages being piled up in huge pyramids. Manager Murdoch was kept busy explaining the details about the premiums given with the 15-cent packages and the advantages of buying the 25-cent packages, which contain 2½ times as much as the 15-cent packages. Grocers will be interested to know that this 25-cent package has been put on the market to give to customers who would otherwise insist on having two 15-cent packages for a quarter. The grocer can make a profit on the big package.

Walter Baker & Co.

From childhood, most people have been acquainted with the picture in all this firm's advertisements of the maid serving Baker's cocoa. At the Fair the cocoa maids were busy serving this cocoa, but evidently they belonged to a different generation than the original cocoa maid.

J. Y. Griffin & Co., Limited.

A big display of cured meats and pork products was made by this Winnipeg packing house in the Manufacturers' Section of the exhibits. Invitations were distributed inviting visitors to go out to the company's plant and see the hogs killed as they are killed in Chicago. The big trouble in the west is the scarcity of hogs; this alone prevents the Winnipeg packing houses from doubling and tripling their capacity at once. Literature was therefore distributed among the farmers pointing out the advantages of raising hogs.

Tetley's Teas.

Tetley's teas made a very attractive exhibit with the packages arranged in artistic piles. Passers-by were urged to taste and hundreds accepted the invitation. A big streamer announced that "Tetley's Teas are the Pioneer Packet Teas of America."

Telfer's Biscuits.

This energetic firm had a good display of their candies and biscuits, which they are pushing so vigorously among the western trade.

Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited.

A big display was made by this firm in the old Main Building in the neighborhood of displays which are of most interest to the ladies. It was a good place for a display of "Royal Household" flour.

INCREASE IN TRADE.

The total trade of Canada for the fiscal year 1904-'05, as shown by official statistics, increased about a quarter of a million dollars. The trade of the country is now double what it was in 1896. There was a falling off during the past year of over eight million dollars in exports of domestic produce, and about two millions in exports of foreign produce, as well as a reduction of about three-quarters of a million in coin and bullion, but this was a little more than made up for in the increased volume of imports for consumption. It is noticed that the exports of domestic manufactures for last year was $1,250,000 in excess of the previous year. The total aggregate trade of the Dominion on the basis of imports for consumption and domestic exports was $465,228,407, compared with $364,381,972 for 1904. The summary of the trade for the past two years is as follows:

	1904.	1905.
Imports for consumption	$251,460,737	$261,911,435
Domestic exports	198,414,439	190,854,946
Foreign exports	12,641,239	10,617,115
Coin and bullion	2,467,557	1,844,811
Totals	$464,781,972	$465,228,307
Duty collected	40,952,810	42,021,386

The details of the trade are as follows:

Imports—	1904.	1905.
Dutiable goods	$148,902,381	$150,914,668
Free goods	94,684,043	100,688,332

Manufactures	19,864,049	21,191,333

U. S. PEA SITUATION.

The following comparison of "canned pea" prices in the United States and Canada will be of interest to the Canadian trade. It must be borne in mind that United States quotations are to the wholesale trade, while Canadian are to the retail trade.

	United States.		Canada.
Marrowfat peas, Standards	0 75	0 80	.... 0 60
Sifted, Early June peas	1 05	1 20	.... 0 67½
Petits Pois (fine French)	2 0'	2 10	1 20

If United States packers are only delivering about 50 per cent. of their orders booked, as it is claimed, on account of small pack, prices will rule considerably higher before the end of the season, and it looks as though Canadian packers might find an outlet for their surplus peas this season in the United States.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

Quebec Markets.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, August 3, 1905.

THE feeling among the trade is on the whole good, July having been a month of large business, owing to the big trade done in sugar. Collections are up to the average, and the outlook generally promising. Some little complaint is heard by travelers of the trade being away on holidays, but on the whole, orders are bulking up well. Sugar continues to be meeting good firm demand, and doubtless will, if present prices are adhered to. Molasses are meeting a little better demand since the reduction, but wholesalers have not as yet shown any great anxiety to put in their stocks. Japans are gaining greater interest, while Ceylons and Indians are firm. Coffees are dull locally, while spices are brightening up. Prices are firm and demand strong. Canned goods show no new feature since last writing. Orders for Fall delivery are being placed in a fair way. The salmon run is reported to have improved, and a big pack is anticipated, but reduction in price is improbable. Tapioca is higher and firm at advance. Rice is featureless. The dried fruit situation is becoming more interesting. Prunes are going to be high, and also peaches and apricots. Reports from Mediterranean primal markets are more encouraging. Country produce is generally dull. In flour, more activity is reported, owing to better demand. It has not been noticeably affected by the corner in Winnipeg. Fish are scarce, and prices inclined to a higher range.

Sugar—The market was quite active in refined in Montreal the first of the week, retailers ordering generously, and jobbers replenishing their stores. Monday came the report of the failure of a couple of speculators in Paris, with a quantity of beet, in consequence, thrown on the market. The result was a decline in Europe of beet, to the extent of 10 1-2d. On Tuesday there was a reaction to the extent of 4d. Cane was not effected, and at the same time New York refiners advanced refined 10c. in consequence of higher price being paid for raw canes, and the heavy demand. Up to time of writing this advance has not been followed in Montreal, as refiners have large stocks of raws and fear to check demand, which of late has been good. Their action will depend on the strength of present demand. We quote:

Syrups and Molasses—The demand for molasses is reported improved in consequence of the reduction announced last week. The Barbadoes market has been cleared, the stock being practically all in the hands of the big importers, as jobbers have not as yet purchased very heavily, and do not appear particularly anxious, despite the fact that one of the principal dealers here states that the lowest at which he was able to get a price was 36c., laid down in Montreal. Syrups are featureless, and unchanged since last writing. We quote:

Teas—A good movement is reported in all lines, with interest possibly centred on Japans, which are firm and meeting with a better demand, buyers awakening to the significance of the large shortage. The opinion is expressed that high grades will be higher, the quality being good. A fair movement is to be noted in Ceylon and Indian blacks, the markets in Colombo and Calcutta being distinctly firmer. A number of rejections by the customs of late, has caused considerable discussion among the trade and has emphasized the need for more definite standards. It is generally reputed that the price standard is the one mostly followed by the department, and is totally unreliable. Two teas, practically the same, invoiced at a difference of 1-4d., were recently submitted to the customs, and one admitted and the other rejected. The uncertainty is preventing cheap teas from being touched, and they are likely to be higher. We quote:

Coffees—Owing to a reduced consumption in hot weather the local demand is much smaller. The week, however, shows a gain of 10 points in the world's markets. Receipts at Rio and Santos have been smaller, and a further advance has been recorded on the Brazilian exchange. In New York, Wall street is continuing to support the market. Among the possibilities are improved receipts for August and September. A Brazilian export duty of 20 per cent. and a U. S. import duty of 3c. per lb. are also mooted. We quote:

Spices—The spice market is active. A good demand prevails for all lines. Peppers are strong and will see higher figures while nutmegs are very steady. Cloves are said to be advancing. Local stocks are plentiful, and business improving. Prices are as below:

Canned Goods—The situation in canned goods remains much the same as last week. Old stocks are being disposed of at the least possible loss, and retailers buying from hand to mouth. Orders for futures are coming in at a fair rate. Salmon are meeting with a good demand. The catch, which was late, is reported very good, but there is little expectation for lower prices, except on outside brands. The standard brands have been sold largely with privilege of any reduction before delivery, and the canners would gain nothing by sacrificing their present profitable orders in order to dispose of a few thousand extra cases. Fish—The stocks of fresh fish are not large enough to meet demand; this is due to so light receipts and the continued good demand. The scarcity is specially noticeable in lake fish and brook. In smoked and salt fish there is little doing owing also to a general scarcity. For the same reason prices in many lines have gone up. We quote:

Rice and Tapioca—The tapioca situation is strong, demand being good and stocks light, and present prices show an advance of from 1-2c. to 3-4c. on lowest figures. Rice is without particular interest, except perhaps a little better demand should be noted. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits—Dried fruits are gaining in interest, especially in Californias, the market on the coast being particularly agitated. It is impossible to get firm quotations from San Francisco, and the only business passing has been done on offers from this end. Santa Clara prunes have advanced 1-4c. since last week owing to the short supply and heavy demand. Prunes will cost considerably more than last year, especially for small sizes. Peaches have been withdrawn from the market. Apricots have also advanced and stock of good quality and color hard to obtain. Considerable business was placed for dates last week for importation ex first tide. In currants a slight reaction has taken place, followed by a still further advance. Recent reports would show that conditions are favorable for a crop of Valencia raisins of good quality and slightly in excess of last year. A somewhat sensational advance has also occurred on primal markets in shelled walnuts. Locally, the trade are disposing of their old stock at good prices. Malaga raisins are very scarce and high.

Honey—The demand continues very small in honey. Hot weather is the cause of this. Some new honey has arrived in fairly large lots, but is not meeting with any better demand than the old stock. Local supplies in this line are now pretty large. Prices are as below:

Beans—The fair demand for beans still prevails, but they are not more plentiful than before. The price holds high and very firm.

Choice prime beans	1 65	1 70
Lower grades	1 40	1 50

Hops—There is little doing in hops. Demand is practically dead and stocks are still light and will be for some time, till the new crop arrives. The latter does not promise a large yield this year. Prices unchanged.

Evaporated Apples—Evaporated apples are dull as ever. Sales of them are very small owing to limited demand. They sell 6 1-4c. to 6 1-2c. Dried apples, little doing, 3c. to 3 1-2c.

Flour, Feed and Meal.

Flour—Some activity is noticeable in flour owing to a better demand. The local market has not been affected by the jump in Manitoba wheat. The latter went up to $1.35 and then fell to $1.00; but at this price no buyers can be found. Local dealers believe it will go up again. Last week's prices are not altered.

Feed—The feed market sees a steady business. It is not, in fact, particularly large, but dealers say it is satisfactory. Bran, millfeed and shorts enjoy a good demand, and are pretty firm. Mouillie, however, is kept back a little. We quote:

Manitoba bran, in bags, per ton		16 00

Ontario bran, in bulk	15 00	16 50
" shorts	19 00	20 00
Mouillie	24 00	27 00

Rolled Oats—No sign of improvement is seen in rolled oats. Demand is small. Oats are not very firm, for as soon as new oats arrive on the market the price will go down and prices for rolled oats may follow suit. We quote:

Hay—Hay of finer quality is still scarce on the local market, owing to some large exports and also because farmers are busy on their farms. Demand keeps up pretty fair, but there is no big business done. We quote:

Ontario Markets.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, August 4, 1905.

THE volume of trade for the week has been surprisingly good, notwithstanding the fact that the travelers are off the road in Western Ontario, and business is allowed for the time being to rest on its oars. Sugar is without question the biggest item in the grocery trade just now. The fruit preserving season has induced a very active demand for Canadian refined. During the week there was an advance of 10c. in New York, which has tended somewhat to strengthen the position of the domestic market. As a member of the trade remarks, however, one or two such levers will be necessary before the confidence of the retailer in the future of the market is entirely restored.

Canned goods are moving freely, particularly corn, tomatoes and beans. Notwithstanding the fact that domestic vegetables are plentiful, the canned article seems to be in very active demand at all outlying points. Shipments of Barbadoes molasses and raw sugar are reported on the local market. Tea rules firmer, advances being recorded in Calcutta and Ceylon. For fuller information see tea market reports. There has also been a considerable advance in currants, following the recent decision of the Greek Chamber. This will have the effect of enhancing the value of currants perceptibly on the local market. Scarcity of tapioca on spot continues, and prices are up 1-4c.

In flour, Ontario wheat patents and straight roller are each down 20c. from last week's quotations.

Canned Goods—The interest of the trade in the future of the sockeye salmon trade continues. The Fraser River run is now on, although it is several days late, and it looks as if the pack might be considerably curtailed, as the run only lasts so long. A first-class demand for canned and bottled pickles, condiments and vegetables, including corn, tomatoes and beans, is reported. Fruits are a little on the quiet order on account of this being the season for domestic fresh fruit. Just as we go to press a report is received to the effect that some of the canners on the coast are not anxious to quote prices for this season's pack of sockeye salmon, which may be taken as an indication of the firmness with which they view the future of this article.

Sugar—An exceptionally active consumptive demand is noted for Canadian refined. We have now entered upon the season of largest consumptive demand during the year and the trade seems to be perfectly satisfied with the aggregate of business done. On Monday, July 31, the New York refiners advanced their prices 10c. all round, but as yet this has had no direct effect upon the local market beyond giving it possibly a shade of additional strength. Syrups and Molasses—Arrivals of new crop fancy Barbadoes molasses are reported on this market during the week along with a large consignment of Barbadoes raw sugar. Actual trade in syrups and molasses is quiet and prices continue as last advised. Our quotations are as follows:

Coffee—The wholesale trade are experiencing a temporary lull in the coffee trade. The speculative market is somewhat firmer than a week ago, and the trade are holding back on account of what they thing is an unwarrantably high price. According to cable information received from Brazil, the present crop is not yielding as well as many expected, and it is claimed that estimates will have to be reduced. The rate of Brazil sterling exchange has continued to gradually harden and this has kept the milreis or currency price for coffee in Brazil, at a low point. Consequently there has been no inducement for the Brazil planters, despite an advance in prices in the consuming markets, to hurry their supplies to market. We quote as follows:

Teas—The market in Calcutta has advanced 1-2d. on lower priced Indians, and the demand continues strong, while strictly fine Indians have advanced 1d. and for some classes as much as 2d. The Ceylon market is also dearer, but has not experienced the sharp advance that has taken place in Calcutta. With the improved quality and shortening supplies, however, the tendency is steady and persistent towards higher prices, all teas brought for sale being keenly competed for.

Ceylon greens have been showing exceptional value and business of some importance has been done for importation. The tendency of greens is upward also. Some general buying has taken place in Japan, and values offering in medium fine tea have been good, although quantities offering for Canadian account are so far somewhat restricted.

Local trade continues fair and quotations are as last advised.

Foreign Dried Fruits—The feature of this week's dried fruit market is the slight advance in prunes owing to shortage of the new crop and scarcity of local supplies, 90-100's and 80-90's being particularly scarce. There is an exceptionally good movement of Californian apricots which are scarce, with the market reported to be becoming bare. Raisins are somewhat easier than a week ago.

Since last week's issue the Greek Chamber has passed the necessary bill to give effect to the proposition of the Bank of Athens for dealing with any surplus crop. The market has advanced a further 1s. in consequence, and it is now known that the minimum of prices for new fruit will be about 18s. c. and f., or 5c. per lb., delivered for minimum of quality. The trade will have to adjust itself to a higher level of prices, say 3 lbs. for 25c. retail, whereas hitherto they have been selling 4 lbs. for 25c.

LAST MINUTE PROVISION MARKET.

Montreal, Thursday, Aug. 3, 12.30 p.m.

BUTTER—Market firm, but demand restrained; stocks light; fancy, 23c.; choice, 22½c.; good to fine, 22c; lower prices expected soon.

CHEESE—Tone weaker, with little demand; Ontario, 11c; Eastern, 10¾c.; lower figures will likely rule shortly.

EGGS—Not very firm, with fair business; stocks fair, but not of fine quality; selected fresh gathered, 20c. to 21c.; straight, 17½c. to 18c.; higher figures expected by end of this month.

PROVISIONS—General firmness and good demand prevail, but stocks remain small owing to light receipts; live hogs, 7c. to 7¼c.; dressed hogs, 9¾c to 10c.; hams, steady, with good demand, 13½c. to 14½c.; bacon, firm at 14c.

The history of the export trade in currants shows, however, that the consumption is not materially affected by any such difference in price.

Conditions continue favorable for the development of the new raisin crop, and first arrivals will come on a very fair market as old season fruit is pretty well cleaned up. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits—As noted last week the first supplies of apricots arriving in Winnipeg were snapped up in a hurry, although it was generally expected that the second shipments would be at least a cent cheaper. At the moment there are no apricots on the market, but new goods are expected about the first of next week. Contrary to expectations, the new apricots will have to be sold at about the same price as the first arrivals for, in the interval, the California market has become much firmer. It is expected that the new season's peaches will also be higher in price, and there is a rising tendency in the price of prunes and raisins. Nectarines are not obtainable on the local market, and they are removed from our list. We quote:

Timely Hints and Suggestions

THE USE OF DISPLAY CARDS.

A PRACTICAL question with which retail grocers are confronted from time to time, is "whether or not it pays to display price cards on goods shown in the window or store front." While there may be more or less diversity of opinion as to the positive merits of price cards, it is only a very small percentage of the trade that does not find them helpful—the grocers who are afraid of their competitors.

No one will deny that the prime object of the window or outside display is to attract attention. After an attractive display, what is there that conduces more to this end than a series of neat price cards, doing as nothing else can the work of silent salesmen.

Take for instance high class trade which is in the market for what it wants regardless of price. This class looks only to the quality and appearance of an article. If it is high-priced, a card with the price on serves simply as a recommendation of quality. Mr. Wealthy passes the establishment of an exclusive house that caters to the "four hundred." He sees hanging in the window a handsome Turkish rug bearing the price-mark $500. He may or may not know anything about rugs—but that is another matter. The $500 mark impresses him with the idea that the rug is very high grade, and just such an article as would become his mansion. He is interested at once, makes investigations, and probably invests. The price-mark is what attracted his attention in the first place.

There is another class of trade, which is intensely interested in prices, because its money is limited and must be made to go as far as possible. Mr. Clerk hurries past a grocery store on his way home from work. Prominently displayed is a very nice assortment of berries, along with the placard "10c. per box." He hesitates, stops. His wife did not mention berries, but these are very nice ones and only 10c. a box. He may as well take home a box or two—they are cheap and bound to be acceptable. And the price card swings another sale. The chances are nine in ten that the man would have gone past the store without looking in had it not been for the price card. He would have said to himself, "The fruit will be too expensive for my pocket, and I don't want to take the trouble of going in to ask and then find out I cannot afford to buy." The merit of the price card for this class of trade is that it is the quickest and most effective way of telling a prospective purchaser whether the price is within his limit.

Saturday Window Display in Vancouver Grocery.

Among other excellent features of price cards may be mentioned the following, taken from a recent issue of Grocery World: First—if a clerk is busy with a customer the man who is waiting will look about, and seeing the prices displayed will make his purchases mentally. When the clerk is ready to wait upon him all that remains for him to do is to wrap up the goods; the price tickets will have done the rest. Second—There are some goods that cannot be displayed, and for these a price list may be printed similar to a price ticket and hung in a conspicuous place. To turn these price tickets into advertisements all that is necessary is to take a brand of well-known goods and place it among the other goods (at random and not as though it had been put there for effect). Make the price very low, the lower the better. People passing will notice the price, think what they paid last time, and even if they do not stop and buy they will have a good impression of the store. In this connection it may be said that if a grocer has a line of goods bought below the market, and decides, as most live grocers do, to give his customers the benefit from time to time, the most effective way of letting them know about it is by means of an attractive price card prominently displayed. Third—Women, who do four-fifths of the buying, are always after bargains, and it is the price card that tells whether it is a bargain or not. Women have even been known to buy things they didn't need and couldn't use simply because they could not resist that "only 10c." A merchant may pile his windows full of the biggest bargains in town, but unless the price is displayed the goods will move slowly. For instance, a merchant had a certain brand of goods that for some reason were not up to the standard. He cut the price in two and put a large basketful of the goods outside his store two hours before closing time. They sold like hot cakes, whereas if there had been no price displayed it might have taken two weeks to sell the same amount of goods. The 5 and 10c., as well as the departmental stores, are practical instances of the value of price cards.

A WINDOW THAT MADE GOOD.

A LARGE crowd around a window on King street west, Toronto, the other day, attracted the attention of a Grocer representative, who, after some difficulty, succeeded in getting in where he could see.

The window was fitted up with an old mill and mill pond, with an old-fashioned windmill slowly turning away. In the pond a number of gold fish were swimming about, and on the bank a battered, sleepy-looking old fisherman holding a rod and line, while the cork floater bobbed up and down in a most exciting way. It might be remarked that a large bottle of amber colored liquor reposed near the fisherman, cork conveniently drawn.

The background of this rural scene consisted in a number of National Cash Registers, while neatly printed signs in the foreground informed passers-by that "Old-fashioned systems encourage sleepy methods," and that "Over 400,000 wide-awake merchants use Nationals."

Manager Mutton, of the Toronto branch of the National Cash Register Co., always has something novel and attractive in the way of a window display. The ambitious window dresser can usually get a few valuable pointers by watching these windows.

ADVERTISEMENTS THAT TAKE.

IN "Great Bargains" is seen a "small" advertisement fashioned after a "big" style. Mr. Armstrong appeals to his readers along somewhat similar lines to the "Heart-to-Heart" talks of magazine advertisers, with this difference that his advertisement is, of course, local in subject and limited in effect. But characteristic of the "big" style he brings himself into prominence, thus lending strength and sincerity to the statements. He covers a number of lines rapidly, and uses space to advantage—"featuring" all. Mr. Armstrong evidently knows his readers, for in the last sentence it will be noticed he speaks directly to the farmer.

Altogether this is a very satisfactory advertisement. There would, ordinarily, be no gain in advertising "sets." The secret of success is in the fact of there being something "particular" about either the price or the quality. In this case it is the price, and, as would be expected, the strongest card is played. Mentioning the "broken sets" is a bid for the patronage of those not living in opulence. The groceries, being sold "at a margin," makes another "special," and "New, in stock" accounts favorably for canned goods and fruits. It can be easily seen Mr. Armstrong has covered the publicity field—from his standpoint. He has wasted neither space nor time on frills. But he has produced an attractively-worded advertisement on nothing else but plain statements and suavity, with "direction."

M. J. Ross adopts a decidedly different style of advertising, and yet he, too, has been successful. Mr. Ross evidently has no "specials" or nothing unusual to mention about his regular lines, or else he works on the assumption that an advertisement merely "draws" and the goods in the store "convince." He, therefore, brings his name address and wares into prominence, but only particularizes the latter in a brief way. The general appeal upon "Flour, Feed and Groceries," with "Commercial St.," would, no doubt, produce a few "general" purchases, but the chances are it would bring little trade from "regular" buyers (those who deal continuously with one grocer) because "regular" buyers are not generally attracted by "regular" advertisements. In this respect Mr. Ross' advertisement could scarcely be as successful as Mr. Armstrong's, for the latter's method of "specializing," besides being an attracting force in itself, might lead to purchases apart from the goods advertised and, perhaps, ultimately produce regular patronage. Mr. Ross' advertisement, however, assuming that his store would be reasonably close at hand, might have greater success than Mr. Armstrong's in reaching one class of people—new-comers to a locality, people undecided as to whom they will give their trade. In cases of this kind people are more concerned about getting in touch with a reliable store, where they can deal continuously, than about following up temporary bargains. Mr. Ross' advertisement is just the kind that will appeal to new-comers.

JAMES ARMSTRONG

James M. Laver sends for review a booklet prepared for H. Sylvester, Norwood, Man., his employer. The booklet is deserving of unstinted praise. It is gotten up systematically—on a basis characterized both by attractiveness and order. To start with, the cover is modelled after the best booklet covers of the day. It is free from all title-page, scrambled word effects—has nothing but an appealing phrase. "Groceries," in detail, backed up with argument, mottoes, etc., occupy the inner pages, which being set "open," and assisted by tasty borders, have shape and balance.

Altogether the booklet is pleasing.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

W. H. Millman & Sons, Toronto, report large sales of "Shamrock" salmon, their own brand.

S. H. Ewing & Sons, Montreal, are in receipt of another shipment of Schweitzer's Cocoatina in quarter pound (¼ lb.) tins.

W. H. Millman & Sons, Toronto, have received a large consignment of Barbadoes sugar and fancy molasses, and can quote right prices.

B. O. Beland, Montreal, is in receipt of 157 cases of English pickles, 40 cases of English mixed pickles, 30 cases of chow-chow, and 28 cases of English onions, which he offers at attractive prices. Buyers will do well to investigate.

B. C. Markets.

Vancouver, July 27, 1905.

CROP conditions in all sections of British Columbia are at the present moment very favorable, leaving but little to be desired. The rains of a week ago may have worked a slight damage to hay lying out on the delta islands at the mouth of Fraser River, but no serious loss occurred. Since then fine weather has been prevailing, and very large quantities of hay have been saved. The demands of the coast cities, of the lumbering camps along the coast, of the mining camps where horses are used, and of the Yukon District, combine to make hay a staple at a high price always, so that the big crop now being safely harvested is not likely to sell at a sacrifice, even though such returns as 5 tons per acre can be vouched for.

The oat and barley crops of the Delta and of other districts up the Fraser River to Chilliwack are coming rapidly to maturity, and are as heavy as ever seen in the history of agriculture in the province. The total area under cultivation in these grains is this year considerably greater than in the past. The fact that brewers are putting in plant to make malt from local barley indicates the production. One brewer alone has contracted for 500 tons of barley from the Lower Fraser River Valley.

Vegetable crops in all sections of the province where an acre of land is cultivated are promising extremely well. Many tons of early potatoes have been marketed, and the local demand has altogether been supplied from local sources for two or three weeks now. In the growing of potatoes the coast district usually has to contend with too much moisture, and if the Summer is wet, the potato crop even though liberal, is not up to quality. The only coast section where potatoes do not seem to get too much moisture is on Vancouver Island. The potatoes grown there are almost as dry as those from Ashcroft, which are standard, and island potatoes are ready sellers everywhere, though the Victoria market absorbs most of them. The only outside market for B. C. potatoes is the Yukon.

Root crops are well advanced and will yield heavily in the Chilliwack District, along the Fraser, and in Delta Municipality, and on Lulu Island. The increase in the number of dairy cattle kept, and the long season of milk production in this country practically the whole year round, is stimulating the growing of roots for Winter feed.

Fruit crops of all varieties are this year giving splendid returns. The only partial disappointment was that of the strawberries, which were not the big crop desired in some parts of the coast district, though the new District of Kootenay, surrounding Nelson, more than compensated. In other berries, and in cherries, however, the coast districts never had a better crop, and the quality, especially of cherries, was very superior. None but late cherries will now be marketed, as all the earlier varieties have been gathered, but there are still raspberries coming in, and the big cultivated black cherries are being marketed in large quantities just now. The wild blackberry, native of the province, is being gathered in abundance, too, and its fine flavor gets it ready sale at good prices. The crop is plentiful everywhere it grows, and that is everywhere the timber is down and gives it a chance.

Plums are not yet being marketed, though some early varieties will soon be in. The yield is this year the equal of others, and the usual experience of many branches being destroyed with the weight of fruit is being repeated. In fact, the fruitage of the plum tree in this province is always so bountiful that strangers' fancy photographs do not show the real thing, but a "faked-up" presentation. It is early yet to discuss quality in connection with the plum crop.

Some early apples, more fitted for being cooked than eaten raw, are being marketed, and the quality is very good. The apple crop this year promises to be very heavy, and present indications of quality are satisfactory. Of course, with the usual heavy crop, especially on the coast, there is a large percentage which has to be culled. Improved methods of packing are, however, bringing as good results financially, for the crop, as when the whole was marketed indiscriminately.

Groceries—No changes of moment are noted, and the trade generally is fairly quiet. Demand runs in the lines of campers' supplies, and other picnic goods, specialties in these lines selling well. Though the preserving season is on, the usual rise in the price of sugar is not noted as yet.

Produce—Scarcity of local supplies of fresh eggs has given way to easier conditions. The quantities marketed now are fairly liberal, and no shortage is noted such as was shown a week or so ago. The price is now about 25c. per doz. to the trade. Butter remains plentiful. The supply of fresh dairy is not showing any diminution, and the creameries are turning out very large quantities. Prices are 20c. for dairy and 23 to 25c. for creamery stock. Local fills the whole market as yet, and promises to for some time.

Vegetables—Local potatoes are now very plentiful at about 1½c. per lb. wholesale. The supply of local fresh tomatoes, the first of the season in coast districts, is in evidence. Spence's Bridge, and other points on the main line, in the "dry belt," supply tomatoes largely, but the coast supply, as a rule, is small. Those offering sold about 2 lbs. for 25c. Cabbages, local grown, are now plentiful, though cauliflower is still a scarce article. Other lines of fresh vegetables are extremely plentiful, and at low prices. Green peas are extremely abundant this year, and the price runs about 5c per lb. Vegetable marrows and cucumbers are coming in in goodly quantities now.

Poultry—Young chick, for broilers, are freely offered now, but other stock, except from foreign packing houses, is off the market almost. The supply of young ducks is also liberal, especially at the weekly market at New Westminster, where very reasonable prices prevailed last Friday. The raising of ducks seems to be a line of poultry raising to which this coast district is especially adapted.

Fruits—Local supplies are: Raspberries, $1.25 to $1.50 per crate; blackberries, $1.50 to $2 per crate; red currants, 5c. per lb., and short; black currants, 3c. per lb.; cherries, preserving varieties, scarce, 10c. to 15c. per lb.; apples, new and cooking varieties only, 80c. to $1.10 per box.

Pears and plums are not yet offering locally. They will soon be shipped now, and the former will run from $1.25 to $1.50 per box of 30 lbs., the standard box. Plums will be about 60 to 75c. per crate wholesale.

California pears are not plentiful yet, and are about 4 to 6c. per lb. wholesale. California apples are more plentiful, but are almost as dear. The supply of apricots is plentiful this week from Oregon and Washington. They sell at 75 to 90c. per crate wholesale. Peaches, Crawfords, are now in fairly good supply, but for preserving it will be another week or two before the quantities and prices will be right.

August 2, 1905.

WITHOUT doubt the event of the past week was the visit of the Royal Transportation Commission, their second visit to St. John. It was a great thing for us to hear the chairman of the commission say that both he and Mr. Ashdown recognized St. John as the great Winter port of Canada. This is a fact of which we have been fully aware for many years. As early as 1859 we began to put forward this claim. Within the last ten years, or about that, St. John has spent a million dollars, on which its citizens are annually paying the interest to prove their faith in the claim put forth. The business which has been done, showing a steady increase of about an average of 60 per cent. annually in the registered tonnage, until last season the registered tonnage of the steamers engaged in the Winter Port business, amounted to 340,000 tons, proving without a doubt that the position we take is correct.

In business, though this is the quiet season, some of our merchants report themselves more than satisfied. The dull sugar market is the one drawback. Fish continues abnormally high. Cream of tartar firmer.

Oil—Burning oil is unchanged at the extreme low figures, which have ruled for some time. Large future business has been booked. In lubricating oil, demand is rather less than usual at this season. It is thought our lumber mills will shut down early. In paint oil there is just a fair demand. Linseeds, while still low, tend higher. Turpentine holds at the high figure quoted for some time. Little cod oil has been received. Prices are easy.

Salt—In Liverpool coarse salt a fair stock is held and further arrivals are expected about the middle of the month. Prices are held firm at the slight advance reported. It is yet early for best demand. In fine salt the Canadian more than ever seems to hold the market.

Canned Goods—There is nothing new. Corn and tomatoes are firmly held, stocks being light. Tomatoes are rather higher. In future goods some Nova Scotian are offered. Peas are a full stock; prices are held up in spite of the low figure quoted for new. Fruits have a fair sale. Strawberries are rather higher. Salmon is a good supply, with price easy. Lobsters are very high. Meats are unchanged. Gallon apples, dull. New sardines are quite freely received. Price unchanged. Haddies and kinpers are firmly held.

Green Fruit—Dealers are busy. Bananas are still the big line. Oranges are scarce and high. Lemons are still held at full figures; there is a good sale. California pears are selling freely, though price is high. Peaches and plums are unchanged. Melons are very dull. Nova Scotia cherries now offered. Strawberries are done and even for raspberries it is getting late. Native tomatoes and cucumbers are offered.

Dried Fruit—There is nothing of special interest. Dealers have largely placed their orders for California apricots, peaches and prunes for Fall. While apricots are low, prunes are quoted at quite full figures, and have, with peaches, shown quite an advance since opening prices were quoted. Raisins not yet quoted, except Malaga loose, which are quite high, and Valencias for early shipment; these are lower than usual. It is thought California raisins will open quite high. Spot currants show a slight advance. While new are not quoted, it is said the situation is likely to be a strong one. Present business in all lines is small. Evaporated apples are rather higher; sale not large. In onions, market is somewhat dull owing to dealers being rather overstocked with Egyptian. Valencia stock is particularly good quality. Price rather lower.

Sugar—Stocks are light, particularly in bag sugar and yellows. While there is little or no change in price, there is little confidence in the market. Demand quite active.

Molasses—While prices are unchanged, market seems quite firm, particularly for Barbadoes. Stocks of molasses are in few hands.

Fish—Fresh fish very scarce this week. Salmon about the only line offered. There should be some shad, but the run of late years has been small. In dry cod the very high prices still hold and little change is expected. It is said hard dry fish for the West Indies are rather easier. Haddies are not to be had. Smoked herring are still low, but reported firmer. Pickled herring are held firm.

Flour, Feed and Meal—In flour, Ontarios are again quoted rather lower. Manitobas unchanged, and held quite firm. Market is full of oatmeal. Mill prices are high. Oats scarce. Light demand. Feed is at full figures. Cornmeal has a steady sale. Prices are again rather higher. Market is supplied by local mills. Beans very dull. Prices, however, are higher.

N. S. Markets.

THE grocery market was very active during the week, much more so than it has been for some time. Travelers are sending in orders more freely, and the general improvement in trade is most encouraging. Prices show but little change. Collections are up to expectations. The potato market caused interest during the week, when the price advanced rapidly. The old crop is pretty well exhausted, and the importations of new potatoes from Boston were insufficient to supply the demand. Those holding old stock took advantage of the market, and sent the price up. Potatoes that were selling the previous week for one dollar per three-bushel bag, were advanced to $2.10 per bag, and at the close of the week the market was pretty well cleaned up, as people were forced to pay the extra price. The first native potatoes of the season reached the market on Saturday, and sold for $1.50 per bushel. They were not fully matured, and the quality was poor. The butter market shows little change, and prices are steady. Eggs are advancing both in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. This is due principally to the falling off in receipts. Dealers say that the sugar market has a tendency to advance.

The Prince Edward Cheese Board met during the week. There was a fair attendance of salesmen. The following factories bonded cheese: Orwell 110, Dundas 98, Stanley Bridge 150, Cornwall 80, Lakeville 100, Red Point 50, New Perth 100, Union 80, East River 54, Kensington 320, New Dominion 70. All were sold to Spillet & Co., at 9⅛c. Quotations here follow:

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL.

Ottawa, July 31, 1905.

THE local grocers' picnic to Carleton Place on Monday next, Aug. 7, promises to be a great success. Tickets are selling like hot cakes, and those who take in the excursion are sure of a fine day's outing and a round of pleasure. There will be sports of all kinds, including a lacrosse match, between the Stars of Ottawa and the Carleton Place team. This is a regular schedule game in the Ottawa Valley League. In the morning a football match will be played. The contestants are the High School of Carleton and the Ottawa Thistles. A good orchestra for dancing will be in attendance. The special prizes for the best lady and gentleman waltzers will be: Gentleman, a marriage certificate; and for the lady, a wedding cake. A pleasing event in the sports will be the "Comfort" soap race, open to married and marriageable ladies only. The idea is to run a certain distance, and gather a number of bars of Comfort soap in aprons supplied by the soap people. The prizes are expensive and well worth competing for. They are as follows: First prize, ladies' gold watch; 2nd prize, ladies' silver watch; 3rd prize, ladies' gun-metal watch; 4th prize, silver biscuit jar; 5th prize, Swiss clock; 6th prize, alarm clock.

Visitors are expected from the Toronto and Montreal Retail Grocers' Association. The committees are working hard to make this the banner excursion of the season.

The different committees are: Printing and Advertising, Messrs. F. H. Scott, Gilchrist, Mahon, W. York, Atkinson and Prevost.

Special Attractions—Messrs. Booth, Johnston, Hopper, McAllister, Bambrick and Schwerdfager.

Local fish dealers say that business last week was very brisk. The stock handled has been of the very best quality, and included trout, whitefish, speckled trout, perch, pike, pickerel and catfish; salt-water fish—halibut, salmon, codfish, shad and boneds. Prevailing prices are practically unchanged.

D. M. Whelan, late manager at S. Daniels' grocery, corner O'Connor and Slater streets, has started in business for himself on the corner Somerset and Percy streets.

UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT.

With five tons of chicken, a ton of halibut, twenty thousand sandwiches, eleven thousand rolls, twenty barrels of lemonade, twenty thousand cigars and other provisions in like proportion, with electrical illminationus and three bands of music. John H. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register Co., entertained ten thousand residents of Dayton, Ohio, on July 21, to a garden party and dinner at Far Hills, his Summer home. The fete was given in appreciation of the civic reception tendered Mr. Patterson on July 3, on his return from a tour around the world—and is almost without precedent in the history of United States trade.

Frenzied Business

Up under the western mountain the air is full of tomahawks, war paint and arrows. The redskin chiefs are leading on their braves to attack the small band of pale faces opposed to them. Confident in their superiority in numbers—ten to one—they think the annihilation will be done in short order. They forget that perhaps one pale face is good for ten redskins. In the midst of the din we hear a shout of jubilation and approval at the prospect of the pale face wipe-out, from away down East under Mount Royal, and from a pale face, too, which shows that sometimes money is thicker than blood. This gentleman says there has been no argument advanced why the redskins should not have the preference because they put prices down. We believe the most gullible grocer between the two oceans won't swallow that statement. Why, no argument is necessary. If there were, thousands of them could be advanced so quickly that they would just tumble over each other to get there. One is all that is necessary, and that is : if the pale faces were wiped out probably no man now living would ever see sixty-cent peas again.

THE PACKERS OF QUAKER CANNED GOODS

Quaker Canned Peas

We finished packing peas on the 29th July. All through the pack the weather was perfect for packing this line, cool and moist, so that the peas were held in perfect condition for canning. The only line that we are short is petit pois. There was such wonderful growing and maturing weather that there was scarcely any of this line in the pods, the result being that while we usually pack several thousand cases of this variety this year it will be several hundred. However, they will never be missed, as the largest peas packed this season are as tender and sweet as petit pois and at half the money. All orders for peas will be filled in full. The pack was 60,000 cases, which will just about carry wholesalers, retailers and consumers over into next season. While we disclaim any responsibility for the price at which they are going on the market, we are carrying out what we intimated when prices were first sent out—that we would meet them, that we would fill our orders in full and that there would be no advance. We recognize that these are frenzy prices but we also recognize that in issuing these prices there is method in the madness of these frenzied redskins.

GREEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

LONDON, ENG., FRUIT LETTER.

By Our Own Correspondent.

July 18, 1905.

INQUIRIES amongst the fruit salesmen of Covent Garden, London, show that this year the tone of the market is far more even and well regulated than last year. There has been no unevenness between demand and supply, nor has there been a glut of any one line such as would tend to force prices down to that almost profitless margin which characterized the domestic strawberry crop last year.

At the present time it is reported that plums and greengages are finding a ready sale, whilst cherries, which have been realizing good prices, have been almost cleared out. Some very fine fruit has been sent over from France. There is a very good opening for Canadian plums, and it might be mentioned that those Californian plums which arrive on this market are packed in wooden boxes of from 16 to 20 lbs. This is a convenient size, and one which meets with approval in the London fruit centres. Californian pears have been found fault with as not being up to their usual standard, and in addition to this the crops have been small.

The home apple crop is comparatively small and not likely to have any noticeable effect on the market, either one way or the other. On the continent, also, crops of fruits of all kinds are but of medium size, whereas last year there were some very big supplies and prices were low in accordance. Although the season for Canadian apples has not yet arrived, the general opinion is that the demand will be good and all shipments will find a ready sale. Apples from all sources arrive on the British market at singularly opportune moments, so that there is always a sufficient quantity to be had all the year round. Supplies from Australia and Tasmania are on sale here from about April to June, just when Canadian apples, which begin to arrive in August, are about finished up. There is thus no undue clashing of supplies. It is felt by many of those firms which handle Canadian apples that although the fixing of uniform dimensions for apple boxes is a good idea and one likely to have a satisfactory effect, still the best method of packing is, after all, in barrels.

There is some talk about British Columbia entering the market over here with fruits, to which she is devoting so much attention, and it would appear that there are one or two British Columbia growers looking into the possibilities for good business here. Those British brokers who have handled samples of the fruit are much impressed with their fine quality, but it seems that among British Columbia growers themselves the general opinion is that they have a very ready market in Manitoba and the Northwest for as much as they can at present produce. Perhaps in course of time this field will receive greater attention.

The Extension of Markets Division, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, has received information to the effect that the Government of Cape Colony, South Africa, intends to enforce more strictly the existing regulations against the introduction of apples infected with the disease known as "black spot," or other insect diseases, and exporters of such fruit from Canada are warned that shipments found to be so infected will be liable to confiscation and destruction without compensation, under the provisions of the Import Regulations.

The evaporating process has been extended to the preparation of green vegetables, and bids fair to revolutionize trade in "green stuff," and perhaps in other substances, says an American writer.

The vegetables are treated with hot air in such a way that they become perfectly dry and yet remain entirely uncooked, while color, flavor, and nutriment are preserved. While the product is called sterilized food, sterilization was not the primary thought of the inventor. His problem was to treat foods, vegetables especially, so that they would furnish varied and healthful rations for troops sent to tropical climates, etc. The inventor appears to have done more, for while household use was not contemplated, there are indications that housekeepers will find the new products available.

As nothing but water is taken out, nothing else is required for the process of restoration. No chemicals of any sort are added, no sugar is evolved as by some methods of evaporation and none already present is eliminated. There is no temptation to add artificial coloring, as the restored vegetable or fruit has its original color.

The Merchants' Association of New York has addressed a letter to the New York Fruit Produce Trade Association asking for the co-operation of that body in promoting reciprocal trade relations with other nations. The trade is asked to consider the serious situation confronting the export trade of the United States to Europe, which during the fiscal year 1904 exceeded $1,057,000,000. Nearly all the continental nations of Europe have adopted, or have under contemplation the adoption of high protective tariff duties on imports.

Reports from United States correspondents indicate a plentiful but scattered and ragged crop of apples this year.

Luther Burbank is perfecting a new potato which he says will rival anything the world knows about, not even excepting the famous Burbank. The new potatoe is large and smooth skinned and probably by another season will have attained a quality of sweetness required in a good product.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Green Fruit.

Toronto, Aug. 4, 1905.

IT is current opinion on the market that the domestic fruit season has never been as satisfactory as this year. Last week witnessed a very large turn over of fruits of all kinds and that Toronto is rapidly becoming a large fruit centre, is seen by the fact that one local firm disposed of no less than eleven cars of California fruit on Monday, July 31. To the ordinary observer, the auction sale was reminiscent of auction day in the New York market. A large number of retail fruit men, grocers, etc., crowded around the auctioneer, each holding the long regulations sale catalogue, and shouting out his bid according to the numbers.

At the close of the market there is a shortage of domestic fruit and prices accordingly have gone up. Owing to the cooler weather, lemons have dropped in price. Rockaford canteloupes have advanced in price until they are beyond the reach of the ordinary trade. Cherries have been crossed from the list and new apples are rapidly becoming a feature of the fruit market.

Watermelons are scarce and full supplies of these need not be expected until next week, when Indiana stock begins to arrive. Late Valencia oranges will soon be off the market. The next variety to quote will be Jamaicas, but these will not arrive for three or four weeks yet. Meanwhile, the orange market is strong.

A feature of the vegetable market is the arrival of green corn and Spanish onions, the latter of which has taken place of Bermuda and Egyptian stock Owing to temporary scarcity new potatoes are a little higher than last week. QUEBEC MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

Montreal, Aug. 2, 1905.

THIS week began under very unfavorable conditions. A heavy and steady rain practically paralyzed business, not to mention the cool weather. California fruits continue to arrive in fair lots and meet with a ready demand. However, the local market is somewhat short this week. The receipt of bananas was again far below the average; only fifteen cars of them came in. Dealers report a continued good demand for bananas. Pears, still scarce, sell well at $3.50 per box. There are but few oranges, which do not sell fast. Lemons, as usual, are at tip top prices; in fact, between $5.00 and $6.00 a box, and in good demand. Peaches and plums are still in favor and sell quickly at quotations. They are not too plentiful. Pineapples and raspberries are nearly out; some of the latter are selling at 10c. to 12c. per box, but not in great favor.

Watermelons are said to be very scarce, and in favorable demand. Lots of cocoanuts are on the market, and sell well at $3.00 per bag. We quote:

Vegetables.

The Quebec vegetable market is not very active this week owing to rainy and cool weather. Still a fair demand keeps up and stocks move slowly and steadily at practically the same figures as last week. Home grown vegetables, such as cabbage, celery, cucumbers, and potatoes, have the best of the trade, while onions, in great lots, are a drug as well as radishes. We quote:

WEST INDIA GOSSIP.

IF one is to judge from the Daily Telegraph, of Kingston, Jamaica, the planters and traders of that colony are up in arms because Canadian refiners are about to withdraw the bounty or extra allowance which they have been paying on Jamaica raw sugar. For some years raw sugar from the British West Indies and British Guiana has been entitled to a tariff preference of one-third of the whole duty. It appears that not long after the extension of the original preference tariff, Canadian refiners importing from Jamaica made an arrangement, according to which the dealer at the Jamaica end got half the preference in the shape of a direct cash allowance. The refineries have now given notice that this special adjustment of the preference will cease; so that hereafter shippers and producers in the British West Indies will get just so much advantage of the preference as the law of supply and demand calls for. In other words, they are to be placed upon the same footing as producers and shippers of preferred goods in other countries, and not, as the Telegraph asserts, denied the advantages of the preference.

S. L. Horsford, commercial agent to St. Kitts, Nevis and Virgin Islands, reports a falling off in exports of raw sugar to Canada owing to the inability of Canadian refiners to handle more than present accumulations. Mr. Horsford says the balance of the crop will probably be shipped to the United Kingdom.

Gordon, Grant & Co., Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, in their latest market report, advise restricted inquiries for flour and easier prices. Pork and lard are in supply and selling slowly at steadily declining prices. Pork loins, ribs and shoulders are inquired for. Family beef is held for full prices, stocks being light. Oats are improving in value. There have been no late importations of Newfoundland cure fish which is now inquired for. Haddock is salable, but for all kinds of pickled fish the demand has almost disappeared and values are nominal.

HOLIDAY TIME.

There are days in one's lifetime when everything seems Like the beautiful pictures we see in our dreams:
When life runs its smoothest and troubles are few.
With nothing to fret us and nothing to do:
When the clouds are of silver, their linings of gold;
When the leaves on the trees sweet songsters enfold:
When the woods and the rivers invite one to roam
From the haunts of the toiler, to Nature's own home;
When the winds whisper softly o'er hillside and plain,
Sweet stories of harvest in the golden-eared grain;
When the kine by the wayside lie basking in shade.
And the wood sprites invite us within their cool glade;
When the spry, chirping chipmunk pops out of his log,
And the wood-pecker taps the old tree near the bog;
When the whirr of the humming bird sipping the flowers,
Allures one to rest in the loveliest bowers.
When the world holds no discord, all things are at peace—
'Tis in holiday time when I take my good ease.

W. H. S.

OFF FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

WE wish to supplement our Travelers' Directory by the following information from Lucas, Steele & Bristol, Hamilton, which arrived too late for publication in last week's issue of The Grocer.

The Walnut King, who is well known up north, goes fishing, and will try his hand at black bass in the Dorset direction.

Mr. Harris and Mr. Tobias, the ladies' men of the company, will be at "home" during the holidays—a very good place for them.

Tommy Edwards, attracted by the big wages in the west, starts for Winnipeg on Tuesday, but his friends expect to see him pretty soon tire of wheat cutting.

Orten, the Jr., is expected to make hay while the sun shines in more ways than one.

Jimmie Price and Nat Irwin have chartered something and are likely to be seen very often on the lake between here and Toronto.

George Foote finds the breezes up north so palatable that he wants no holidays at all.

THE PRACTICAL GROCER.

THE grocer or provision merchant who wishes to increase his practical knowledge of the many matters that have a direct bearing upon the grocery and allied trades, must get outside of his own four walls as much as possible, in thought, if not in being. Failing actual contact with the successful men of the period, he must in some way acquaint himself with their methods, and obtain their ideas on matters pertaining to business prosperity. To serve this purpose the Gresham Publishing Co., of London, England, have recently issued a most valuable work in four volumes, The Practical Grocer, the aim of which is to bring together within reasonable compass all the most useful information and advice to the grocery trade and to the trades usually allied with it. Although it is not too deep or abstruse, it almost makes a science of the grocery business. There is an immense amount of information contained in the work and whole sections of it are devoted to the several branches of the business. It is full of hints that will be valuable to any ambitious grocery man and contains a series of separately printed plates and numerous contributions by trade experts and specialists. The Gresham Publishing Co. are ready to send specimen sheets, etc., to the readers of The Grocer who send in their names.

AGENCY WANTED.

A responsible London, Eng., firm of importers is inquiring for Canadian food products for which an agency is desired. Extract of beef is especially mentioned. The name of this firm may be obtained by communicating with the Toronto office of The Canadian Grocer.

There are a good many reasons why our pickles should be better than others. For instance, the cultivation and picking of the vegetables is done under the supervision of an expert in our employ; this way we get vegetables away above the average, and they come to the salt house in perfect condition not later than five hours after having been taken from the vine. This is an important thing, as it makes them firm and crisp, not tough and leathery. Brined in dairy salt and filtered water, everything is done that will guarantee perfection and cleanliness. They are cut small so as to thoroughly absorb the spices and vinegar. Put up in the best pails we can obtain, absolutely air-tight, they will keep firm and fresh much longer than any other pickle on the market. 1 gall. pails 75c.; 2 gall. $1.40, 3 gall. $1.95, 5 gall. $3.00, 10 gall. $5.50. MEXICAN DUTY REDUCED.

ACCORDING to latest reports, the Mexican wheat crop will fall some 33 per cent. below the average this year. Already the price has risen to more than $1.50 (gold) per bushel of sixty lbs. In consequence of farmers holding for a still further advance, the duty has been reduced by Government decree, from five cents. per kilogram, about seventy-five cents (gold) per bushel, to one and one-half cents per kilogram, or about twenty-three cents per bushel. This reduction in duties, will, with wheat at its present price in the north, have the effect of reducing its price to about $1.40 per bushel.

The decree reads as follows: "Wheat imported through the custom houses of the republic from this date (June 27) until August 31 next, inclusive, will be subject to a duty of one peso and fifty cents per 100 kilograms, gross weight." There will undoubtedly be a large amount of the staple imported from the United States during the next two months. Whether or not Canadian dealers might, with the transporation facilities at their disposal, make a bid for a part of this trade, is a matter for them to determine. It will rest entirely with the executive as to whether or not the time limit for these importations shall be extended. Should the situation not be sufficiently relieved by that date, there is every reason to suppose it might be. In this case Canadian exporters should certainly find themselves in a good position to command a large proportion of this trade. On account of the all-rail haul and high freight rates, the only wheat that can be shipped to Mexico from the United States is from Colorado, Kansas, Oklahoma and districts not farther distant. Canada would be favored with an all-water route and a superior grade of grain to any produced as far south as the points mentioned.

Up to the present time all of the malt used in Mexican breweries has been imported. Recently a concession was granted, and a large plant is now in course of erection for the manufacture of malt in Mexico City. The plant will be ready to begin operations this Fall and will have an initial capacity of 600 bushels of barley daily, which later is to be increased to 1,200 bushels. With the superior grade of Canadian barley, so well adapted for malting, and with a regular steamship service from Montreal, Canada should practically control the supplying of this demand. There is considerable barley produced in Mexico, but very little of it is adapted to the manufacture of malt. Besides, the local price never goes below fifty cents per bushel of 56 pounds, and it is generally considerably higher. As the terms of the concession permit the free importation of foreign barley, the only serious consideration is that of freight.

AUSTRALIAN VS MANITOBA FLOUR.

LARGE quantities of Australian flour are at present being sent to the various South African markets, according to C. M. Kittson, Canadian commercial agent to South Africa. This flour is what is known in Canada as the "soft" variety, and is similar to the best grades of Ontario flour. Manitoba flour commands a considerably higher price than Australian flour, the premium paid for the best Manitoba article sometimes amounting to 7s. ($1.68) per bbl., although as a rule a premium of 5s. ($1.20) per bbl. can be obtained without difficulty. This is due, doubtless, to the superior flavor of the Manitoba product and to its greater capacity for water absorption.

TO BOYCOTT U. S. FLOUR.

It is rumored that the Chinese boycott against American goods has gone into effect; that the big milling and flour companies in the United States have received stop orders from their agents in the Orient, and that existing contracts have been cancelled. China buys about $220,000,000 worth of foreign goods annually. Of this amount, about $20,000,000 comes from the United States.

CEREAL NEWS.

The Canadian commercial agent at Birmingham, Eng., complains of the irregularity of Canadian shipments of flour and oatmeal.

Two grain elevators at Shelburne, Ont., owned by E. Bowick, were destroyed by fire on July 26. Loss partly covered by insurance.

The Lake of the Woods Milling Co. have about completed a large addition to their elevator at Keewatin to further facilitate the cleaning and handling of wheat. The capacity of the Keewatin elevator is now 650,000 bushels.

The Frontenac Cereal Co., Limited, Kingston, have erected a new mill adjacent to the present plant, to be used exclusively for the manufacture of Orange Meat. The increased capacity means double the output of this cereal, and will enable the company to engage more extensively in the manufacture of flour, cornmeal, etc. The new mill has four storeys and basement.

Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

TOBACCO TO THE FRONT.

THE way to sell tobacco is to keep it to the front. A half-hearted department is only a weakness to the store. It takes up valuable space, which might be devoted to something else, and unless the tobacco department is made to pay, it should give place to something else. But there is no reason why it shouldn't pay and pay well. The richly-furnished cigar stores, with their heavy expense in rent and advertising, show how profitable is this stock. If a store can be kept on this trade alone, with expensive fixtures and highly-paid salesmen, how much more can a grocery store make this department pay, which is subject to no extra expense in rent, selling force, heating, lighting, or anything else which goes to make up the extraordinary expenses of a straight tobacco store.

The grocery store is well suited to carry on a good trade in tobacco. It has a constant flow of customers in and out. Its stock is brought to the attention of far more men than could be possible in an exclusively tobacco store. It can transact business with the utmost profit, since its expenses are relatively low. These points should be sufficient to indicate the possibilities in a tobacco stock. Infuse life into this department and get the benefit of the profits accruing from it.

THE CIGAR FACTORY READER.

HE is a singular figure, this paid reader, found in virtually every one of the large Havana cigar factories and many of the smaller galeras. When an American corporation acquired one of the famous Havana brands some time ago and housed it in a great new building at 10 Zulueta, it was decided that no reader would be permitted to practice his calling in the galeras. Within a few months all the cigar-makers in this readerless factory became mutinous and went upon a strike, and as soon as the difficulty was settled the readers were admitted. The factory at 10 Zulueta now has three of them.

"It keeps the tabaqueros quiet," explains the Spanish foreman. The American superintendent adds that cigar-makers in Cuba cannot talk unless they use their hands, so reading increases the output of the plants. But the tabaquero works wholly by the piece, so that time wasted is his own loss. Reading is "quieting" in that it gives active minds something wholesome to think about.

The reader sits aloft in a small railed box resembling a pulpit placed at the centre of the workroom, so that his voice may carry to all parts of the galera. He reads three hours daily, commonly in the afternoon. By long custom half of this time is given up to newspapers, chiefly those of Havana, though some readers of more than average education read from American papers, translating as they go. The remaining hour and a half is given up to novels, and the character of those selected speaks much for the taste of the tabaqueros.—Ex.

AMERICAN TOBACCO CROP.

The preliminary report on the acreage of tobacco, as made up and published in June, showed a large increase in acreage in both the burley and dark tobacco districts of the west. This showing was criticised, and, errors having been found, the report has been revised, with the effect that the actual acreage is really much smaller than was early indicated. In the cigar-tobacco districts Wisconsin alone shows a decrease from 1904, all the other cigar-leaf districts showing gains. In the chewing, smoking and export types the notable gains are in the bright yellow tobacco belt of North and South Carolina and in the eastern Ohio export section. The burley district of Kentucky shows a slight increase, while the dark tobacco districts show decreases. Condition in the cigar districts is uniformly high and in the burley district it is above 90, but in the rest of the chewing and export tobacco districts it is generally below the latter figure.

ANTI-CIGARETTE CAMPAIGN.

An anti-cigarette wave is passing over the United States. In several States, already stringent laws have been passed absolutely forbidding the sale or use of the seductive smoke. In Indiana it is a criminal offence to have a cigarette on one's person. Wisconsin is also getting in line, and it is difficult to see where the movement will stop.

The indiscriminate sale of cigarettes to minors has, no doubt, been largely responsible for this great public sentiment against them. No one deprecates this class of business more than the manufacturers and honest dealers. But it may be pointed out that sumptuary laws in which this anti-cigarette legislation may be classed, have never yet accomplished what they have set out to do. Unless the public are convinced of the wrongness of an act, no law will be sufficiently strong to keep them from it. Paternal government has gone out of fashion, and when a state legislature says to the adult citizen that he shall not smoke a cigarette, it begins to look like an unnecessary curtailment of individual liberty.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S PIPE.

Emperor William likes a cigar, but, according to recent reports from Berlin, he now declares that no cigar is comparable to good tobacco smoked in a good pipe.

In his smoking room there are several pipes, but some he has never used, and there is only one which he constantly uses. A beauty it is, having been fashioned by an artist from a design furnished by the kaiser himself.

The bowl, which is larger than usual, is of meerschaum; the stem, which is rather long and delicate, is of Turkish wood; a finely-carved cluster of leaves ornaments the bowl, and a large silver W, on which a silver bird is perched, decorates the stem.

In this pipe the emperor smokes Havana tobacco which is specially prepared for him.

Read Them Out

Go over the Order Books, Sales Books, of grocers anywhere, and you will find more entries of T & B than of any other tobacco. That is proof grocers are buying it, smokers are buying it; and more—buying it in good quantity. Any grocer is safe in ordering a big stock of T & B because smokers have learned to buy from their grocer. This means profitable trade. Your share of the trade depends upon your supply of 861. A Bristol firm invites correspondence from Canadian manufacturers of casein.

868. A South African exporter of kaoline clay for use of china potteries, wall paper and colored cotton manufacturers, desires to get into communication with importers of this article.

MARKET FOR WRAPPING PAPER.

A FAIR business in Canadian wrapping paper might be done in South Africa if proper means were taken to work the market, says C. M. Kittson, commercial agent to that country.

The variety for which there is the most demand is known locally as "Gold Ochre," 29 x 45 and 46 x 36, 30, 45, 60, 80, 100 and 120 lbs. to a ream of 480 sheets, for which the European manufacturer is at present quoting £8 8s. 6d. ($40.92) per ton of 2,240 lbs. f.o.b. Gothenburg, Sweden or Hamburg, Germany (free packing). Other varieties in demand are: Parchment Brown, quoted by European exporters at £12.10 ($60.72); Drab Sealing, quoted by European exporters at £15.10 ($75.30), per ton of 2,240 lbs. f.o.b. Gothenburg or Hamburg (free packing: Natural Cap and Lumberhand.

The Rhodes Fruit Farms, Limited, P.O. Groote Drakenstein, Cape Colony, import fruit wrappers in lots of 2,000,000 sheets. These sheets measure 10 x 10 inches, and have the Rhodes Fruit Farms' trade mark printed thereon. The present supplier of these wrappers is quoting 38 3-5 cents per 1,000 sheets, c.i.f., Cape Town. Samples of all the above varieties may be procured on application to the superintendent of commercial agencies, Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, or to the Canadian commercial agent, Cape Town.

COMPANIES INCORPORATED.

The Ateshian Tobacco Co., of Montreal, share capital $20,000, purposes to cure leaf tobacco and deal in tobacco in all its forms. The directors are: C. Ateshian, H. Keller, G. Boon, J. A. Trickey, and F. Westergaard, all of Montreal.

Sugars, Limited, of Montreal, with share capital $20,000, have been incorporated to take over the business of Sugars Co., Montreal, and to manufacture and deal in sugar, syrups and confectionery, etc. Directors: J. W. Blair, C. A. MacMillan, J. W. MacMillan, and T. Keyes, of Montreal; and H. V. Shaw, of Westmount.

SAILED FOR MEXICO.

The steamer Anglo, the first of the new Canadian-Mexican line, sailed from Halifax on Thursday, July 27, heavily laden with Canadian products for Cuba and Mexico.

NEW PUBLICATION.

The latest addition to the Trade Press is Eli Grocer and General Merchant, which is soon to appear in St. Louis, Mo. The new publication will be in book form, and will be edited and managed by Mr. R. E. Lee, formerly of The Interstate Grocer.

INCREASE OF TRADE.

The Salada Tea Co. are sending to all their customers a statement of their increase in trade during the first twenty-six weeks of this year over the corresponding twenty-six weeks of last year. Their increase amounted to 256,686 lbs., or, averaging chests at 90 lbs. each, they had an increase of 2,852 chests in the six months.

They point out that of this increase in the six months, 108,853 lbs. was made in Ontario and the Northwest, and that this is the fifteenth year that Salada has been before the public.

GROCERIES AND OIL ODORS.

It is but a natural conclusion that grocers' customers should object to having their purchases spoiled by the odors of oil. With the old style oil tanks it was almost an impossibility to prevent the spilling of oil over the hands and thereby tainting all articles handled after the filling of the oil can. You can't always take time to wash your hands when your store is full of customers.

The Bowser Self-Measuring Oil Tank does away with this disagreeable feature of selling oil. The customer's can is placed under the pump or hung under the nozzle, one stroke of the crank, and the accurate measure has been given—not a dot over or under measure, perfectly clean hands, a clean floor and a clean tank. The tank can be placed in between coffee or flour sacks and there would not be the slightest danger of contaminating the groceries. ,

It is worth considering

The sale of chocolate is increasing every year. The "Thistle" Brand Fish

The fact that for twenty years we have sold the "Thistle" Brand of Canned Haddies, Kippered Herrings, etc., is pretty good evidence of the high standard of quality of the goods. By high quality we mean, first, the very best fish put up in the very cleanest way; second, the preservation of the rich, delicate, natural flavor by prompt action after the fish are caught.

There has never been any attempt by the owner of the "Thistle" Brand to produce their goods as cheap goods—quality has been their watchword first, last and always. They have never pretended to compete on the basis of price and they never will. The "Thistle" Brand is to be the best by every test and regardless of expense.

The Manager of the company is unsurpassed as a fish-curer, as his father was before him. The buyers of the "Thistle" Brand can be absolutely sure of perfection. It is the standard from which the quality of all other brands is judged.

If you have Money to Burn

Why! Go burn it. There is 10 times more satisfaction in burning money than in losing it in driblets, through carelessness of clerks, or disputed accounts. Who that has "pass-book" customers has not had accounts disputed and partially repudiated? The best way to avoid all complications and misunderstandings is as follows:

IF A MAN WANTS CREDIT

for $10, give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book, charge him with $10, and there you are. No trouble at all. If he buys a plug of tobacco for ten cents, just tear off a ten-cent coupon—that's all. And so on for all his purchases up to limit of the book. NO PASS BOOK NO WRITING. NO TIME LOST. NO KICKING. There are other Coupon Books, of course, but why not have the best? CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS IN ENGLAND

By W. L. E.

THE TRIP TO PARIS.

BOTH of what may be termed our first and last official functions, were surprises. The first was the reception given to us by the King and Queen. The last was the invitation from the Paris Chamber of Commerce, through the French ambassador in London, to Excursionists on Steamer at Liverpool.

In the foreground is Mr. Burns, of Burns & McClurg, Toronto. The gentleman with the silk hat is Mr. Hutchins, of the Great West Saddlery Co., Winnipeg.

visit "Gay Paree." The invitation was of the heartiest kind, and it was intimated the more that came the better would our host be satisfied.

The invitation came when we were in the midst of our provincial tour, and when hospitality was being heaped upon us with such rapidity that we were threatened with annihilation. But it was accepted with pleasure, and in fact, enthusiasm. The three weeks' of British hospitality had made us veteran campaigners in the field of pleasure. And so 160 of us shouldered our baggage (pardon, Monsieur, luggage,) and started for the French capital.

As in our provincial tour, so in this journey to Paris, representatives of the London Chamber of Commerce accompanied us to the French capital to see that no harm befell us. Our guardian angels in this particular instance were Messrs. R. S. and L. Fraser, (who had scarcely lost sight of us since we reached the British capital) and Col. Sir Roper Parkington.

Two hours after leaving London we were steaming out of Dover harbor, and 70 minutes later we were entering Calais. The mayor of Calais, other officials of the town, and Mr. Poindron, the Canadian commercial agent at Paris, were on hand to welcome us. They were full of smiles, and courtesies. In the restaurant at the landing stage, luncheon was awaiting us, and as we were awaiting the luncheon, the latter soon became a part of ourselves.

Of course, there was speechmaking. The words that were spoken were not understood by all present, but no one misunderstood the sentiments expressed.

The mayor of Calais proposed the health of King Edward, and Mr. W. K. George, in responding, said, amid much applause, that to the harmonious relationship existing between the English and French speaking people of Canada was largely due the progress of the Dominion of Canada. A remark that also came in for warm approval, was that made by the president of the Calais Chamber of Commerce, when he said that the ties of relationship between Canada and France were of a peculiar and special kind. Another remark to the effect that a special order had been issued by the customs authorities, exempting our baggage from examination, was naturally cordially welcomed.

At Paris, the representatives of the Excursionists at the Firth Bridge.

Young man in the rear of the brake is Mr. Northway, of Northway & Son, Toronto.

Chamber of Commerce and Senator Rolland of Montreal, were on hand to receive us. About eight hours after we left the British capital we were located in the French capital.

On the first day of our visit to Paris we were allowed to have our own sweet way. We had neither receptions nor dinners, for all of which we were truly thankful. But we did not waste the day. We utilized our freedom by getting acquainted with the city, and studying the customs and habits of the people, incidentally, of course, admiring the dress and beauty of the Parisian belles.

But the second day of our stay in Paris was well filled in. In the morning there were drives; after luncheon there were visits to the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate, both of which houses were in session. Then came the reception tendered by the Paris Chamber of Commerce, while the day was closed with a banquet.

Nothing could have been more cordial than the reception, and no one could have done more for our entertainment. The Weather Clerk was the only one against whom we have any complaint to make. He simply roasted us. But probably it was more the mistake of the head than of the heart. He might possibly have been laboring under the erroneous idea that we needed to be thawed out after coming from Canada. At any rate, whatever may have been his preconceived notions, he certainly melted us. But we enjoyed the function none the less. We were welcomed in English as well as in French, and the replies from the representatives of our party were also couched in both languages. President George spoke in English, and was profuse with apologies because he was unable to speak in French. The duty of replying in French devolved upon Senator Rolland, and well did he acquit himself.

The French want to do more business with us. And it is not all born of the monetary desire either. Canada is lost to France, but while the political ties have been severed, those of sentiment are still strong. This fact was much in evidence at every function, and on all occasions. It is to be devoutly hoped that this sentiment will always be strong. It is a good thing for business as well as for peace.

On the great national fete day, the day in commemoration of the fall of the Bastile, we were honored with seats on the grand stand at Longchamps, from which we had a magnificent view of the review of the garrison of Paris, some forty thousand men. And here our joy was made complete by the hearty cheers that were accorded the British naval officers who had come up from Brest to, like ourselves, see the review. The British naval officers wore gratified smiles indeed as they drove away.

On the evenings of the fete days we had an exceedingly good opportunity of seeing the light-hearted people of Paris abandon themselves to pleasure. At 7 p.m. street car and 'bus traffic was suspended, and then the fun began. The streets were literally filled with people. Brass and string bands, and in lieu of bands, hand organs, were stationed at short intervals all over the city. Every street and public square became a dancing platform until far after the "rosey hue of morn" had appeared, and the necessities of business demanded that the drays and other vehicles should again be allowed to travel their accustomed route. Tell it not in Gath, some of our Canadian fellow travelers vied with policemen, soldiers and citizens generally in tripping the light fantastic over street car rails and cobble stones. And they appeared to enjoy it just as much as the natives themselves.

Mr. Anatole Poindron, the Canadian commercial agent in Paris, did much to make our stay in the French capital pleasant. He came down to Calais to help us, and in Paris he was here, there and everywhere, anxious to be of service to us; and he was of service. From what I could gather he is a good man for the position he holds. He is certainly anxious for the extension of trade between Canada and France, and was ready at all times to place himself at the disposal of those in our party who could find time to visit those in Paris who might be interested in trade between the two countries.

While in Paris I was impressed with the opportuneness of the present for the development of trade between Canada and the French republic. As I have already pointed out the sentiment of business men in France, towards Canada is most favorable, and they are ready to buy from us as well as to sell to us. It is up to our business men to take advantage of this, and I am sure Mr. Poindron, the Canadian commercial agent. 101 Rue Reaumur, will be glad to lend all the assistance in his power to those who may seek it .

WESTERN RETAIL ASSOCIATION NEWS AND TOPICS.

AS announced in the last issue of The Canadian Grocer, this paper has been chosen by the executive of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada as the official medium for association news. This paper has been chosen because it is quite safe to talk plainly in its columns. None but retail and wholesale merchants are on its subscription lists, and hence it is safe to discuss freely and frankly in its columns topics which it would not be wise to discuss in papers read by any of the general public.

The columns of this paper are at the disposal of merchants who are members of the western association and of those who are not. There are many topics which require discussion in the strictly trade paper, for there is nothing like an open, frank discussion of trade grievances and troubles to clear the air. So, send in your letters, western dealers, and remember that you need not be afraid to talk plainly. Only the trade will read what you have to say. Address The Canadian Grocer, 511 Union Bank Building, Winnipeg, Man.

Secretary Coulson has received a number of letters from western grocers and general merchants since the semi-annual meeting asking for particulars about what was done at that gathering. It is impossible for him to answer all these latters in full, although he will be pleased to furnish information on any particular points. He has referred all inquirers to the complete report of the proceedings given in The Canadian Grocer of August 4.

Early in the week, Secretary Coulson addressed a circular letter to the entire western trade, which was in substance as follows:

Dear Sir,—If you did not attend the semi-annual meeting held in Winnipeg during Exhibition week you have, no doubt, read the report of same in The Canadian Grocer and the Commercial, and you are now acquainted with the objects and aims of the association and the progress which it has made to date.

We owe our phenomenal success to the sound principles of our constitution and the active endorsation of the wholesale trade. As a business proposition there is none better, and it should appeal to every general merchant. I will visit your town shortly for the purpose of organization, and I hope you will call on each merchant in your town with a view to forming a local board.

The Canadian Grocer has been appointed the official paper for association news and an extended account of the proceedings at our semi-annual meeting appears in the issue of August 4. If you are not already a subscriber, a sample copy of that date will be sent to you.

Yours truly,

W. A. COULSON,
Secretary.

Secretary W. A. Coulson left Winnipeg on Monday for a short trip on association business in the southern part of Manitoba. His intentions were to visit Plum Coulee, Emerson and probably one or two neighboring towns, returning to Winnipeg on Saturday. A thorough canvass of the remaining towns of Manitoba will be made immediately and the secretary will then direct his energies towards the organization of the two new provinces. From assurances received by letter from grocers and general merchants in the Territories there can be no doubt of the success of the movement farther west when the organizer commences to work this new territory.

A. S. Lock, of Foley, Lock & Larson, in his address to the association at their closing meeting a fortnight ago, foreshadowed pretty clearly the attitude of the wholesalers towards this vexed question of long credits. He pointed out that there are three parties involved in the problem; first, the wholesaler and manufacturer; second, the retailer, and third, the consumer. The root of the whole trouble lies with the slow-paying consumer, who owes big store bills; he can be influenced most by the retailer, who is his source of supplies. Perhaps the retailer is too good natured and doesn't press hard enough for payment; perhaps he is afraid to do so because such action may drive trade to a competitor who gives longer credits. In that case the retailer needs a little pressure from the wholesaler in order to remedy matters. Perhaps the remedy may come from the wholesalers making a concerted effort to collect all outstanding accounts. With a bumper crop, the Fall of 1905 looks like the psychological occasion for such an effort.

KEEP A LIST OF LEAKS.

DID you ever seriously try to make a list of the holes through which possibly little bits of profit were constantly dribbling away? Overbuying is a leak. An extra five off for taking a quantity is a saving, but if the quantity lasts you a period of four times as long as the time it takes to get a fresh supply from your market, you have lost the profit on a part of your capital unnecessarily tied up. And if that loss of profit exceeds your saving, it is not necessary to have additional proof that overbuying may be a leak.

Stowing away goods likely to sell on sight, where they cannot be seen, is a hole through which leak profits that might have been made had the goods been properly displayed.

Failing to care for goods, so that they get shop-worn, and must, therefore, be sold at reduced prices, is another leak. Holding of seasonable goods until they become utterly out of style, rather than getting rid of them by taking a small loss, is still another leak.

Letting windows go unwashed and unchanged is a decided leak. Not only are you thus losing profit on sales that might be directly caused by particular displays in the windows, but you are also failing to improve an opportunity right at hand in the form of those windows to give passers-by most convincing reasons for coming into your store.

Letting your bills go unpaid until too late to secure discounts that may be offered for cash, is another leak. Very few cash discounts are so small but that they afford a profit over and above the interest that would have to be paid were it necessary to borrow money with which to pay the bills.—The Drummer.

OTTAWA RETAIL GROCERS' ANNUAL PICNIC.

A "CAPITAL" day was last Monday, August 5, when the members of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association and their friends to the number of nearly 1,800, held their fifth annual picnic and excursion to Carleton Place. The brightest and sunniest weather was served out by the weather man and this was, no doubt, out of compliment to the Ottawa grocers, who, besides being the brightest and most up-to-date grocers of the land, are a genial, happy and unanimously friendly aggregation of business men. It is The Grocer's privilege to attend and enjoy the outings of the different grocers' associations in Ontario and Quebec, and while all of them are conducted with the most satisfactory results to themselves and friends, it can truthfully be said that the "Senators" know all that is requisite for the conduct of affairs of this kind, and it is no disparagement of other picnics to say that some of the larger commercial bodies would find a few valuable pointers by attending these annual outings of their Ottawa brethren. Everything went off in good shape, good time and splendid order, and the various committees having charge of the excursion and games deserve copious praise for their efforts and the thanks of their patrons. The hard and indefatigable labors of President Forde, Secretary H. C. Ellis, Messrs. Hunter Scott, C. B. McLean, H. W. Booth, A. W. Huband, and their aides-de-camps of the committees could only result as it did in a successful day for everyone. To patronize the excursions of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association should become a pleasant duty for all Ottawa. It was apparent that even the Federal Government realized it a duty and for the first time in many years Government offices were closed and many of the heads and clerks of the Departments took advantage of their holiday to accompany the purveyors to Carleton Place.

Mr. F. Forde,
President Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association.

The first train of six coaches left the Union Depot at 8.40, a special of fifteen coaches at 9.10, another at 1.10, while at 12.10 a special left from the Central Depot. All of these trains were loaded to the trucks. The Citizens' Band of Smith's Falls accompanied the first section, and met the various trains on their arrival at Carleton Place. The games and sports were run off at the new town grounds and the grocers had the honor of being the first to break ground for future games. The grounds are situated close to the banks of the lovely Mississippi River, not the mud-bottomed, large stream bisecting Uncle Sam's dominions, but a lovelier sheet of water, with shady banks and little islands scattered along its course from Mississippi Lake to the Ottawa River.

Carleton Place having declared August 7 its civic holiday the attendance during the afternoon was increased by over 800 citizens; so, altogether, nearly 2,500 people attended this, the most memorable picnic in the annals of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association.

Promptly at 8.10 p.m. the return trip citywards was effected and Ottawa reached at 9.15.

INDEPENDENT—SURE THING!

IT is easy to buy canned PEAS now at cost; also very easy to criticise them, but it takes a lot of study and hard work to produce a satisfactory canned pea. We hope that every Packer is producing the best pea possible. This will do more to increase the consumption than the cost prices. We are doing our best to make the "AUTUMN LEAF BRAND" just right. We have a few thousand cases more of the medium grade peas to offer at prices that will forever eliminate the Hawker in that line.

"AUTUMN LEAF BRAND CORN."—When it comes to nice fancy sweet sugar corn it is a 100 to one that we lead. Reasons why:—Our Manager learned the corn canning business with the world-renowned corn packer, J. W. Jones, of Portland, Me., commencing August, 1869, and followed the business from that time. He has a thorough technical knowledge as well as the practical experience of all these years, with and at the head of some of the oldest and largest Packers in the U.S., as well as with the most important Packer in Canada. tire committee. At the grounds both these gentlemen were "all over the field," and in at the death of every event.

Treasurer C. J. Provost's smile was of the happiest kind. That "safety grip" of his was loaded with shekles.

Mr. J. M. Black, of the Royal Crown Soap Co., Limited, Winnipeg, was a busy man, and a popular one. Those samples of "Witch Hazel" handed out to the ladies on the train were much appreciated. Lhe idea was a good one—as good as the soap.

Park, Blackwell Co., Limited, Toronto, were well and ably represented by their eastern representative, Mr. F. W. Mallette. With headquarters at Ottawa, it is easily understood why he was familiarly greeted by the grocers.

Mr. J. A. Laurie, own brother to the famous "Annie Laurie," so dear to the heart of every Scotchman, represented Robertson Bros., confectioners, Toronto, and well did he do the honors. Even the hot weather didn't affect his geniality, though his avoirdupois was perceptably reduced.

Capt. Harry A. Bate, of H. N. Bate & Son, wholesale grocers, Ottawa, was a patron of the games and sports. The distinction conferred upon him and The Grocer as judges of the fat men's race was borne meekly though the shock of the collision at the finish was terrific.

Wonder what that Carleton Place was doing out at the grounds? He must have found things too much alive for his business—the only dead thing on the grounds was the picnic lemonade.

Secretary Ellis wasn't quite one of the first in the three-legged race, but to his credit be it said, he also wasn't quite the last to finish. He modestly admitted that he could manage his own legs all right, but the perverseness of his running mate's was unaccountable and entirely without reason.

Mr. A. E. Provost, of Provost & Allard, wholesale grocers, Ottawa, was an interested and popular spectator. His hat was ever off to the ladies, and his friendly grip of the hand with the boys. The Grocer looked in vain for the automobile, but that was having a well-earned rest.

It was astonishing how Mr. F. D. Cockburn warmed himself into the hearts of the married and marriageable ladies in that Comfort Soap race. The finish was exciting, but those who did not get the principal prizes carried away valuable souvenirs in the shape of bars of "Comfort." This race was accredited one of the best features of the day.

Auctioneer Corby and his megaphone were two of the busiest lines of the picnic. How everyone hustled to get into line on the "call of the wild."

There never was a picnic of grocers or other bodies that was run off and managed in such excellent manner. Every event on time, according to programme announcements. Well done, committees!

Dr. Preston, M.L.A for Carleton, was a visitor, and enjoyed the outing very much. So many voters, young and old, could not very well be neglected.

Mr. C. E. Allen, of the Montreal Packing Co., Montreal, was present in company with Mr. J. T. Cuddy, Eastern Ontario representative. To The Grocer Mr. Allen admitted that this picnic was the finest and best managed affair of its kind he had ever attended, and he had been at a few. Mr. Cuddy, who has covered the United States from north to south, expressed himself as surprised and delighted at the way everything went off.

Talk about a worker! Mr. A. W. Huband, of Bate & Co., hasn't his equal anywhere. Never lost his head, had his hand on every string of the games, and that Canadian symbol of industry, the beaver, wouldn't be in it with Mr. Huband. His office should be made a permanency by the Grocers' Association.

Mr. H. W. Booth, vice-president, was here, there and everywhere, and kept in close touch with everything that had to be done. Hunter Scott's coat, also, was ever off, and when any one had to be relieved from duty he was ready to step into the breach. Is it any wonder that the picnic was a success?

The "Magic" Baking Powder caps contributed by the E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, Toronto, were distributed by the committee, and were much appreciated by the participants in the games. There was quite a scramble for these caps, and the committee could have distributed an endless supply.

Treasurer C. J. Provost is a great admirer of The Grocer, and to its representative stated that he has now had it regularly for more than fifteen years, and considers it the best investment for any and every grocer. He stated that it had become almost a necessity; he looked forward to its arrival with pleasure and read it with profit. Thanks!

Wonder what was meant by "Bully's Acre?" Possibly friends Ellis, Booth and York can enlighten us. Whatever was meant, when the expression was

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, August 10, 1905.

BOTH cheese and butter show a healthy and natural reaction after the recent sharp advance in prices, and from present outlook it seems as though a safe trading basis in both articles had again been reached.

The indisposition of the importers in the United Kingdom to follow the extreme prices paid at country points has had a sobering effect. Nobody here seems inclined to store July cheese at the high prices ruling lately, and the only salvation was to reduce bids in the country to a point where the natural demand in British markets could again be met.

Reports from across the Atlantic generally speak of light stocks in first hands and as our stocks of cheese are unquestionably far below the average at this season of the year, the present situation may be called sound, as our goods find a ready market at present values.

Once the July make has been disposed of and the August make is coming forward, our dealers and exporters will feel inclined to store their goods rather than sell them at a loss, as there will be only three months of production to supply the demand for eight months or more, and under ordinary conditions this three months of production should not be more than what the consumers in Great Britain will require during the Winter months.

Should the Fall make of cheese be very large, there might be danger in carrying goods into the Winter months, but, with the still ruling high prices of butter and the continued good demand for this product, it is not likely that those now making butter will turn their attention to cheese. The natural inference would be that there will not be too many cheese made, and that holders may reasonably expect to make a profit on any goods of the Fall make, which includes the August make. Meanwhile, at least, it does not seem probable that prices will still further decline.

The make of butter is considerably in excess of former years, but owing to a good demand in Germany a large proportion of the continental make has been side tracked from markets in the United Kingdom and, although our prices have been much above the average for this year, the demand for our Canadian product has been and still is very good. There exists almost a famine in the cheaper grades of butter, notably western dairy, and this grade is selling today at unprecedentedly high prices with a consequent great scarcity of supplies; besides the export outlet, there is a demand from our home trade for this grade of butter and, unless Winter dairying is taken up, there will be a shortage of supplies for our home consumption.

Creamery butter also has been in steady demand for export, so that there is hardly any accumulation of goods, in spite of the increased production, and prices are in consequence at a point rarely exceeded during the Winter months of non-production. There is naturally a very large consumption of butter in Great Britain, and if the foreign supplies are cut short, as they have been so far this season, the demand is felt here, especially as our creameries are catering to the British trade by giving them what they want in quality, style of package, etc.

In conclusion, it may be said that both cheese and butter are on a safe basis, and at present, at least, the situation is free from speculative influences; prices of both articles are high, but there is at the moment nothing in sight to cause a decline.

It was pointed out to Mr. Fellowes that, as the Act was working at present, it was nothing less than a piece of unwarranted protection, which, while it favored a fixed set of breeders, mainly Irish, at the same time did enormous harm to the farmers in England and Scotland and at the same time deprived many willing laborers of work. It was shown that to have the cattle killed at once was a loss, not only because by fattening their value could be enhanced some £2 or so, but also because the feeding and fattening of them would afford work for many unemployed, and their offal could be turned to excellent account.

It was also urged that the exclusion of Canadian cattle fell heavily upon the master farmer in Greater Britain, since he was thus deprived of what might be termed his raw material. In other words, he had not sufficient cattle to fatten and consequently this trade had

LONDON PRODUCE LETTER.

By Our Own Correspondent.

FOLLOWING on what was written in the London Letter of last week, a little might be said about the efforts being made on this side for the removal of the embargo, which forbids the importation of Canadian cattle into Great Britain for the purpose of mixing with the herds there.

As was mentioned last week, the harm done by this measure is by no means confined to Canada, and it is little wonder to find that on May 11, 1905, a deputation, representing British agriculturalists, consumers, butchers' societies, farmers and commercial and municipal interests, waited upon Mr. Fellowes, president of the English Board of Agriculture, and asked for the removal of the embargo.

fallen off. As said last week, it was computed that something like 250,000 carcasses less per year are exported than formerly. The agriculturalist also had his complaint, lamenting that now a big crop of turnips positively meant a loss to him, since he could not get the stores to feed. In many parts of Scotland and in some portions of England the turnips were useless.

The president of the Board of Agriculture was given plainly to understand how differently conditions obtained now to ten years ago, and it was pointed out that from an economic point of view the retention of the embargo was doing enormous harm. It had the effect of alienating the feelings of Canadians from the Mother Country and of bringing into imperial relations an undesirable amount of bitterness. Canadians felt that an injustice was being done them, and this injustice affected no inconsiderable portion of the Dominion.

In reply to the deputation, however, Mr. Fellowes, the president, said that as long as he was in office he could hold out no promise that the Act of 1896 would be removed. He dwelt upon the disastrous effects of the foot and mouth disease of ten years previous, and, although he did not think that there actually was any disease in Canadian cattle, still there was always the risk. The price of meat had not been enhanced since the embargo had come into force. Canadian cattle had a long way to come, and in this there was danger. Although at the time no response was given to this argument, it was afterwards pointed out that no disease had ever been found in those cattle which arrived for immediate slaughter, and, in any case, the quarantine could be brought into force to make doubly sure. Scarcely a word was said by Mr. Fellowes on the embargo as a measure of protection against Canadian competition.

The members of this deputation afterwards assembled at the Westminster Hotel, London, and after further discussion it was determined that a national organization should be formed with the object of pushing forward the movement for the abolition of the embargo and of securing the support of parliamentary candidates. The latter, of course, was with an eye to the coming general elections. The most prominent member of this deputation was Lord Aberdeen, while many M. P.'s were also in attendance.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

TORONTO.

Provisions—The provision market still continues firm, with steadily advancing demand, and prices ruling toward stiffness. The weakness apparent in lard at our last going to press has recovered itself, and an advance is recorded ranging at about 1-4c. all round, and there are recorded and the man wanedtmo l are prospects of a still further advance. Hogs, too, have firmed up to $9.50, and are maintained at that figure. Hams are not showing abundance, which has somewhat stiffed prices, but no material change is recorded. Lamb has weakened decidedly, prices standing at 11c. Beef remains in steady demand. We quote for this week:

Cheese—The previous extraordinarily high prices in the cheese market were not expected to maintain, and the result has fully warranted that view. Provisions—Provisions are about in the same condition as last week; a prevailing good, steady demand and very small stocks. In fact, specially in lard, packers and others report that there is not enough in Canada to supply the demand. Receipt of live hogs have been exceptionally small. All lines of cured meat, such as bacon and hams, enjoy a good demand. Prices are very firm.

Butter—Market is much easier on the local market, but this is due much more to an excess in supply than a drop in demand. Exports also are in good shape owing to a steady demand. Creamery butter keeps up pretty, and generally common grades of butter are scarce, although there is a good home demand for them. The margin of prices is about the same for this week.

Cheese — The cheese market is in an easier condition owing to a decline of nearly 3-4 cents. over former advance. There is not very much activity, but the decline is due probably to an increase in demand. Finest Ontario is selling at about 10 1-2c. to 11 1-4c., and Quebecs find buyers around 11c.

Eggs—Stocks of eggs are considerably reduced, and in fact, some dealers state they are somewhat short. The prices are said to be firm at 17c. to 17 1-2c. for ordinary, and 20c. for selects.

ST. JOHN.

Provisions—Barrel pork is held somewhat more firmly, stock being light. There is but a limited inquiry. In beef, Ontario shippers are now asking about the same price as American would cost, duty paid. Considering duty is four dollars, it seems a full price. Lard is firmly held. Smoked meats, scarce. Local curers are closed down. Fresh beef, dull. Our market works on different lines for the different seasons. Now it is lamb, which holds at a good price. Veal is quite firm, but has light inquiry. Mutton dull. Pork not wanted. We quote:

DEPENDING UPON CANADA.

THE abnormal shortage of butter in Great Britain at the present time has been reflected in a rapid advance of values to a point not reached during the hot season for over twenty years. There is no indication of an increase in receipts from foreign countries, and the only relief in sight is on a possible expansion of the imports from Canada, which is rapidly coming to the front as a butter producer. Her exports to Great Britain are steadily growing. The Creamery Journal, of London, Eng., commenting on the increasing importance of Canada in this respect, says:

"From May 1 to June 25 she sent us 64,000 boxes, against 52,000 in the same period last year, and 38,000 the year before. This is rapid progress, and very welcome to our consumers as a set off against the decline in the supplies from foreign countries, which last week amounted to 15,235 cwts. compared with the same week in 1904.

"Prices are higher in London than at Manchester or Bristol, and it is thought that London will have to depend more than usual on Canada. All that is now coming from the Dominion is in good demand, and goes straight into consumption."

used it certainly betokened a popular trio of grocers.

Chief of fire department, W. McIlquaham, of Carleton Place, was the winner of the fat men's race. No wonder conflagrations don't get much headway in his town if he puts on such spurts while on duty as he did in the race.

As a master of ceremonies at the dancing pavilion, Mr. James Mundy was a decided success. Himself a master of the art, he was the right man in the right place.

Charley Wilson, familiarly known to his friends as "Buck," a South African veteran, made an efficient referee during the lacrosse match between the Ottawa Stars and the Carleton Place club.

Mayor Bennett, of Carleton Place, and Chief of Police Hugh McWilson, were guests at the picnic. The mayor was pleased with the magnificent turnout, and the chief of police happy because he had nothing to do.

Mr. S. G. Burgess, of the Ottawa Citizen, and Mr. D. B. McRae, of the Journal, as well as Mr. A. D. Branscombe, press correspondent, officiated in the interests of their respective journals, and welcomed The Grocer with the glad hand.

AMERICAN TEA CULTURE

THE latest industry, in the development of the Southern States, and one that promises to become one of the greatest commercial factors in the future business of the United States, is the cultivation and manufacture of tea. For the past hundred years there have been tea bushes and small domestic gardens scattered throughout Georgia and South Carolina, but they served nothing further than to afford a limited family supply.

It was not until 1890 that Dr. Charles U. Shepard undertook to demonstrate the practicability of growing and manufacturing tea to offer on the American market. All previous attempts had failed either through lack of knowledge or the failure to adopt methods of cultivation suitable to local conditions. Rules laid down for tea on the low, torrid plains of India and Ceylon were followed, the result being failure, though many of the plants survived.

Starting on the principles practised by his predecessors. Dr. Shepard soon discovered the causes of their failure and set about to overcome them. Chief of these was the serious loss from the severe cold frequently experienced during the Winter months. To remedy this a new system of pruning was inaugurated, whereby the clean stem of the Oriental plant was replaced by a sucker growth of many shoots from the root of the plants, thus forming a cloak or protection during severe cold weather. This also increased the strength and productiveness of the tea bush.

The fields are laid out in two ways, in hedges or in squares like corn is generally planted. They both have their advantages, but the former seems the more preferable on fertile soil as permitting many more plants to the acre, and thus a larger yield. Needless to say, the trials and disappointments for a number of years would have disheartened a less persistent and scientific man. The infancy of the future tea industry was in safe hands, however, and in the hands of one who cut loose from the old idea of trying to make the conditions of our climate accommodate themselves to the previous surroundings of the tea plant, and taking the more rational course of cultivating the tea plant to thrive under conditions as found here.

In luxuriance of growth the American gardens are in advance of the average Asiatic garden and it was not long ago that a Japanese official, on seeing the gardens of the Pinehurst estate, said that he had seen nothing in Japan to surpass them. As all agriculturalists know, the sharp frosts of Winter increase the sweetness of fruit, and so with tea, the cold that at first seemed a bar to its cultivation in the Southern Atlantic States brings out the fragrance and sweetness essential to a high grade. The tea plant is a perennial, though during the Winter months the leaves are too tough to utilize.

In the Pinehurst tea gardens may be seen tea grown under cocoanut matting. This is done in only one other garden, in Japan, where it is said to be reserved for the exclusive use of the Imperial court. The effect of this shade is to give the leaves a bluish color. It also produces very much more tender and larger leaves. The tea made from this leaf is of exquisite delicacy and sweeter to the taste than teas not grown under shade. In Japan this tea is known as "sugar tea." The work at the Pinehurst tea gardens has been largely of an experimental nature to determine the most profitable methods of growth and quality. There has probably been more original work and more new successes in the field and factory at the Pinehurst gardens than at any other place in the world. All of the more successful methods of the East have been employed, the best of their machinery used, and with these as a basis American ingenuity has developed improvements unknown in the great tea-making districts of the world. Everything but the plucking of the leaf is done by machinery.

Although Dr. Shepard long ago demonstrated the practicability of making tea in the United States, no one attempted to follow in his footsteps until the Winter of 1901, when Roswell D. Trimble organized a company with northern capital to undertake the production of tea on a large commercial scale. Having become convinced, through frequent visits to Pinehurst, of the profit of the enterprise, he organized a company which bought about 6,500 acres of land between Charleston and Savannah. There the conditions were different from those at Pinehurst, as the lands were old rice plantations and the idea was to utilize the rich soil of these rice fields for establishing the gardens. The company, while under the management of Roswell D. Trimble, have been most successful in establishing their gardens, and as a whole, have demonstrated the great suitability of the South Atlantic coast lands for the establishing of a tea industry on a large scale. Up to the present time this company have not made any tea from their gardens. The two great commercial questions that had to be decided were, first, could they grow and make tea in competition with the cheap labor of the East, and, secondly, could they sell it at a profitable figure? Had they to compete with the cheap labor of the East without the aid of machinery it would be out of the question. Machinery is their salvation, for labor, however cheap, cannot compete with machinery, nor can it produce as good results. The only hand labor employed at the Pinehurst tea gardens is the plucking of the leaf from the bush. This can never be done by machinery, as it is not a uniform but a discretionary operation. The leaf, once delivered at the factory, simply passes from one machine to another until its final delivery ready for packing.—Major R. D. Trimble in Tea and Coffee Trade Journal.

A VALUABLE ISSUE.

A COPY of the Spring and Export Number of The Canadian Grocer, for May, 1905, lies on our desk, and after a hasty glance we find it contains some 200 pages and is full of valuable information. It is full of half-tone illustrations, and the special cover done in colors is a gem.

Among the special articles is a trip to the West Indies, British Columbia Fruit, Export Trade in Dairy Produce, The Fisheries of Canada, The Canadian Fruit Market, and a score of other well-illustrated articles. "A Comparison of Nova Scotia and Ontario Apples" speaks well of ours. A. A. McNeil, of the Fruit Division, has a valuable article on co-operation among Canadian apple growers, in which a beautiful view is given of Hillcrest Orchards, Kentville. Mr. Gillies, one of the editors of The Grocer, has written Down by the Sounding Sea, an account of his first trip to the Maritime Provinces, in which he speaks of the Summer charms, etc. He uses in that some views of Capt. Allen's farm, Woodburn, and shows Mr. J. E. Kinsman and his famous Gravenstein tree that is 100 years old and has given a crop of 27 barrels some years. Mr. Gillies has a good word for the Evangeline Land and for Kentville. Mr. Gillies came to Moncton last year to report for his journal the session of the Maritime Board of Trade and was so impressed with the country that he felt bound to make it known to his readers. The culture of tobacco in Cuba with views is very interesting. Among the contributed articles we find one, Nova Scotia and its Advantages, by M. G. DeWolfe, of Kentville, with a half-tone of the writer. This article will draw the attention of many to this county. This edition of The Grocer goes to every part of the British Empire and to many foreign lands. In our limited space we can hardly refer to so much as it contained between the covers of 200 pages, but can only say that the edition is one of the most valuable ever sent out by a Canadian publishing house, and will do much to advertise this Dominion and show to the world the wonderful resources of this Canada of ours. This Export Number is a feather in the cap of The MacLean Publishing Co.—Acadian Orchardist.

A DOUBLE PROFIT

Royal Baking Powder Pays a Greater Profit to the Grocer Than any Other Baking Powder He Sells.

Profit means real money in the bank. It does not mean "percentage," which may represent very little actual money. A grocer often has the chance to sell either:

1. A baking powder for 45c. a pound and make a profit of 5c. or 6c., or,
2. A baking powder for 10c. a pound and make "20 per cent profit," which means only 2c. actual money. Which choice should you take?

Royal Baking Powder makes the customer satisfied and pleased, not only with the baking powder, but also with the flour, butter, eggs, etc., which the grocer sells.

This satisfaction of the customer is the foundation of the best and surest profit in business—it is permanent. Do not take the risk of selling a cheap alum baking powder; some day the customer may find out about the alum, and then your best profit in the customer's confidence is gone.

Royal Baking Powder pays greater profits to the grocer than any other baking powder he sells.

Windsor Salt

must not be confounded with ordinary Salt. In quality, it is as high above the common Salt of trade as can be imagined. It won't cake—it is pure, white, dry. There is no impurity in it because of the care taken in manufacturing. It is sifted, not ground. Every particle of it is a separate Salt Crystal. It pays to sell Windsor Table Salt, because it is so good, clean, pure—it is all Salt.

THE PICKLING SEASON

Turns the thoughts toward what to "put up" and brings up the vexing Vinegar problem. There is nothing perhaps regarding which the customer must rely so implicitly on the merchant as the purchase of vinegar. A dealer can secure and hold confidence by recommending

HEINZ WHITE PICKLING VINEGAR

It is distilled from sound grain, and is, therefore, entirely free from the solid particles of vegetable matter which start fermentation in fruit vinegars. This, coupled with the fact that it has the right strength, makes it

TO LOWER EXCHANGE RATES.

FOLLOWING the lead of the American Bankers' Association, the Canadian Bankers' Association will try to recover the money order business of Canada, which is now almost entirely done by different express companies and the Government Postoffice Department. This action will end the practice of banks of charging 15 cents on a cheque whether it was for $3 or $50, and any amount under $5 will, according to the new rates agreed on, be put through for a charge of 3 cents; from $5 to $10 for a charge of 6 cents; from $10 to $20 for 10 cents, and from $20 to $50 for 15 cents.

Retail grocers and general merchants ought to welcome the proposed change to a man, if for no other reason than because it will mean a saving in dollars and cents. If the average retailer stops to consider, his exchange account amounts to no small item in the course of the year. Suppose he accepts one draft a day, and receives payment from customers at the rate of one cheque a day, by no means a high average, since drafts are drawn for any amount from $1 up, it means twelve exchanges a week, forty-eight a month, and 576 a year, from which must be deducted the number of drafts on which the bank charges a nominal collection fee and cheques payable at par. If 400 exchanges are paid during the year they will average at least $60, an amount which may be out of all proportion to the actual cash turnover.

It is because the wide-awake retailer has become wise to this fact that express and postoffice money orders are coming into general use, particularly for small remittances. The banks, realizing that this trade is theirs by right, and at the same time impressing upon the retailer that it is an advantage to him to have his collections, etc., go through one channel, are endeavoring to make this possible by lowering the present rates of exchange.

ITINERANT RETAILERS.

SUMMER months witness the flourishing of an all-too-numerous class, viewed from the retailers' standpoint,—the pedlars. Every section can contribute its quota of woeful incidents and unfair competition arising from this class. They are always supposed to operate under the authorization of municipal ordinances. Little capital is needed and the exchange business facilitates sales in country districts. Increased licenses strictly enforced furnish the surest and safest guard to the ordinary merchant. Even in city circles the pedlars and vendors have won a sure foothold, and their position deserves the earnest consideration of retail associations. Various conditions have combined to mitigate the evils of the city pedlar upon the business of the legitimate merchant. Many houses and tenements which are rapidly becoming a part of Canada's cities have conspicuously displayed a sign reading "No pedlars allowed." Further than this, general dry goods and department stores offer the bargains in smallwares, formerly supplied by the pedlar, at lower prices. This is, perhaps, the remedy of the evil in most instances. Jew pedlars have established themselves seemingly irrevocably in Montreal.

HIGH PRICES FOR LEMONS.

A LIVE topic of discussion among the wholesale and retail grocery trade of Canada and the United States to-day is the abnormally high price of Verdilli lemons. On Aug. 10, 1905, the price quoted on the Toronto fruit market was $5.50 per case, or$1.50 in advance of the quotations of a year ago. It isjust seven years since lemons soared to anything like present prices.

The reason for the advance is not far to seek. This year's lemon crop is from fifty to sixty per cent. short, owing to disastrous frosts in Messina early in the season, which seriously damaged the fruit buds. The North American market has felt the effect of this shortage so much that in New York alone the receipts of lemons for the month of July, 1905, were 112,000 boxes less than for the corresponding month of 1904. In the Canadian market the story repeats itself. The consumption of lemons beginning to show a considerable falling off because the average consumer does not care to pay above a certain price, and when the limit is reached he reverts to the use of limes and fruit juices.

All stocks in sight up to the first of September have been contracted for by Ontario fruit dealers, and after that it is thought that prices will show a further advance. Until very recently the only substitute for Verdilli lemons was California fruit. The season for California cured lemons, however, is now at an end, and there is nothing to take their place except fresh cut California stock, which is comparatively deficient in keeping qualities.

MAY CARRY U.S. MAILS.

THE Allan turbiner Virginian is experimenting with United States mails on her present trip from England, and stands to outdo all previous records. She left Moville at 2 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 4, and passed Belle Isle at 6.55 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 8, a distance of 1,760 knots, an average of seventeen knots an hour. Calculating at the same rate of speed, the Virginian should land her mails at Rimouski on Thursday, Aug. 10, at 8 a.m. This is equivalent to five days, nineteen hours from Moville to Rimouski, and would break all records.

The question now before the public is, "Can mails for the United States be delivered sooner if carried by Canadian mail steamers?" Can her mails be delivered in Chicago not more than twenty-four hours later than if they were carried by the Lucania running her usual speed? If the Virginian succeeds in doing so the supremacy of New York as a port for postal steamers on the Atlantic run will be seriously threatened. Canada will become not merely the shortest route to the Orient, but to the greater part of the United States as well. Anticipating the fact that there will be even faster steamers than the Virginian on the Montreal route in the near future, the success of her present voyage may mark the beginning of a great change in the mail route between Great Britain and the United States.

GROCERS' MISTAKES.

IDLE capital is a drain on resources which eventually compels retrenchment or the increase of working capital, says the New York Commercial.

This condition is more often found in retail grocery stores, perhaps, than in any other lines in business. No retail stocks deteriorate as seriously as groceries. In no other line of goods should there be more judicious buying, limited to what may be termed current necessities. This doesn't apply to all varieties of groceries, but to a considerable proportion, and imported goods are perhaps the most unprofitable of all to buy and hold.

How to Buy Foreign Goods.

Imported groceries are bought sparingly by the most progressive grocers, but they are bought frequently. A small stock need not mean that the quality is unsatisfactory, nor that it will be impossible to fill orders. On the contrary, a small stock of imported groceries, judiciously selected, will supply the requirements of all ordinary stores and save the owner from possible loss.

A small stock turned quickly is the best policy for all retail grocers. Buy frequently, thus keeping goods fresh, and getting back the investment and the profit almost immediately. The retailer in this way obtains three important advantages. He always has fresh stock, which is one of the chief points of attraction for customers, present or prospective. He gets back his original investment to use again, possibly in purchasing goods on which there is still greater profit, and he gets the profit on the original investment to invest in something else. These features should be of sufficient importance to cause any man to hurry his transactions, but there are others, which, morally, at least, are quite as important.

Activity Attracts.

Active stock means a lively business, and that in turn attracts by its very activity. Buyers go to stores where business is done. They argue that the stock is fresh, that they are more likely to get what they want and that the service will be more prompt.

In the internal economy of the store itself activity is important, because it prevents loitering among employees and keeps every one keyed up to working pitch, a more important consideration than some people imagine. If employees see stock moving out rapidly and know the store is making money, they feel more contented, and will work harder of their own volition. On the other hand, a store where spiders spin webs in front of the shelves will never have contented employees.

Make a Noise.

Sometimes to cause things to go, it becomes necessary to make a noise about them. One retailer in relating his experience, said he bought a quantity of prunes at 2 3-4c. Then he began to advertise them. He sold 20 pounds for $1. or 5c. a pound, in single pounds. The sale, as can be imagined, was very lively as long as the offering lasted, and customers returned for more.

An experienced grocer in discussing this phase of retailing not long ago, declared that fully two-thirds of the retail grocery trade carry a great deal more stock than their business requires. Slow moving stock, according to his opinion, should be held down to the lowest possible point and never allowed to reach a cumbersome quantity. Some grocers, he said, turn their stock three, some six, and some a dozen times a year. Assuming reasonably good management, it isn't difficult to tell who makes the most money.

To do business successfully in the retail grocery trade requires good management and constant activity. Small, but active stocks, composed principally of those goods which are usually moving, are the most profitable. Make as big a noise about the goods as possible, the more the better, and keep them whirling. Sales must be active, capital must be kept on the move, turning over constantly, and then it will accumulate more capital. If all retail grocers did this there would be more satisfaction with more business.

NICKEL COINS FOR CANADA.

A RECENT suggestion that Canada should adopt nickel as a metal for coins, using the pure metal rather than the alloy used by the United States Government, has much to commend it. Canada has the greatest deposits of nickel in the world, and is practically the source of the world's supply. The adoption of the metal for all coins would, therefore, be a great advertisement for the country and aid materially in the development of this branch of the mining industry.

Nickel is growing in popularity for coinage purposes in Europe, and Canada would do well to be one of the first countries to adopt the metal. Its use for fifty, twenty-five, ten or five-cent pieces would cost much less than the present silver coinage, and the Government's profits would, consequently, be larger. The day is past, however, when the public look for intrinsic value in coins, most coins being mere tokens. It is the Government's fiat that places value on the coins, and pure nickel, which will stand hard wear, would be an almost ideal metal for a Canadian coinage.

THE VALUE OF CO-OPERATION.

IF Canadian exporters have anything to learn from the methods employed by European merchants and manufacturers in exploiting the world's markets, it is summed up in the one word, "co-operation." And a remark of one of the leading United States consular agents to Germany on this subject is not without interest when it is remembered that German tradesmen have had remarkable success in securing a foothold in foreign markets. He says:

"The time has arrived when our exporters must get rid of jealousies and mistrust and join with competitors for the protection of their mutual interests. It is a matter not of opinion, but of compulsion, and the sooner the export trade realizes it the better. In our foreign commerce more thorough methods must be adopted if we would cope with other nations. Associations of exporters may be beneficial in many ways. They can have frequent meetings to devise inducements for attracting foreign trade; they can discuss their experiences and enlarge their knowledge on the various phases of modern export trade; they can more effectually protect themselves against losses, etc., and have a regularly constituted bureau of information, where the names of undesirable customers may be registered, and they can encourage our young merchants in the scientific and practical study of commerce and foreign languages. Canada has already such an organization in the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

"Another factor is liberality. While seeking new customers it is above all of greatest value to retain the old ones. Differences between the exporters and receivers of goods may not be avoidable, but they are sometimes based on grounds too frivolous for a quarrel. If the exporter is at fault, he ought to make amends; if the purchaser is the guilty party, the exporter should meet him halfway. Independence is a valuable quality, but stubbornness is enough to ruin any business. To regain a customer lost is the most difficult task in commercial life, but it is often very easy to hold one if the proper means are applied.

"In these days of intense competition nothing is more fatal than adhering strictly to set policies. Every avenue of trade is crowded with cool and keen-witted men, fertile in expedients and devices, who are perpetually inventing new ways of buying cheaply and at best terms, and if success is wanted in business our manufacturers and exporters must shape themselves to every exigency. It is a great mistake of some exporters to discriminate too much between the regular and casual foreign buyer. The same means that made the first permanent can make the second permanent also. Moreover, patience, fairness, and persuasiveness are necessary to develop our export trade. Many merchants fail to follow this course, and as a consequence are the losers. It is natural enough that the introduction of new articles into foreign countries should meet with prejudices and doubts, and only perseverance, fair dealing, and the power to convince the foreigner of his false opinion will overcome this drawback.

"A further means of building up export trade is the allowance of credit. It is impossible for exporters on this side of the Atlantic to sell their wares on a strictly cash basis where European merchants give credit. Of course, this does not mean that credit should be given to all who ask for it, but careful inquiries will enable our merchants to weed out undesirable foreign purchasers and to greatly limit the risks.

TARIFF INQUIRY.

IT has been officially announced that the committee of ministers who are to inquire into the operation of the Canadian customs tariff at the next session of Parliament, will enter upon their work about the end of August or the beginning of September. Meanwhile it is well for parties interested to prepare such information as they intend to submit and to select representatives to appear before the commission. The Grocer has to listen to a tale of woe from time to time from members of the trade. Such complaints should be aired publicly before this commission if they are to be remedied. Otherwise the customs authorities will conclude that everything is running smoothly, and proceed to pass approval on the present regulations. If it is the dumping regulations that are at fault, a strong representation on this subject should be arranged without delay.

All who come before the committee should be prepared with accurate information respecting the requests they have to make and be ready for cross-examination in matters about which there may be diversity of opinion. Reasonable notice will be given of the visits of the committee to the several points selected, which will include one or more places in every province of the Dominion. All inquiries should be directed to Mr. John Bain, assistant commissioner of customs, Ottawa, secretary of the tariff commission.

EXECUTIVE ELECTED.

The Canadian Association of Master Bakers have elected their executive for the ensuing year: President, George W. Shouldis, Ottawa; vice-president, M. Bredin, Toronto; J. R. Heardman, Cornwall; A. L. Thirodeau, Windsor; W. D. Muir, Vancouver; treasurer, A. W. Carrick, Toronto; secretary, James Acton, Toronto; executive (with the officers), A. M. Ewing, Hamilton; John Turnbull, Toronto; T. Fitzgerald, St. Catharines; R. H. Harrison, Woodstock; legislative, George W. Shouldis, B. Slinn, John Borthwick, Ottawa; A. A. Lees, A. M. Ewing, Hamilton; John Turnbull, M. Bredin, James Acton, Toronto; James H. McEwen, Montreal; E. Parnell, jun, London.

MODERN COLD STORAGE PLANT.

IT was with no little pleasure, on a hot day late in July, that a representative of The Grocer was shown through the cold storage warehouse of Gunn, Langlois Co., Montreal, which has recently been enlarged and remodeled.

The new wing is a building 60 feet by 120 feet, and five stories high including the basement, and gives the firm 220,000 cubic feet additional space, making altogether some 325,000 cubic feet of refrigerator space in which the temperatures range from five degrees below up.

The plant as it now stands is built on the slow burning principle, the very latest idea along this line having been incorporated. The walls and partitions have been rendered absolutely fire proof by the use of a covering of compressed mineral wool, expanded metal lath, and good hard cement. Wired glass is used in all the windows throughout the building, and the elevators are built in a special well separate from the rest of the building, and equipped with automatic fire dors. In annition to this, the electric light wires are all encased in iron conducts.

As a result of their efforts toward making their warehouse practically fireproof, Gunn, Langlois & Co. have succeeded in getting from the fire underwriters the lowest fire insurance rate in Montreal. The warehouse is situated on a corner, with six doors on the west side providing for prompt receipt and delivery of produce. The plant has a capacity of 100 tons, refrigeration, developed by machines installed by the Lavergne Machine Co., of New York, and the Linde British Co., of Montreal. Passing from one cooling room to another of progressively lower temperature, one was impresed irresistibly with the effectiveness of artificial refrigeration.

Nor was this effect diminished by the sight of the tiers of butter, cheese, etc., and the stores of poultry and game which, from all appearances, may be kept indefinitely in this Arctic region, fronting on St. Paul street.

IMPORTANT TRADE MARK DECISION.

AN end of what has been a long-contested trade-mark case was reached recently by the decision of the Privy Council in throwing out the appeal in the case of Gillett vs. Lumsden.

The dispute is one of long standing and has been fought from one court to another up to the Privy Council. E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, objected to Lumsden Bros., of Hamilton, making use of the words "Jersey Cream" in the description of yeast, baking powder, etc., declaring that the words constituted a sort of trade mark for the Gillett products. Justice Street upheld that contention, but full court thereafter upset the judgment as have also the courts higher up.

Clute, Pinkerton & Cook acted for Lumsden Bros., and were represented before the Privy Council by Groege F. Shepley, K.C., while Mr. Bicknell, of Bicknell, Kappele & Co., appeared for the appellants.

NOT TOO EARLY.

Now is the time of year for the grocer or general merchant who is thinking of installing new heating apparatus in his store to come to a decision. If it is to be a stove, it may be all right to wait until the cold weather is at hand; if it is a hot-air furnace or hot-water system, which requires some time to set up, it is none too early for him to complete his arrangements now.

Mr. John F. MacLaren, Toronto agent for the Ogilvie Milling Co., Limited, was met by The Grocer in Ottawa this week. Of the many delegates attending the Canadian Association of Master Bakers in that city this week, Mr. MacLaren seems to be one of the most popular. His acquaintance with the baking and grocery trade of not only Toronto, but Ontario, is a close and valuable one, and no one is a harder worker or pays closer attention to the interests of his customers than Jack MacLaren.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

Quebec Markets.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, Aug. 10, 1905.

THIS week's trade on the whole is good, but featureless. Sugar being in its full season is much in view, and firm in prices owing to a steady, good demand. Molasses also keep up pretty well in Montreal, but the stocks are too small to give way to any large sales. Teas continue in good demand, and dealers report a fair business. Coffees and spices are much the same as last week, the anticipated advance in peppers not having made any appearance as yet. The canned goods situation is as puzzling as ever. The improbability of lower prices is almost confirmed and jobbers look at it that way. Fish is scarce, but in exceptionally good demand for this time of the year. The fish dealers have made good business this year. Maple products and honey are quiet, being, to speak plainly, out of season. Flour and feed enjoy a good demand, but lack in interesting changes. Other lines are practically the same as during the previous week.

Sugar—The sugar market is very active, specially in refined, which enjoys an enormous demand. This is the season for this article and dealers claim that business is exceptional and very satisfactory. Other lines, such as granulated and raw, are also in good shape. We quote:

Syrup and Molasses—Some dealers are of opinion that the last week's improved demand is still prevailing, while others deem it only fair. No big transactions are reported, owing to stocks not being large. In fact, any stock of consequence in Montreal is held by three or four big dealers. Prices are unchanged.

Teas—The market for Ceylon and Indian blacks is about the same as last week. A little more activity is noticeable in Japans and particularly in last season's third crop, which is selling at 12 1-2c. to 15c. China greens are short. I arge orders have been given for import. New teas are also active. Poochow pekoes are said to be scarce and consequently higher figures are expected.

Coffees—The local stocks of coffees are light, owing to small receipts, and a steadiness in consumption. Consequently, prices are advancing. Still higher prices are expected. However, no particular activity is reported.

Canned Goods — The canned goods situation is unchanged. Orders for futures continue to come in steadily. It is reported that some dealers have offered old stock of salmon at reduced prices, but their success in this case, it is thought, is only problematic. The pea crop is promising to be a good one, and it is thought that prices may be easier. We quote:

Fish—All lines of fresh fish are scarce but the good demand for them keeps up steadily. What fresh stock is arriving is immediately disposed of, no stock being left over. Higher prices are soon expected in lake fish, such as trout, white, dore and also in finnan haddies, owing to scarcity and good demand. Brook trout is now selling at 20 cents. Fresh Gaspe salmon is about done, and dealers have to fall back on British Columbia or frozen Gaspe. There is little or no demand in salt fish, except for boneless and skinless cod. However, as the weather is getting cooler, it is expected that consumption will greatly increase. We quote:

Evaporated Apples—Nothing of note to report. Evaporated apples continue dull at from 6 1-4c. to 6 1-2c.. and dried apples, dead demand, 3c. to 3 1-2c.

Flour, Feed and Meal.

Flour—The market is about the same as last week, owing to a fair demand. The prices remain the same and firm enough. Very little exports are done, but local business is considered good. We quote:

Feed—The demand for feed is said to be very good and steady, and owing to this prices are higher, particularly in bran and shorts. Mouillie enjoys a fair but only steady demand. Prices are as below:

Rolled Oats—Rolled oats are as dull as usual and prices unmodified. Oatmeal is not in any better shape, and dealers do not expect any near improvement. We quote:

Ontario Markets.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, August 11, 1905.

SINCE our last issue business generally has given every satisfaction, several firms reporting receipt of good volume of substantial orders. Considering the holiday season is upon us, and that certain markets are still in transition state, and not, therefore, conducive to substantial trade, the present condition may be taken as an indication of a general healthy commercial state. In canned goods there is little to remark; prices remain unchanged. In coffee domestic trade is slow, but foreign indications denote firmness with upward tendency. Tea is in an exceedingly interesting stage, the attitude of domestic buyers being to hold back for lower prices, whilst from all foreign points come news of increased firmness. Foreign dried fruits are naturally slow, in face of continually increasing receipts of fresh fruits; prices, however, are stiffening, and the opening season promises to open strong and healthy. In foreign nuts there is little doing, walnut prospects showing somewhat behind usual prospects. Tapioca has firmed up owing to scarcity, and shows an advance of ½c. The spice market is slow. Cream of tartar has shown an unusual development since Friday last of 2s. per cwt. The provision markets generally show steady trade, with lard scarce and advancing. The grain market has fallen to an even basis, and is expected to maintain, awaiting new arrivals. The sugar market continues strong and remains unaffected by the disparity of the U.S.A. reports.

Canned Goods—The volume of trade in canned goods has somewhat slowed down during the past week, probably owing to the fact that most outside points had sorted up stocks in view of travelers' vacation. There is still a good deal of interest manifest in the salmon situation, and the canners are still showing reticence in closing futures. Although from a time point of view the pack will undoubtedly be curtailed, the excellent catch will relieve this somewhat, so that at the present moment the situation is to a large extent one of conjecture. Sugar—The market in sugar has continued at a fairly even basis. The somewhat heavy sales of the previous few weeks now show signs of subsidence, buyers being disposed to draw from their available stocks before increasing their holdings. Prices are ruling very firm, with a distinctly upward tendency. The U.S. market reports of recent date all point to active business, with prices stiffening up. There have been heavy withdrawals in the refined markets on outstanding contracts, making high record figures. In raw sugars the activity has not been so marked, but the market remains firm, with reports of sales on a slightly better basis. The latest reports to hand from London denote markets as slow, probably owing to the public holiday about this season, but prices unchanged. Our previous prices remain unchanged :

Syrups and Molasses—The home markets are particularly quiet at present time, and prices remain unchanged. Advices from New York point to little business being transacted, but as no supplies were being pressed forward the prices ruled steady and without change. We quote :

Coffee—The domestic trade in coffee is evincing little interest, the outside demand has been lacking energy, and buyers are consequently much reserved in face of existing prices. The U.S.A. reports are indicative of good business with prices well maintained, and this especially so in the milder grades. There was a good undertone to all recent reports, probably owing to the fact that in the aggregate the season's crop is likely to fall short of prospective consumption, which means a considerable inroad upon the world's surplus stock. Consequently present prices would appear to be warranted.

Tea—The domestic market in tea has been moving slowly, the apparent tendency of buyers being merely to buy for present requirements. Foreign reports are rather favorable to prices stiffening for a rise. The U.S.A. markets report fair trade, with prices very firm in view of reports from points of production. In Indians the latest advices confirm a steady falling off in crop returns during the current month, with markets very active and dearer prices. It is estimated that the whole of the 1904 Indian crop has now been practically disposed of, and that the average price for season has been disappointingly low. The new season's teas are, on the whole, better quality than earlier arrivals of last season, and sold at distinctly higher prices. The demand on the London market continues to advance; especially is this the case with teas showing good condition, common teas moving steadily round former prices. In Ceylons the interest has been centred round good medium and good liquoring teas, and prices for these made a further advance. In Chinas the market has been watching for the finer growths, and some exceptional quality Keemus met with keen competition at 1s. 1d. and 1s. 3d. per lb. Javas, too, met with good success, and changed hands at slightly advanced prices. Local markets remain unaffected by the foreign upward tendency, and our previous prices rule. We quote :

Foreign Dried Fruits—The local market in dried fruits has been somewhat indifferent in regard to volume, and little activity has been manifest. Prices remain as previous quotations, but there are indications of changes in the near future. Dates, which have been offered at exceptionally low values, are now showing a decided firmness, and first and second tide steamer arrivals have advanced during the last day or two fully 1s. per cwt.

Valencia raisins are reported as being much below previous estimates, and in the opinion of experienced growers will be considerably below last year's crop. The current situation having now reached its climax, and the law granting the proposition to the Bank of Athens having become an accomplished fact, it is confidently expected that the market will open strong, but at present there are no offerings to notice. Altogether the indications are for firmer prices. We quote:

Foreign Nuts—There is little to note in these goods. Jumbo peanuts are reported as scarce, but not to make any variations from our previous quotations. The crop of walnuts is expected to be much below last season, probably by some 50 per cent., which is expected to bring the market in that line to a more rational basis. Quotations are:

Spices—The spice market is suffering with its usual inactivity at this season; most firms have already laid in their stocks in view of pickling. Prices continue firm. In the case of cloves prices have steadily advanced, and now stand some 8s. per cwt. higher than a month ago. Previous quotations still maintain.

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

Grain—Since our last report the grain market has assumed a more rational atmosphere, and prices have accordingly settled down to a more stable basis. Manitoba wheat has had a substantial drop, No. 1 being now quoted at $1.08, and No. 2 at $1.04 to $1.05, with other grades in proportion. The market itself is only moderate in activity. With the new wheat gradually coming to hand a steadier and more reasonable market is expected to develop. The following prices were ruling at time of going to press:

HOW WINE IS MADE.

By Lieut.-Col. Davis, in Daily Mail.

WE were in the very heart of the Grande Champagne country of the Charente, and had motored out from Cognac in order that I, on the first day of my stay, should gain a general idea of the country, and see something of the work of the vintage.

Standing on the high ground before the farmhouse in the vineyard, I looked round at a billowy country of soft rises and gentle valleys. The clumps of Autumnal trees and the purple and brown of plow land and waste alternated with the emerald of meadows and the deeper green of the vines.

Long grey houses and red roofs were half hidden in the gold and crimson and green and russet of the groves; poplars, orange with auburn leaves, stood along the banks of little streams which flowed through vales where the cattle grazed on the turf; the tips of steeples told of villages hidden away in the folds of the ground, and in the far distance one saw the fringe of the tall chimneys of Cognac and the umbrella-shaped belfry of its big church.

Of course, I asked questions, and the first two were: "Have the vineyards recovered after the scourge of phylloxera?" and "Is the brandy now made as good as it was before the little insect came from America and destroyed the vines?" The story of how a succession of plagues, almost as many as Pharaoh brought upon Egypt, visited vines, and how they were met and overcome, was too long a tale to tell in a vineyard with an afternoon sun beating on us, and my host proposed to postpone that story till some evening after dinner. My other question, my host told me, had been answered for the farmers by the brandy itself. One portion of the Charente country, the marshy Pays Bas, possessed a clayey soil, which repelled the phylloxera, and there was no need to replant the pines. The Pays Bas brandy to-day comes exactly in the scale of excellence of cognacs where it did before the appearance of the plague of insects.

The districts produce brandy which is at its best in the Grande Champagne, and then declines in value as the circles of the various Bois—Fine Bois, Bon Bois, Bois Ordinaires, Bois a Terroir—go ever further from the centre; though I learned that no farmer in the Charente ever acknowledged that his vineyard lies outside the limit of the Bons Bois.

The Grapes.

We saw the grapes picked, and emptied from the wooden baskets into a great vat on wheels, which two horses harnessed tandem drew to one of the windows of a great shed. Door there may have been to the shed, but I saw none. We scrambled in through one of the windows, and I was in semi-darkness. As soon as my eyes became accustomed to the brown half light, I found myself in a picturesque interior, which would have pleased the eye of any artist. Three windows in the shed were squares of fierce light, and at the fourth the men and the great vat and a slide, down which the grapes came to be crushed, blocked the sunshine. The broad roof above the beams was picked out with delicate points of vivid pink, where the sun strove to find a way in through the loose-laid tiles. In the warm gloom men in colored shirts or striped jerseys, with bare arms, were straining at the bars of the press, and from the openings of the great circle full of grape pulp oozed the juice, and flowed away into channels under the flooring.

From the pressing room we climbed down into a long, dark shed, where, below a pipe which ran the whole length of its roof, the farmer had placed rows of barrels into which the young wine ran from taps overhead, and thence we went on the distilling shed, where in a few weeks' time, when the young wine had fermented, the brandy would be made.

The pot-stills which the farmers use are very simple; but experience has shown that the best brandy comes by the simplest means. The brandy is twice distilled, and only the best portion of each distillation, the heart of the heart of the spirit, is retained.

Mr. James Hennessy, the head of one of the great brandy firms of the town of Cognac, was my guide through the stores of his house, and amid avenues of giant vats and acres of hogsheads I learned something of the care with which brandy is stored, matured, and eventually put on board ship for England.

A Great Vintage.

Brandy of vintage years, I found, is generally shipped to England in bulk and allowed to mature in the casks in British stores; 1900 was a vintage year, and 1904 will also probably be regarded as one. The bottled brandy, which is exported in cases, has matured in the stores at Cognac, and has attained the age guaranteed by the stars or letters on the corks. Once in bottle the brandy does not continue to mature, and thus a "one star" brandy in bottle will never become a "three star," however long it may be kept in a cellar.

The chalk in the soil of the rolling hills of the Champagne districts has a good deal to do with the excellence of the brandy; but it very nearly defeated the plucky people who have replanted the whole, or almost the whole, of the Charente vineyards with American roots. They last great vintage from the purely French vines in the Charente was in 1875. It was a glorious Summer that year, and the grapes ripened splendidly. But what was helpful to the grapes was also helpful to the phylloxera insects, and the minute pest increased by countless millions. The farmers, most of them, uprooted and burned their vines, and many of them sold their pot stills as old metal. The big firms of the brandy trade, however, did not give up the battle, and prepared, like a garrison which knows it will be obliged to stand a siege, to hold out through the bad times. As the plague had come from America, it was to America that the committee turned their eyes for the remedy, and the farmers of Cognac began to replant with American roots.

The American vines, which flourished well enough in the low lands, were strangled by the chalk in the hills of the Grande and Petite Champagnes, but a savant who was sent to America returned thence with the Berlandieri vine, which he had found in chalky Texas, and the battle was won.

In 1890 the first note of triumph was sounded in an official report; in 1896 a definite victory all along the line was announced. Meanwhile the big firms, husbanding their precious stores of brandy, and drawing on the Pays Bas and the vineyards in other parts of the country which had withstood the pest for the full amount of wine they could produce, found other enemies in the field against them. England required brandy, and many Englishmen did not at all like paying an increased price for it because an objectionable insect was ravaging the Charente vineyards. The Englishman asked for cheap brandy, and he got it—with a vengeance. How some of it was made is one of the guilty secrets of the world, but I am told that it is possible to-day to buy in Bordeaux for 6f. a case which purports to contain twelve bottles of brandy, capsuled, swathed in straw, and starred like the Milky Way.

From what I saw during my stay in Cognac I can say with certainty that the vineyards of the Charente are producing more wine than they did before the evil days of the "seventies," and that the spirit distilled from the wine is as fine a brandy as "Cognac" has ever produced.

TO INCLUDE ADULTERANTS.

Accordingly, the doctor is communicating with the Minister of the Interior urging legislation from the Dominion Government excluding the importation of all such preparations to the country.

"You know that all comparisons are odious," and like Uncle Josh's mule, sometimes kick back. In THE CANADIAN GROCER of last week you were invited to compare the prices of the "Combine" with those of United States packers.

It is scarcely necessary to state here that the advertiser did not buy "Combine" goods last season, i.e., direct from the "Combine."

In THE CANADIAN GROCER of July 28th, page 32d, this advertiser, who poses as the true friend of the retail merchants, advertises ordinary Canadian 3's Tomatoes at $1.25 per doz. Now, as the packers from whom he purchased these Tomatoes are "independent," i.e., outside of the "Combine," and were quite free to sell their tomatoes at any price they pleased, it is only a fair supposition, judging from the tone of this advertisement that he was able to purchase his Tomatoes away under "Combine" prices, say, for the sake of argument, at 60c. per doz., which from his advertisement he wishes you to believe is a fair price.

Subtract from his selling price $1.25 per doz., his cost price, possibly, 60c. per doz, you have his profit, viz., 65c. per doz., or something over 100 per cent. "O ye gods," just think, over 100 per cent. profit! but he is no "Mercantile Buccaneer," he is the true (?) friend of the retail merchant. He loves him better than a brother, and that is why he sells tomatoes at $1.25 per doz. when the "Combine" price to you was $1.15 per doz. and the U.S. price is, according to him, 60c. per dozen. It is quite possible, however, that he paid more than 60c. per doz., but there was no reason why he should have had to pay "Combine" prices as he bought his goods from an "Independent" packer, who was free to sell to him at any price he pleased.

A word as to the comparison between prices in the United States and in Canada. It is quite true that prices were very low in the United States last season on Corn and Tomatoes, due to an excessively large pack.

About four years ago there was a great scarcity of Corn and Tomatoes in the United States and prices ruled exceedingly high—just as prices on Corn and Tomatoes in Canada have been high owing to short packs, and in consequence a large increase in cost of packing—prices were so high in the United States that it was profitable to import Tomatoes and Corn from Canada in the face of a practically prohibitive duty of 35 per cent. and 1c. per lb. The fact of this great scarcity in the United States encouraged a great many companies and individuals to start packing, with the result that during the last three years goods were packed largely in excess of the country's power to consume; and last year hundreds of packers unable to stand the strain on their finances were forced to the wall and their goods were thrown on the market at slaughter prices, and history is likely to repeat itself in Canada. A perusal of any trade paper such as "The Trade" Baltimore, "New York Journal of Commerce," "The Canner," Chicago, will corroborate the statements as above.

This season affairs in the United States look a little better. They are only having a 50 per cent. crop of Peas and prices are stiffening in consequence. To-day's prices in the United States range from 70c. to $2.20, as compared with prices in Canada, 60c. to $1.20. In Tomatoes, even with a carry over of millions of cases prices have risen to 72½c. per doz. with prospects for 80c. very shortly (Vide N.Y. Journal of Commerce). Bear in mind these United States prices are to the Wholesale Trade, whereas the Canadian prices are to the retail trade.

It is true that Corn sold at very low prices last season in the United States, but a great deal of this cheap Corn was common Field Corn. Best quality of Maine Corn sold right along at from 90c. to $1.00 per doz F.O.B., and this Maine Corn is not a whit better than any of the Canadian Canners standard brands such as Aylmer, Little Chief, Delhi, etc. We know this for a fact as we have samples of this fancy Maine Corn in our offices and have made careful comparisons.

In many lines, gal. Apples, Cherries, etc., prices are very much higher in the United States than in Canada.

Again, the advertiser makes anot her mis-statement, through ignorance or with a desire to mislead. He states that labor and cost of materials are cheaper in Canada than in the U.S. Take the price of fresh Tomatoes: a reference to the Baltimore "Trade" of July will show that in Maryland and other large tomato centres, tomatoes have been contracted at from 15c. to 18c. per bushel, as against 25c. per bushel in Canada. This makes an extra cost to Canadian packers of at least 15c. per case, not even taking into consideration the larger number of cans per bushel in the U.S., due to slack filling.

We hope that we have succeeded in showing how deliberately misleading some advertisements are. The policy of the Canadian Canners, Limited, will continue to be to pack the very highest quality of goods at low prices, but if crops are short it is only reasonable to expect higher prices than when they are plentiful. Demand and supply regulate prices in everything and everywhere, some advertisers to the contrary notwithstanding.

Remember that practically all of our processors have had nearly a quarter of a century's experience in canning. There is nothing experimental about our plants Quality of goods is guaranteed.

Canadian Canners, Limited.

ADVICE TO YOUNG CLERKS.

(By F. Farrington in Interstate Grocer.)

ALL kinds of clerks begin well; a new broom sweeps clean. But your employer will judge you by the way you wear, not by the way you start in. Lots of good starters are poor finishers.

Be prompt. One of the first things for a man to learn if he expects to be a business man is the necessity for promptness. Tardiness may do in swell society, but it won't do in business.

There's a right way to do everything. You probably will do most things the wrong way first. When you do find out the right way, remember it.

Keep busy. As long as there is a bit of dirt in sight, you have no excuse for being idle. You have no excuse for being idle anyway. There are a thousand things to do without waiting to be told.

Don't get the notion in your head that most of the old-fashioned, fundamental rules are exploded theories, and that you have a lot of new ideas that are going to revolutionize business. Revolutions are not so easily started, and many of them end in smoke anyway.

Be a man. Now that you have started in business life, just drop out the fool boy tricks that are a nuisance to everybody but boys. Take your job seriously, but don't be gloomy and solemn.

Do little things with the same degree of care that you use in the more important things. If you have ideas, don't be afraid to suggest them to the boss, but think them over a little and weed out the nonsense first.

Find out where things are. Keep looking over the stock until you know just where to get whatever is asked for. That is one of the first ways to make yourself valuable; be able to wait on trade without keeping them waiting.

Keeping things in their places is more than necessary. It will enable the buyer to know what to buy and the seller to know what to sell. Don't leave things out of place a minute longer than is necessary.

Be affable and courteous. Be polite to the ladies and to everyone else. Don't hurry your customers. Make them feel that you have time enough to get them anything that they want and to show them goods besides.

Hand people their change or packages. Don't lay the money down somewhere in their vicinity for them to pick up.

Make your packages neat. Make them conspicuous for their neatness.

Don't you make a single sale that you are not absolutely positive you are allowed to make, and then be positive that you are right before you make it. Get into the habit of being right the first thing.

Don't be cocksure. Just make up your mind that you don't know a thing—that you probably don't even suspect anything. Few men get over the cocksure period before thirty. You might try to be an exception.

You are liable to be called to wait upon very particular people at any moment. Always appear as neat as possible to customers.

Don't wear a chip on your shoulder. A good many people will be impertinent to you, but you can't afford to resent it. Be above getting angry when customers show their ill breeding.

The proprietor wants you to draw to the store all the trade you can but that does not mean that he wants your friends to get into the habit of loafing there. Loafing is the bane of many a store. Do all you can to keep it from hurting yours.

Identify yourself with the store to the extent of keeping up the same interest in the business that you would if it were your own.

Be honest with yourself and you will be honest with everybody else. Never compromise when it is a question of honesty. Keep the difference between "yours" and "mine" firmly fixed in your mind.

Don't slouch around. Don't sit on the counters and don't act as if your backbone was rubber. Be erect and alert.

You may think that it is none of the boss's business what you do outside of store hours. You are mistaken. It is very much his business, though he probably will not say a great deal about it. The first intimation you are likely to get of his being interested will be an invitation to look for a new job.

Leave alcoholic drinks alone. A resolution to that effect admits of no possible qualification or exception.

Take pains with the children. They very soon grow up and children are most discriminating customers that come into a store. They know every time when they are treated well and they report things at home.

Your salary is small, but you aren't worth much; in fact, the boss is taking some chances in keeping you at all, and it won't be wise for you to discount your future wages. Keep down expenses and then your creditors won't be asking your employer to help them collect their bills against you.

If your boss is the right sort he will raise your wages sooner than he said he would—if you are worth the raise. Better be worth it.

When you set out to do a thing, do it! Don't be a quitter. Be thorough.

Don't hang around the door of the store, either inside or outside. Don't be a sign telling people that there's nothing doing.

Keep close watch of the advertising that the store is doing. Read it carefully and know what to expect customers so call for.

Try your own hand at ad. writing. The employe who can write ads. is always in request.

WILL CHANGE FISCAL YEAR.

The Government have decided to change the fiscal year of the Dominion, so that instead of the Federal accounts, trade statistics, etc., being calculated each year up to the end of June, they will be made up at the end of March. The general opinion is that the beginning of Spring is a better time to open the fiscal year than the present date, especially from the point of view of trade returns. The change to the first of April will allow of the Department's reports being printed in time for Parliament to meet in October or November, beginning with 1906.

REVIVAL OF SUGAR INDUSTRY.

A report from G. E. Burke, Canadian agent in Jamaica, states that there is a revival of the sugar industry in the island. Hundreds of small cane mills are being imported from the United States. Mr. Burke urges Canadian merchants to get after this business. He also recommends box shook manufacturers in Canada to get a move on to secure the control of the market for shooks for orange and pineapple boxes.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Special Report from the Winnipeg Office of THE CANADIAN GROCER.

Quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, August 3rd, 1905.

WITH the most cheering crop reports in years from all parts of the wheat belt, the western wholesale and retail trade are disposed to be very optimistic. It is hoped that with the aid of a bumper crop and good prices it will be possible to relieve the credit burden very materially, and there is a strong impression abroad that the wholesale houses will make a determined and concerted effort this Fall to bring collections up to date. This will provide a good excuse for the retailers to insist on the payment of all their accounts, and, in fact, will make it necessary for them to do so.

Business this week continues very brisk, many lines of hot weather goods, such as lime juice and canned goods for picnics, being in exceptionally brisk demand. Sugar is still maintained at the same figure as for some weeks back, but the trade will be well advanced in buying only for their immediate requirements, as further declines seem likely as soon as the heavy preserving demand is over. In foreign dried fruits the market is still very steady. The early expectations of cheap apricots are not to be realized, as apparently the crop was not so large as at first reported. Prunes are also firmer, and the advances noted last issue are being well maintained. The new season currants will be quoted at a sharp advance on last year's prices.

Sugar—Prices are still unchanged by the refineries, although prices in New York have declined. It is evident that the price here is being maintained during the season of heavy demand for canning purposes and shrewd judges of the market predict an early decline. In the meantime the trade are experiencing the heaviest demand in years. We quote:

N. S. Markets.

Halifax, N.S., Aug. 7, 1905.

TRADE continues fair, and as satisfactory as can be expected. Prices show little change since last week. Collections continue about same. The sugar market here is very firm. The advance of 10c. a hundred pounds in New York of all grades of refined sugar during the week has not yet been put into effect on the local market. The produce markets are very active. There is a good supply of all farm products on the market, and prices are fairly reasonable. Mostly all the produce marketed during the week was native grown, and in consequence the importations from Boston are slackening off.

The season for strawberries is over, and the crop turned out much better than was expected. During the week some very fine stock grown in Colchester was placed on the market, and fetched from 18 to 20c. per box. The berries were unusually large and of fine flavor. The growers of these berries annually time their fruit for market, keeping back the choicest fruit until after the heavy shipments are over, and then they can command the market and name their own price. Very few New Brunswick berries have been sold in Nova Scotia this year.

Butter is again attracting attention on the local market. The market at the present time is very firm. Receipts are limited. This is due principally to hay making. The farmers in the butter-making centres are now busily engaged in haying, and they give but little attention to butter, consequently the supply is falling off. Fine crops of hay have been harvested all over the province, the best for years. Creamery prints are quoted at 22c., boxes at 21 to 22c. and dairy 18 to 19c.

Cheese is about the same. Eggs are firm, both locally and on the island. The receipts are only a fair average.

Potatoes, new, are very high, but by the week's end the price is expected to drop. Native-grown potatoes are now coming in more freely, and of much better quality. The market is about free of old stock.

The crop of raspberries is a complete failure, owing to the dry weather of the past few weeks, and the cherry crop is also short. Gooseberries are selling at 7c. per quart, and the first blueberries of the season were marketed on Saturday, selling at 12c. per quart.

Fish—The exports of fish are only fair. Prices quoted last week are unchanged. Only light stocks are held here.

Oranges are very good. Good fruit is scarce. Retail dealers are asking from 40 to 60c. per dozen for good fruit.

The Amherst, N.S., Co-operative Society expects to have its grocery store open for business by the first of September. Stock sheets are now being circulated through the town, so that all workingmen who have not yet subscribed to the capital stock will have an opportunity of doing so.

The receipts of molasses here during the week were very heavy. The brigantеen Maggie Bell, from Barbadoes, landed 245 puncheons, 63 tierces, and 40 barrels; the briganteen Sceptre, from Antigna, 234 puncheons, 43 hogsheads, and 46 barrels; and the schooner Narka, from Porto Rico, via Lunenburg, 313 puncheons, 48 tierces, and 47 barrels.

N. B. Markets.

St. John, N.B., Aug. 9, 1905.

THERE is just fair business. One unfortunate circumstance is the shortage in logs. Owing to the light freshet this Spring a very large quantity was hung up at the head waters of the rivers. This will mean that the mills will shut down early, which will affect many people and many lines of trade. It must mean considerable to American shippers of anthracite coal. Very many, for all purposes, will use nothing but Scotch coal. It is certainly satisfactory coal, and has meant a service all the year round by the Donaldson line steamers between Glasgow and St. John. This coal was not known here before the strike. The American coal is, perhaps, never likely to regain its old position.

In grocery markets there is little of particular interest. Rice is firmly held. Spices show little change. Pepper is firmer. Fish keep at extreme figures.

Oil—In burning oil as the season changes there is increased consumptive demand; the change yet is slight. The Winter business has been quite largely booked. In lubricating oils sales begin to fall off somewhat. Paint oils are unchanged. Linseed is low but firm. Turpentine is high. In cod oil receipts are light; prices, however, are quite low.

Salt—A further cargo of some nine thousand bags of Liverpool coarse salt is about due. Prices are firmly held at slightly higher figures. Prices ex steamer are always lower than ex store; buyers should remember this. In Liverpool factory filled sales are not large. Canadian fine has a good, steady demand. There is a steady increase in the sale of 5 and 10 lb. bags in bbls.

Canned Goods—Spot tomatoes are again advanced;stocks are very light. Corn is very firm. In peas, new goods are here, and prices are much lower than they have been. Our trade carried over quite a few. Fruits have but a fair sale. Strawberries very firm. Salmon a light stock. Meats unchanged. Lobsters extremely high. Scallops are high. Clams unchanged. Oysters firm. It is reported the pack of sardines is likely to be smaller than was expected. Haddies and kippers will be limited supply.

Green Fruit—Oranges are very scarce. Lemons hold at full prices; there is a fair sale. Bananas have continued large demand. Melons keep quite high; sale is light. It is a very unsatisfactory line here. In California pears stock is good; full prices asked. Plums are very fine; prices unchanged. Peaches are firm. Very fair apples now received; price quite high. It is getting late for berries except blueberries.

Dried Fruit—Spot business is not large. Loose muscatels are scarce and hard to get; prices are quite high. There is a fair stock of seeded. New seeded will cost higher than last year. New Valencias while quoted low, are firmer; the prospect is for free sales. There will be more carried over; market was never better cleaned up. California prunes, peaches and apricots are very firmly held, all have been advanced since opening prices were named. Freshly seeded have also been advanced. Currants, spot goods are higher; the outlook is prices will rule higher than for some years. Dates, figs and peels unchanged. Evaporated rather higher. Valencia onions are freely offered; stock good and prices low.

Sugar—While prices are unchanged, the market is rather weak. Stocks are quite light, in some lines very small. Dealers only buying from hand to mouth.

Molasses—Prices are unchanged, being well maintained. In Barbadoes the stock of choice is small. There is a fair supply of fancy and quite a range in price. In Porto Rico, stock quite large; there is not as large a range in price.

Fish—Supply of fresh fish is very light. Salmon season about over. We should have some shad, but they are not to hand. Dry codfish are still at extreme figures and price quite firm. Pickled herring come to hand more freely, but are still high. Smoked herring have been slightly advanced; stocks are not large. This has been an off year for all fish except salmon and gaspereaux.

Flour, Feed and Meal—In flour there is little change. Ontarios tend easier. For a long time they were quoted quite near Manitobas, but for some weeks past have been dropping off. White oats and oatmeal are unchanged; it is thought prices will be lower. Demand is light. Cornmeal is firm at full figures. Beans are dull; there is a range in price. It seems difficult to get a definite idea.

B. C. Markets.

Vancouver, Aug. 3, 1905.

THE Customs revenue of the port of Vancouver shows a healthy increase of $34,563 for July, 1905, compared with July, 1904. The figures are: Duties, $163,698.69; other revenues, $992.43; total, $164,691.12.

Oddly, however, the total value of exports for July, 1905, from the port of Vancouver is but $231,362, while for the same month last year the exports were valued at $420,021. This decrease is not to be taken as an alarming feature, however, seeing that the total exports for the year to date show an increase over the same period of last year. It is likely also that the exports for August will greatly exceed those of August last year. The one item of lumber would account for a large part of the discrepancy as lumber charters were very dull in July.

Northern shipments have become extremely quiet, though there are still almost two weeks of the lower commodity rates of freight on the White Pass line to run. For a time there was a flurry, but it was soon over. On the other hand, it is known that very large quantities of supplies usually shipped in at this season have not come forward, so that some rush shipments late in the season are bound to come, and some of them are also equally bound to be caught in the freeze-up.

Following on the enterprise of the Great Northern in tapping the Similkameen from the south, and of the C. P. R., which has begun construction on the Spence's Bridge, Nicola branch from the main line to Nicola Lake, the owners of the charter of the Midway-Vernon Railway have become active. The well-known railway contractors, McLean Bros., have undertaken a contract to build this line, which will give railway communication to the northern part of the boundary district and furnish a close link between the rich mining camps of that section, and the equally fertile valleys of the Okanagan district. The route of the projected line is on the east side of the lake, and while it will tap Penticton at the south end of the lake, it will not cover much of the same country as that which will be traversed by the new Hill railway branch. Work is to begin at once and keep up till the line is completed, which will be a year or more. At present the road is said to be independent of both C.P.R. and Great Northern influence.

In local markets, not very much of note is transpiring. It is far from a dull season, but the movement of staples is at a minimum at this time of year. Fruit is the most active line, and in that there is abundant supply of many varieties. In groceries, staples remain unchanged and in produce the only remark is in cheese, which is somewhat stiffer in price in sympathy with a rise in Eastern Canada. Lard is also quoted a trifle higher.

In fruits, local production is now showing early varieties of apples, the yellow transparent being most prominent. It is now well developed and in liberal supply for the season; $1 per box is the ruling price. A few California apples are on the market at $2 to $2.50 per box, and pears are also freely offering at about the same prices. Apricots are in good supply now at $1 per crate. Plums are still coming from the south, the local crop being later. Raspberries are going out rapidly. The tame blackberry of the large variety, at $1.75 to $2 per crate, is taking the place of its red brother. A few, very few, late cherries offered at New Westminster market last week at $2 per crate of 20 lbs.

Lemons have run away up to $6 and $7 per crate, and the stock is apparently very small. Oranges are also quoted higher, but demand is at its lowest for this fruit. Canteloupes are plentiful on the market at low prices. Pineapples, recently arriped from Honolulu by the Australian steamer Manuka, are selling at high prices.

Peaches are in high supply from California. The price is now quoted at $1 and $1.25 per crate. The Okanagan peaches are now being shipped to the Northwest, where the bulk of the crop finds a market. Local supplies of the California varieties are plentiful and cheap enough for preserving.

In produce, butter still offers freely from local sources, and the price shows no inclination to surpass former quotations. Eggs are somewhat scarce again, the price retail for strictly fresh being 35c. per doz. The importations of case stock from the east are small for the season.

Vegetables, including cucumbers, are in plentiful supply, and the demand is very brisk. New potatoes sell now by the sack, and at prices ranging around $1 for the 100-lb. sack. Green cucumbers bring fairly good prices, and run about 40c. per dozen. Green peas bring 5c. per lb. New cauliflowers sell at 50c. per doz., while cabbages bring varying prices according to their stage of development. String beans of local growth are now in the market for the first time this season.

In flour, no change of price is marked, despite the flurried condition of the Manitoba wheat market, on which British Columbia is dependent for its flour. Wheat for feeding purposes is now $2 per ton less, being quoted from $30 to $36 per ton. Oats are selling at $32 per ton. New oats are not yet, of course, on the market. New hay is, and the crop is plentiful and of good quality this year. The price is about $12 per ton.

The Colborne creamery and butter factory at Colborne, Ont., was destroyed by fire on Aug. 7. Loss $3,500, partly covered by insurance.

Quaker Canned Beans

We are now packing this line and already have up several thousand cases, with every prospect of packing quantity enough for all requirements. The same weather conditions are prevailing as during pea-packing which is maturing the best pack of beans in quality that we ever packed. Beans, if in fine condition, are one of the finest canned articles produced ; whereas, if canned when stringy and tough, they are about the poorest article in the whole canned goods list. This is the reason we have always given special attention to this line, buying the finest seed procurable and having seedsmen constantly in touch with the growers, ordering them from farm to factory when they are in perfect condition and on arrival getting them into cans as quickly as possible, with the proper processing necessary to produce a high-class article

Four years ago we packed two thousand cases beans. This year the pack will be from twelve to fifteen thousand cases, and as it is all sold it shows that it is not a speculative pack, but one that is demanded by the Trade through the past reputation of Quaker Canned Beans.

FINANCE

THE affairs of the Equitable Life Insurance Co. have stirred up public interest in more ways than one.

In the first place, the manipulation of funds by the officers for the financing of questionable private schemes has come as a shock to the large number of policy-holders. Where the companies founded and owned banks, and where colossal organizations for promoting companies were started, the possibility of an incentive to private use of trust funds was great. The investment of the funds of a life insurance company should be in the safest place possible. Policy-holders, while they figure on getting some accrued profits on their payments, nevertheless go in primarily and almost exclusively, not for an investment, but for a protection in case of death. It is of small importance to them that a little higher per cent. of profit can be made if a greater risk is taken. The all-important thing with them is to be assured that on their death a certain minimum sum will be paid to their beneficiaries. That assurance is what the insurance company is bound to give. Yet, when the officers of a company like the Equitable indulge in wholesale stock jobbing, exploiting in such enterprises as the whisky trust, and so on, what certainty can any man have that the amount of his policy will be forthcoming? The exposure of the methods of high finance which have been going on for some months will do much to clear the atmosphere and compel the companies to travel the road of honesty and fair dealing with their members.

The second point which has come up for consideration is the whole question of mutualization. A mutual company is one in which the members share in the profits. Hitherto these profits have been allotted at the end of twenty years or when the policy fell due. "Why," it is asked, "are not these profits divided each year as they would be in any other money-making company?" That such a system is feasible is shown by the new policy now being issued by the Equitable, by which the profits are divided every five years. If all policy-holders are members of the company, as is claimed when the policy is being written, then why should they not get the benefit of the investments? The final distribution is undoubtedly small compared with the total amount which has been made through the investments and speculations with the company funds. Such questions as these will press for settlement in the near future.

The convention of the Accident Insurance Underwriters of America was held in July at the Royal Muskoka, Ontario. A large number of companies were represented. Many questions of importance to the insurance world were taken up and discussed. The address of President Lott was optimistic, but outlined several matters which needed reform. The work of the association for the coming year will be devoted largely to putting the business of accident insurance on a scientific basis.

Consequent on the death of Dr. James Thorburn, vice-president and medical director of the North American Life Assurance Co., the directors elected Sir William R. Meredith, K.C., as first vice-president, E. Gurney as second vice-president, and James Kerr Osborne as chairman of the executive committee. Michael J. Haney was elected a director, as also John N. Lake, and Dr. James D. Thorburn, the last named being appointed medical director to succeed his late father. On joining the directorate of the company, John N. Lake resigned the position of auditor, which he had occupied for a number of years, and the directors thereupon appointed H. D. Lockhart Gordon and John H. Young, chartered accountants, as auditors of the company.

NOTES ON THE HOLIDAY.

Last Fall an Englishwoman of letters was staying, as the guest of an elderly lady, at a country house in Western Massachusetts. While they were driving one afternoon they had the misfortune to meet the omnipresent automobile at a sharp turn of the road. The horses, being spirited, shied, dashing the carriage against a tree and throwing its occupants out onto the road.

The Englishwoman picked herself up uninjured, but was horrified to see her aged hostess lying on the ground unconscious. Running to a nearby farm house, she knocked for some time before she finally succeeded in bringing a sun-bonneted woman to the door.

"A lady has been hurt—thrown from a carriage. She is lying down there in the road. Can you give me some whisky for her?" cried the visitor in breathless anxiety.

"Well, no, we don't never keep no whisky," said the native-born after some deliberation. "Would the lady like a piece o' pie?"

Benedict is a New Haven man who has been eight times the father of a bouncing bounder. In the outskirts of the university city is a little town among the hills named Prospect, and last year four of the children were sent there for the Summer.

One day Benedict and his wife entertained at dinner a new acquaintance, Professor B. The Professor is a bachelor, and, like many scholarly men, rather ill at ease in society.

"What a fine little family of children you have," he began with an admiring glance at the four stay-at-homes.

"Yes, indeed," replied Benedict proudly, "and we have four more in Prospect."

The Professor blushed his astonishment.

GROWING FRUIT CROPS.

LATEST reports on the growing fruit crops of Canada indicate that apples will be a light crop, probably about 50 per cent. of last year's yield. It must not be forgotten, however, that the general scarcity will prevent any waste such as has been common for the last two years. Sales are being made at $1 to $1.25 for No. 1s and 2s on the trees. Barrels are lower in price than last year, running from 25c. in Nova Scotia to 30c. and 35c. in Ontario, but where proper arrangements have not been made early in the season prices are likely to go higher than this.

Pears will be a very light crop, scarcely enough for the local market. Blight has worked sad havoc in many orchards this year.

Plums—"Drop" and plum rot have lessened the prospect for plums to such an extent that they can be rated for a light to medium crop. The Lombard, barring rot, appears to be the only plum that stands out prominently with a fairly good yield.

Peaches show a light crop in the Essex and Kent district; a medium crop on bearing trees in the Niagara district. The market will not be overloaded.

Sweet cherries have rotted badly; sour cherries have been a medium crop, though badly infested in many cases with fruit worm. Small fruits have been a medium crop, realizing good prices.

Reports from Great Britain and the continent would indicate a light to medium crop. Reports from twenty of the largest apple-growing American States show seventeen states having a light or poor apple crop, some a failure; three, Wisconsin, Kansas and Oklahama, report the crop promising or good.

Careful estimates by correspondents place the exports from the Annapolis Valley at 200,000 barrels. The apple crop in British Columbia is below the average, but a considerable increase in the acreage will make the exports into the Northwest Territories somewhat larger than last year.

Great Britain's banana trade is increasing by leaps and bounds. Four years ago the consumption was 2,000,000 bunches. Last year 5,000,000 bunches were imported and it is estimated that this year, owing to improved transportation facilities, another million will have to be added to these figures.

The growth of the banana trade within the past five years no doubt results from the opening of new sources of supply in Jamaica, Costa Rica, and elsewhere. In the Canary Islands the value of land has increased almost incredibly. One piece of land, says an authority on the subject, was valued some years ago at 300 pesetas (a peseta being equal to about 7d English money), and now it would fetch at least 30,000 pesetas. In the parts known as the banana districts, where the bananas extend for miles, and wherever the eye rests, the land could not be bought for less than £1,000 per acre.

W. A. MacKinnon, Canadian commercial agent to Bristol, Eng., in his latest report directs the attention of the exporters to the demand for Canadian cider in Great Britain.

Two difficulties are mentioned by a local importer. The first arises in connection with the making of the cider, which is sometimes all that could be desired, but at others shows the lack of sufficient fermentation to eliminate the saccharine matter.

The second difficulty is perhaps more serious, since it is claimed that freight rates from Ontario points to Bristol are prohibitively high, as compared with similar rates from New York City. It appears that New York State makers quote f.o.b. New York City paying the rail charges to that port. An importer writes that "the freight paid per barrel amounts to six shillings and eight pence (from Ontario,) as against three shillings per barrel from New York City." It is important that quotations should be in the hands of the importers not later than mid-December, and earlier if possible.

The committee appointed by Lord Onslow to inquire into the present condition of fruit culture in Great Britain have reported in favor of the establishment of a special sub-department to deal with matters connected with the fruit industry. They recommend that the sub-department be constituted of two branches (a) a bureau of information, and (b) an experimental fruit farm.

A. McNeill, chief of the Fruit Division, Ottawa, reports an enormous loss to Canadian fruit growers every year owing to their neglect to pick fruit in a proper state of ripeness to suit the distance of transportation. Failure to cool the fruit on the farm, to ship in cold storage and to assort fruits in uniform sizes and packages is also a source of loss to Canadian fruit growers. During the present season Winnipeg merchants have in several instances refused to take Canadian fruit, preferring the American because it is better packed.

With a view to increasing the consumption of seeded raisins the Fresno Chamber of Commerce has had an analysis made of the food value of raisins. The following is the report of F. E. Twining, who was engaged to make the analysis:

"Analysis of seeded raisins. The samples were obtained from three one-pound packages as prepared for the market: Carbohydrates (sugars), 63.2 per cent.; protein, 4.8 per cent.; fiber,

.67 per cent.; fat, .6 per cent.; water, 27.58 per cent.; ash, 3.15 per cent.

"One pound of seeded raisins represents a food value equal to each of the following: Six pounds of apples; five pounds of bananas; one and one-fifth pounds of potatoes; one pound of bread; two pounds of milk; one and three-fourths pounds of fish, edible portion; seven-eighths pound of eggs; threefifths pound of beef. The chief medicinal value of raisins is in their laxative effect."

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Green Fruit.

Toronto, August 11, 1905.

THE item of chief interest in green fruit circles this week is the arrival of local plums and peaches on the market which are selling at 50c. and from 35 to 50c. per basket. As yet the quality is not particularly desirable and receipts will not be liberal until next week. The banana market is strong and it is impossible to obtain sufficient supplies to meet the requirements of the trade as yet. A decline in prices may be looked for in the near future. The late Valencia orange season is pretty nearly at an end and the Jamaica season will open up about Sept. 1. California fruit is scarce and extremely high in price. California pears are quoted this week at from $3.25 to $3.75 per box. Huckleberries are easier in price as well as raspberries. We quote:

Vegetables.

The market in vegetables is maintaining itself, and demand continues steadily upward. The slight advance noted in new potatoes, owing to temporary scarcity, has righted itself, and a firm price is now quoted of 50c. Cauliflowers have steadied themselves somewhat, and quotations range from 75c. to $1. Tomatoes are now well on the market at a steady price of 30c. to 40c. Jersey tomatoes have been crossed from our list. Green corn has also evened down to a steady 15c. Parsnips have arrived and are quoted at 40c. per doz, and are making an inviting market. We are also adding to our current quotation squash at $1.50 per doz., leeks at 50c. per doz., and a new variety of vegetable known as kohl-rabi, on the market this season for the first time.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Green Fruit.

Montreal, Aug. 9, 1905.

FRUITS continue to be in fair demand but the trade lacks in activity, according to some dealers.

Two cars of California pears arrived on Mondav and were sold as follows: No. 1 stock, from $3.25 to $3.35; No. 2 stock, $2.40 to $2.60. Two cars of peaches found buyers at from $1.25 to $1.35 per box. A few California plums sold at $2.00 to $2.20, these high prices being on account of their scarcity.

The demand has dropped for bananas, owing to prices being too high in proportion to other fruit. However, it is expected that within ten days the price will drop 25c. to 30c. lower per bunch.

Lemons continue very high and firm and of course quite scarce on the local market. Pineapples enjoy a fair demand at quotations but stocks of them are very very light.

Vegetables—The demand for vegetables is only moderate and trade generally is slack. The local stocks are very large on account of great receipts and slow sales. Home grown products arrive continually in large lots and tomatoes, specially, have arrived in such abundance that they dropped from $1 per box on Friday to 35c. on Monday. New potatoes are also in fair lots, but old ones have almost entirely disappeared. Prices are as follows:

Fresh and Cured Fish

THE SALMON SITUATION.

(Special Correspondence.)

Vancouver, August 3, 1905.

BRIEF, but heavy, has been the history of the sockeye run of 1905. Already there are indications that the bulk of the run is over, for the percentage of humpbacks, the coarser fish which follows right after the sockeye run, is very large. Of little commercial value, and hardly ranked as a salmon at all in the minds of western people, the humpback is the almost certain precursor of the end of the sockeye run. They begin to be taken in the nets towards the end of the sockeye run, and as they increase in numbers the sockeyes dwindle till they disappear.

Though not valuable, or attractive as a food article to the taste of westerners, the humpback is not to be despised. In Japan the humpback is readily bought, and for several seasons a number of British Columbia canneries have been putting up all they could catch of the ugly cross salmon. The market in Japan has been exceedingly lively since the war, and the demand is likely to grow now that the fish is well established. This year it is likely that a number of canneries will again put up humpbacks, as the sockeye pack has been so short that, despite working day and night the cans made ready are not all filled. That is presuming always that the end of the sockeye run is now in sight.

During the sockeye run the daily catches of fish have been large, both by individual fishermen with drift nets, and by the traps on Vancouver Island, and south of the international boundary. For one brief rush it was even said that the traps were taking more fish than the canneries could take care of before they spoiled. In this the trap owners of Puget Sound were said to be the chief offenders, but they strenuously deny the accusation.

Catches per boat have been averaging as high as 250 and 300 fish, while over 600 have more than once been reported for "high boat" in one night. This, at prevailing prices up to July 31,—12½c. per fish—would give the lucky fisherman and his partner a handsome return. The price was lowered according to agreement to 10c. per fish, dating from August 1.

The effectiveness of traps is amply demonstrated by the enormous catches of 40,000 and 50,000 fish, and even in some cases 60,000 for a single day. That the traps on Vancouver Island have to a certain extent checkmated those of the Puget Sound canners, is an argument in their favor, even with those who do not favor traps, and it must be admitted that they are in the majority, though most of the leading companies in the province have now traps or trap sites, and the new order has apparently become established permanently.

The total pack is hardly even estimated yet, as the work of packing is still in progress. Even in the north, where the season begins earlier than on the Fraser River, the pack cannot be given in detail, though it is known to be large. The canneries there are still working.

Halibut fishing is at its quietest at the present season. The vessels of the New England Fish Co. are now the principal ones on the banks, and both the Kingfisher and New England are in commission, the latter having been in the shipyard for some weeks being overhauled. Last month but two cargoes, both from the Kingfisher, were landed at this port.

The Western Canadian Fish Co., with wharves, warehouses and drying plant at Barnet, offer their business for sale, including the right to use the Whitman process of curing, which has been so successfully applied to halibut. Lack of capital to keep pace with the expansion of the business is the reason for selling. The company's schooner, Blakeley, is now in Behring Sea, or on her way home, with a cargo of cod.

FALSE LABELS ON SALMON.

IN his latest report to the Department of Trade and Commerce, P. B. MacNamara directs the attention of British Columbia salmon canners to the fact that considerable faking in labels of canned salmon is being practised by unscrupulous dealers in Great Britain. A large percentage of British Columbia salmon reaches the British market without labels. A large dealer buys say 10,000 cases of a most reliable canning and 10,000 cases of inferior quality and of Alaska fish. He gets authority to have printed for him the necessary labels of the best quality. Instead of affixing these labels to the latter grade he places them upon the lower grade and on the fine quality puts a fancy brand of his own. The words "packed by" are carefully eliminated from the fraudulent label, and all else remains except the quality of the contents.

The price of Alaska salmon is in the neighborhood of eighteen shillings, or $4.37, per case, whilst British Columbia in tall tins realizes twenty-five shillings, or $6.07 per case. This difference excites the cupidity of the fakir to practise his nefarious trade by substituting labels of a well-known British Columbia canning factory. Alaska salmon is thrust upon the dealers, and the lesser price asked than for genuine British Columbia, though leaving a large margin to the substitutor, helps its sale, but when the consumer tries it a few times, and finds it hard and not such as he used to get, he discontinues the use of canned salmon. Mr. MacNamara suggests as a remedy that all tins be branded with the initials of the canner.

A NEW LINE OF FISH.

It is reported that an enterprising firm have been getting up a special line of fish of the "kippered" variety to still further add to the delicacies of table and form a good appetizer at the commencement of a course meal, similar to the salted "rows" common with continental epicures.

FISH GOSSIP.

The United States Secretary of State is in St. John's, Newfoundland, this week, holding a conference with the Colonial Ministry on the Bond-Hay treaty. It is thought that certain regulations of the Bait Act will not be enforced, and that Newfoundland will be granted the advantage of the American fish markets.

MONTREAL RETAIL GROCERS MEET.

The monthly meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers Association was held as usual at 88 St. Denis street on Thursday, August 3. The event of the day was the award of prizes to the winners of the different games and contests gone through at the Cornwall picnic. The prizes were for the most beautiful and expensive.

After the distribution, the president, P. Daoust, concluded to adjourn the meeting, but the treasurer, P. Bruneau, rose up and told the members of the association that he was glad to hear Mr. P. Daoust had decided to propose himself as candidate in the coming municipal elections. Mr. Bruneau also added that he was confident all the grocers would help Mr. Daoust. This news was received with applause.

On Mr. J. A. Beaudry's advice, the meeting handed a vote of thanks to all the friendly newspapers, including The Canadian Grocer, and then adjourned.

SMALL APPLE CROP.

In the course of an interview with The Grocer this week, E. J. McIntyre, of Niagara, Ont., comments on the Ontario fruit situation as follows:

"The fruit crop of Ontario will not be an abundant one this year. The high prices that have prevailed for strawberries, raspberries, currants and cherries, indicate that the supply of earlier fruits has not equalled the demand, nor is the prospect much better for the fruits that have yet to be marketed. The yield of plums and pears is irregular, the Japanese varieties alone showing a full crop. But the yield of peaches and grapes will do much to save the situation. Wherever peaches are grown, they are abundant and of good quality, and grapes are comparatively free this year from the fungus diseases that frequently prove so destructive.

"Apples are reported to be plentiful and of good quality in the apple districts east of Toronto. West and north they are scattered and inferior; while in the Niagara District they are almost a complete failure. Upon the whole, the apple crop will be less than an average one."

FOURTH ANNUAL CONVENTION CANADIAN ASSOCIATION OF MASTER BAKERS.

FOURTH annual convention of the Canadian Association of Master Bakers was held in the City of Ottawa on August 8. About 150 members from all parts of the Dominion attended, Vancouver to Halifax being among the cities represented.

The business meetings were held in the Council Chamber, City Hall, under the presidency of Mr. A. A. Lees, Hamilton, Ont., president, and Mr. James Acton, secretary. The headquarters of the officers and committees were at the Grand Union Hotel, and Host Paisley and his staff made all comfortable. Promptly at 10.30 o'clock the members assembled in the Council Chamber, where addresses of welcome were presented by Mayor Ellis and Alderman Black, chairman of the finance committee. After suitable replies by President Lees and ex-Alderman Parnell, of London, Ont., the secretary's, treasurer's and executive committee's reports were read and passed on.

Following this an address by Prof. Harcourt, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, on "Flour," was delivered, and a discussion followed in which Mr. John Turnbull manager Nasmith Co., Limited, Toronto; Mr. Harrison, Woodstock, and Mr. J. S. Spink, of the Geo. Weston Co., Toronto, took part.

Mr. Geo. Weston's address on "The Open Shop" was a well-delivered and forcibly interesting one. Mr. Z. Hilton, of Hamilton, followed with an address on "Costs in Breadmaking in the Small Bakery."

After an adjournment for luncheon the members and their friends re-assembled at City Hall, and marched to the Parliament Buildings at 2 o'clock, which, though the session was closed, was placed open for the visitors. At 3 o'clock cars were taken for Rockliffe Ranges, and a halt made on the return trip at the Royal Shanty for refreshments. This was a most interesting affair, and the bakers saw an exhibition of breadmaking and bean cooking as conducted in the lumber camps. Photos of the delegates were taken, which no doubt will be treasured as interesting souvenirs of the trip and visit. After refreshments had been served and the guests had rested, cars were taken for Britannia Bay where a vaudeville entertainment was provided in the handsome pavilion of that lovely Summer resort.

On Wednesday, Aug. 9, reports of special committees, election of officers, and addresses by Mr. A. McGill, of the Inland Revenue Department, Mr. A. W. Carrick, Mr. A. M. Ewing, etc., were gone through with, also a drive to Experimental Farm; Chaudire Falls; Paper and Match Mills, Hull; and a ride on trolley to Aylmer Park, with dinner at Hotel Victoria, winding up with dancing.

On Thursday, Aug. 10, at 7 o'clock a.m., the entire delegates were taken by special C.P.R. train to Montreal as guests of the Ogilvie Milling Co., Limited. To President Thompson, of the Ogilvie Co., the delegates are indebted for the courtesy and pleasure of this Montreal trip. A luncheon at the Windsor, with trolley ride around the city, was included in the entertainment provided by Mr. Thompson.

Altogether, in numbers of attendance and interest taken, this is the banner convention of the C.A.M.B., and the enthusiasm and interest displayed by all augurs well for future successful gatherings.

President Lees, Secretary Acton, Treasurer Weston, and the executive officers, Messrs. A. W. Carrick, A. M. Ewing, John Turnbull and G. Whittaker, as well as that energetic and popular dough raiser, H. E. Trent, of Fleischman's Yeast, were most solicitous and active in seeing that everything was well and properly done.

The officers of the Ottawa Master Bakers' Association, G. W. Shouldis, president; B. Slinn, vice-president; R. E. Jamieson, treasurer, and J. B. Borthwick, secretary, did noble work in looking after their guests. As a hustler, President Shouldis' record will be hard to beat.

Mark Bredin was here, there and all over, and his pleasant face and hearty handshake is familiar to everybody in the baking line.

According to J. S. Larke, Canadian commercial agent, blight is reported to have ruined the potato crop in the North Island of New Zealand, and should the disease spread to the South Islands the production will not meet the home demand. It is probable there may be a market for British Columbia, as Australia is not likely to have much of a surplus for some months.

WALL PAPER

EDUCATION IN HOUSE FURNISHING.

INTERIOR decoration has within the last few months come in for a large share of attention from papers and magazines. The following extract from an American daily shows to what an extent public taste is being educated to new ideas and fine effects. The house furnishing man should not be behind the newspapers in exploiting artistic ideas:

There was once a time when matting meant a covering for the floor consisting of an unbroken succession of dark and white squares that made the floor look like a gigantic checkerboard. It was heavy and stiff and shiny, was fastened down with big double clamp tacks and bulged in nice little hillocks at stated intervals; it had a "best room" smell, strongly suggestive of horsehair furniture and big four post beds, and was always associated with long, hot Summer afternoons. Time and fashion, assisted by the Japanese, have wrought such changes that nowadays matting is one of the most satisfactory and artistic of household furnishings. The old checkerboard patterns are still to be seen and are preferred by some people, but the materials are much finer in texture and more easily handled than the old fashioned kind; the regular Japanese matting, however, is really a thing of beauty, and besides being used as a covering for floors, is put to other uses not dreamed of by the methodical housekeepers of the good old times, who put down their strips of shiny squares in May and took them up in September or October.

Japanese matting is soft and pliable, and when the strips are sewn together, as they always should be, the matting may be laid as smoothly as a carpet. For Summer use particularly there is nothing more satisfactory than this typical product of the Orient, with its light background and the big vague looking flowers done in indefinite pinks and blues and rehs, with probably only one design to the yard, thus giving an effect of space and naturally of coolness, and harmonizing well with rugs of any description. For carrying out a Japanese effect the matting is used to cover walls. It is tacked on at the top and bottom and between the widths are run strips of a contrasting color covering the seams and giving the appearance of panels. Owing to its flexibility this matting is also largely used in upholstering Summer furniture; settees and settles, porch chairs and other pieces of semi-outdoor furniture are made very attractive when covered with it.

There are many varieties of jute rugs for use in camps and bungalows and on piazzas in rather vivid shades of red and green. These are heavy and coarse and effective. The rugs made of Japanese matting, or rather the pieces of matting having completed designs similar to those on rugs, do not seem to be in very great favor now, at least, there are very few varieties to be found in the shops, but pieces of the regular stock cut the desired lengths and fringed make rugs that are equally as useful if not quite so attractive.

Another decorative fabric for which there is a growing demand and for which we are indebted to the Japanese is the grass cloth used for covering walls. This comes in all the standard colors, and is a yard wide. The general effect when on the wall is very much that of burlap, except that it is of finer weave and has almost a glossy appearance. It is made of Chinese grass, which is woven in the same manner as a loose-weave cloth or woolen goods, then a very thin coating of rice paper is pasted with infinite care on the back of the cloth to give it body, and also to make it possible to attach it to a wall, the grass cloth itself being of such a fibre that it will not hold paste.

STAUNTONS LIMITED
TORONTO

But there are other wall and floor coverings that are not essentially Japanese, though equally as beautiful. An exquisite new wall paper is called English chintz. Over a white background, which, by the way, is glazed until it is very shinny, there is scattered a most fascinating collection of old-fashioned flowers, dahlias and hollyhocks and asters in a marvelous variety of colors, but so well chosen and so effectively arranged that it makes one think not of a kaleidoscope, but of all the interesting things one has ever read about old-fashioned gardens. More bizarre and showy is a new French paper in a rose design; the background is almost invisible through the masses of most natural looking green leaves, but the few comparatively small white spots that remain give a suggestion of perspective that is remarkable, and one has a feeling that on the other side of those leaves space extends indefinitely. The roses on this unusual pattern are few and far between, and one that dropped almost to pieces adds to the originality of the design.

A MID-YEAR CALENDAR.

Stauntons Limited have opened the second half of the year by issuing to the trade a very handsome calendar running from July, 1905, to July, 1906. This kind reminder will be much appreciated by the recipients. The pages contain some telling advertising for the Staunton line of wall papers. Like all the literature of this firm, it is gotten up in fine style. The coloring is brilliant and striking and is altogether a decidedly good piece of work.

CROP REPORTS.

LATEST reports on the growing grain crops throughout Ontario indicate an exceptionally heavy crop of oats, if harvesting is not intefered with by rain; some oats have already been harvested. The acreage of Fall wheat has been decreased in most places, with an increased yield and quality very good. Some points report a little rust. Acreage of Spring wheat average with yield and quality good; also a little rust reported. Acreage and yield of barley much over last year and quality above average all over Ontario. Acreage of peas small, but prospects for a heavy yield. Quality will be good and no bugs. Corn sections report much below an average crop owing to recent wet weather. The hay crop is the heaviest in 15 years. Acreage and yield of rye small, but above the average in quality.

The crop report issued last week by the Canadian Pacific Railway leaves little room for doubt of the outcome of this season's harvest. From every section of the wheat belt in the Canadian West are reported the most encouraging opinions of the prospective yield. The wheat has reached the stage where an estimate of the yield can be made without the danger of exaggerating, and the opinion is almost unanimous that there will be twenty-five bushels of wheat harvested from each acre that is under that grain this season. This will mean that there is easily 100,000,000 bushels of wheat in the Northwest.

Cutting will be general in two weeks.

IRREGULAR SHIPMENTS.

P. B. BALL, Canadian commercial agent to Birmingham, Eng., reports that there is more or less dissatisfaction among importers of Canadian products in Great Britain, such as flour and oatmeal dealers, because shipments from Canada do not arrive more regularly. When all the ports are open, there is little reason for complaint. When navigation is getting under way in the Spring, however, things run anything but smooth. In their anxiety to make contracts to ship via Montreal, railroad agents enter into large contracts. One lot of goods may be shipped at once, and probably reach its destination in a month. But very often it happens that there is a rush of goods when a shipment from Canada may not be delivered in Great Britain under three months.

The matter is not so bad from the shipper's standpoint as it is from the purchaser's, as all goods are sold at 30 or 60 days' draft against bill of lading. When the Canadian shipper despatches his goods from say London, Toronto, or some smaller town, he gets a receipt from the station agent, and this is attached to his draft, which he sends through to the purchaser in Great Britain. It is paid at maturity, but very often it is from 30 to 60 days after before the goods arrive, thus causing a good deal of irritation.

In trying to find out the cause of these irregularities, it seems that the first goods arriving are put into the warehouses, and if the ship is filled by later arrivals, the goods first received remain behind, and new goods coming in continually may be packed on top of them, instead of there being a routine method of "first come, first served."

GRAIN BLOCKADE.

It is rumored that there may be a big grain blockade next month in the Canadian Northwest. Campbell, McLean & Co., Winnipeg, advise that frost threatened on July 31, and that Aug. 15 and 30 are the next critical periods. If these are passed the crop will be safe. It will be four weeks yet before the Northwest crops will be absolutely safe from frost and rust, although conditions on the whole are favorable.

PROMISING MARKET.

In his regular report to the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, Mr. Kittson says there is a market for $40,000,000 yearly in foodstuffs in South Africa. It is one of the largest markets in the world, and, considering the size of the population, it is not rivalled by Great Britain as a market for foodstuffs. Britain takes £5 per head, while South Africa buys from £8 to £10 per head. Not including the importations by Delagoa Bay and Biera, there was imported last year to South Africa foodstuffs valued at £8,355,300.

CEREAL NEWS.

Imports of Canadian wheat into the United States during the fiscal year 1904 amounted to 3,300,000 bushels.

It is reported that a combine of the independent cracker backers of Canada and the United States is in process of formation.

Letters patent of incorporation have been issued to the Anchor Cereal Co. The capital stock is placed at $150,000, and Winnipeg will be the chief place of business. Oak Lake parties are at the head of the company.

The wholesale warehouses of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., on St. Denis street, Montreal, were damaged by fire to the extent of $200,000 on Aug. 8.

An elevator and warehouse belonging to the Brant Milling Co., Brantford, was destroyed by fire on Aug. 6.

It is reported that upwards of 1,000,000 bushels of Winter wheat from Southern Alberta will be shipped westward this season to be ground in British Columbia mills, initiating the policy of making Vancouver a great milling centre from which supplies of flour for the Orient may be shipped.

TOBACCO CULTURE IN ITALY.

AN important change in connection with tobacco growing in Italy is contemplated, and if carried out will create a considerable opening for capital and enterprise. A few years ago the tobacco department conceded to certain firms the privilege of growing, drying, and packing Oriental qualities of tobacco for export in given areas near Tricase; the consequence was the immediate formation of groups of landowners who petitioned the Government to be allowed to do the same, not only for export, but also for home consumption. These groups have become numerous, and a committee sat in Rome recently, composed of the directors and technical advisers of the various Government tobacco establishments throughout the country, to discuss the question of allowing the entire preparation of tobaccos to be carried out by landowners, who would deliver the leaf ready for the manufactory at a given price.

TOBACCO ASHES AS AN ASSET.

As everybody knows, the ash left on burning tobacco is considerable. A ton of tobacco leaf would yield four hundred weights of ash, which represents valuable mineral constituents withdrawn from the soil which have to be replaced by abundant manuring.

On the face of it there would seem to be a fortune in store for that individual who could devise a successful means for the collection of tobacco ash, and it is a great pity that so much valuable material should forever be lost to the soil without any attempt at direct restoration being made.

NEW MEXICAN TARIFF.

The following are the tobacco schedules of the new Mexican tariff recently promulgated:

"Chewing tobacco, per legal kilo, $1.10; unmanufactured Virginia tobacco per net kilo, (50 cents gross kilo) 55 cents; unmanufactured tobacco, not otherwise specified, filling per gross kilo, $2.50; sifted or cut tobacco for cigarettes, per legal kilo, $1.70; tobacco manufactured into cigars, per legal kilo, $7.70; tobacco manufactured into cigarettes, per legal kilo, $2.20."

NEWS OF THE TRADE.

An Associated Press dispatch from Christiania, Norway, states that the Storthing has imposed an additional duty of 10 per cent on imported stemmed leaf and plug tobacco.

DO POSTERS PAY?

THE tenth annual report of the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society contains some interesting facts about the effectiveness of the outdoor advertising that does so much to mar the beauty of cities and countryside throughout the North American continent.

The scenic society sent letters to fourteen of the largest advertisers in the United States, who are credited with spending from $200,000 to $1,000,000 a year, asking them about their expenditures, the proportion spent on outdoor or poster advertising, their views as to its usefulness, and other questions along that line. The answers are highly encouraging to those who hope to live to see the day when fields and rocks and city facades will no longer be disfigured with garish notices of pills and powders. One firm, which spends from $350,000 to $500,000 a year on advertising, devotes only about 5 per cent. of this sum to outdorr advertising, and does not regard it as a favorable medium. Another firm has spent from a few hundred to several thousand dollars out of an advertising budget of $500,000 on street car and other posters, but has been disappointed in the results, and has discontinued that method. A company whose annual advertising bills amount to $800,000, reports: "Outdoor advertising is not profitable, compared with other forms unless we want to impress the name of an article on the people's minds." For that purpose the company believes a small percentage of its expenditure is useful. Officers of a company advertising to about the same extent, report that they have spent a great deal on outdoor advertising and "think some of it has paid." A company which devotes nearly $1,000,000 a year to advertising, spends nothing out of doors in the United States or Canada, but from one-third to one-half of its allotment for Cuba in that fashion, on the theory that the people there are largely illiterate, and can be reached in no other way. The general manager of a large concern reports that after experiment he has stopped outdoor advertising, and adds: "Perhaps in some new country, or with a new product, it might be profitable, but I would rather doubt it.

All this would seem to indicate that the poster inundation is likely to subside. As a new and striking bid for publicity, it naturally had great vogue, but, now that solid business men are counting the results, and finding them unsatisfactory, we may hope to see the nuisance largely abated. If sound commercial reasons supported the posters, the fight to restrict their ugliness would be most arduous; but if commerce and beauty work side by side there is good reason to hope for a gradual clearing away of these excrescences upon the landscape.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Retail Merchants' Association will hold their annual convention in Toronto on Aug. 14 and 15.

FOR CANADIAN EXPORTERS.

In view of the customs officials of the Australian Commonwealth enforcing duty upon the cost of packages and inland freight to port of shipment, the following quotation from the Commonwealth Customs Act, may be of interest to Canadian exporters:

"Goods exported to Australia from any country, but passing through another country, shall be valued for duty as if they were imported directly from such first mentioned country."

As the bulk of Canadian goods and products exported to Australia are shipped via New York, the bearing of "Clause No. 143" upon such shipments is of very great importance.

If Grocers and Their Customers knew as much as the physicians, acid vinegars would long ago have got their deserts. It is astonishing that some grocers will keep this stuff about their store. They surely would never do it if they took time to consider what is made of and how it is made. If they could realize what "picnic" lemonade, made from tartaric acid and lemon peel, is to real lemonade, they could probably realize what acid vinegar is to pure fruit vinegar. Why not have the "real" article? Golden Russet Vinegar made in three strengths. Prices proportionate.

Wasting Your Energies?

If it pays to push an article, it pays to push it to some purpose and to push more with an object of gaining permanent trade than of temporary profit. If the demand for any article stops when you stop pushing it 95 per cent. of your energy has been wasted.

You waste no energy whatever in advocating the sale of the "Griffin" Brand of Dried Fruits and the "Thistle" Brand of Canned Fish, because people who buy them once will buy them again and again. Briefly, the intrinsic merit of both these articles backs up the highest praise you can give them.

"Griffin" Brand Dried Fruits.

Seedless Raisins and Prunes. Dried Apricots, Peaches and Pears in all their original goodness. A revelation to the grocer who has been buying other Brands.

Selected with the greatest care and shipped in original boxes right from the Vineyards and Orchards on the Pacific Coast.

Look for the "Griffin" trade mark before you buy.

"Thistle" Brand Canned Fish.

Canned Haddies, Kippered Herring and Herring and Tomato Sauce. Selected, cured and packed by Captain Austin, of The Thistle Canning Co., Little River, N.S.

Absolutely clean, rich, delicate, appetizing. Prepared right at the water side where they are caught. The brand of highest quality and so recognized the world over.

THE PICKLING SEASON

Turns the thoughts toward what to "put up" and brings up the vexing Vinegar problem. There is nothing perhaps regarding which the customer must rely so implicitly on the merchant as the purchase of vinegar. A dealer can secure and hold confidence by recommending

HEINZ WHITE PICKLING VINEGAR

It is distilled from sound grain, and is, therefore, entirely free from the solid particles of vegetable matter which start fermentation in fruit vinegars. This, coupled with the fact that it has the right strength, makes it

They Cost Less Than Nothing

Literally, ALLISON COUPON BOOKS cost less than nothing. By using them a mistake is impossible, thus saving many times what we charge for them. Hence, by absolutely saving a great deal more than you pay for them, they not only cost less than nothing, but you receive a great, big premium with every book you buy.

IF A MAN WANTS CREDIT

for $10, give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book, charge him with $10, and there you are. No trouble at all. If he buys a plug of tobacco for ten cents, just tear off a ten-cent coupon—that's all. And so on for all his purchases up to limit of the book. NO PASS BOOK. NO WRITING. NO TIME LOST. NO KICKING. There are other Coupon Books, of course, but why not have the best? is the one we recognize. We want the co-operation of the retail clerks throughout the country in extending and increasing the sale of the great Fairbank specialties:

Gold Dust Washing Powder
Fairy Soap, Copco Soap
Fairbank's Glycerine-Tar Soap
Fairbank's Scouring Soap
Fairbank's Sanitary Soap

We are willing and anxious to acknowledge the service they can render us by rewarding them in direct proportion to the interest they display in pushing these goods. Our method of rewarding is "The Fairbank Plan," which is a system of couponing our specialties in such a manner that the coupons can be easily removed when the goods are sold, and giving for these coupons useful articles, the best that money can buy. Our whole aim is to give the clerks the best value we can secure.

The products embraced in "The Fairbank Plan" are easily sold because they are the best value and give the greatest satisfaction to the consumer. They increase the trade of the store and "The Fairbank Plan" rewards the dealer or his clerks for selling them.

CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS IN ENGLAND

By W. L. E.

SOME RESULTS OF THE TRIP.

WHILE pleasure was the chief object of the trip of the Manufacturers' Association to Great Britain there was at least one other which was even more important, and that was to know and be known. In other words, they wanted to learn more than they knew in regard to the industrial and commercial conditions in the Mother Land, and to unfold or reveal themselves to the people of the Mother Land.

I cannot speak from the book. The best I can do is to be guided by impressions. From these I gather that the trip was just as successful from what might be termed its material aspect as it was from the pleasure seeing object. We learned a great deal, and probably a great deal more than any of us yet realize.

A few days before we left Canada a friend of mine, who takes a pessimistic view of both industrial and military conditions in Great Britain, remarked to me: "England is one of the decaying nations." While none of us had imbibed such ultra pessimism as this, most of us had become possessed of the idea that she was lagging behind some of the nations in the industrial arts. I have not been authorized to speak for our party, but I have no hesitation in saying that, from what I have gathered from personal conversation with a great many of them, our preconceived opinions had very few facts upon which to rest.

Great Britain is by no means a decaying nation. She is the mother of manufacturing industries, as well as of parliaments. As such she is getting old; in fact, is old. And just the same as it is with individuals who are getting up in years, she is somewhat set in her ways. She is conservative. But in nations age is not always accompanied by decay. Where the nation is composed of the right kind of people the concomitant of age is maturity. Great Britain is maturing rather than decaying. In some respects industrially Great Britain is rather out of date, but in others she is in advance of her competitors. And what was most obvious to us was the fact that Great Britain is certainly becoming wide-awake in regard to those things in which she was supposed to be somewhat drowsy. We saw signs of this everywhere we went. The manufacturers are not only anxious to do business, but they are equally anxious to do it on the most approved methods, and to manufacture their goods not only with the best and most improved machinery, but to make them of the best quality. They desire quality in what they sell just as they demand quality in what they buy.

An American gentleman who has been a resident of England for some years, was recently called upon to respond to a toast at a banquet in London. During his remarks he referred to the prejudices that existed in the minds of some people in regard to Great Britain, and added: "A New York woman, before starting on a visit to a friend in California, insisted, in spite of protests, in taking an eastern lily plant with her as a present to her hostess. On the train a porter was persuaded to take it under his special care and water it. As she neared her destination she was surprised to see field after field devoted to the cultivation of the eastern lilies. Angered at last by what she saw she suddenly seized her hitherto much-loved lily and flung it from the window. The highways and byways of England," concluded the American gentleman, "are strewn with the prejudices of Americans who visit this country." The Canadians who visited Great Britain with the Manufacturers' Association were not altogether free from prejudice, but the highways and byways of the Mother Country are strewn with those they did carry over with them, and British hospitality has buried them deeply. At any rate, they have been dissipated in many instances.

The business men of Great Britain are no doubt wiser than they were in regard to Canada as a result of the visit of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. But while they may have learned something, we have learned a great deal more. Ours has undoubtedly been the chief gain. Knowledge is seeing a thing from the right point of view, and thus understanding it. By our visit to Great Britain we have learned to look at some things from the standpoint of the British business man. As a result we shall be more disposed in some respects, at least, to sympathize where we, perhaps, were more disposed to criticize. "Sympathy makes us wondrous kind." And all the sympathy has not been created on one side, either. The result, therefore, of the trip of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association to Great Britain has been beneficial from both a national and commercial standpoint, and it is to be hoped that meddling and theoretical politicians will do nothing to disturb it. Commercial problems can usually be settled by business men, and if some of the questions which are now demanding attention within the Empire were delegated to business men for consideration a solution would speedily be found.

Speaking of imperial matters, I am reminded of an error in a London paper's report of one of President George's speeches, which, although confined to one word, completely misrepresents his views. A Montreal paper, not knowing of the error, was thereby led to rather severely criticize Mr. George. The error was in making Mr. George say that the manufacturers of Canada did not want a "protective" tariff against the Mother Country. What he said was that they did not want a "prohibitive" tariff against the Mother Country—quite a different thing.

AN APPRECIATION.

At a meeting of the Federation of the Retail Dealers of Montreal on July 21, 1905, the following resolution was passed:

"That the officers and members of the Federation of the Retail Dealers of the City of Montreal, who led the fight against Trading Stamps, wish to express their gratitude to the editors of The Canadian Grocer for the strong help they have given to the question and for the interest they have constantly shown in seconding our efforts."

The Canadian National Exhibition

ONCE more the Canadian National Exhibition, or the Fair, as the citizens of Toronto affectionately call it, is approaching. On August 26 the gates will be thrown open on what is the biggest annual exhibition on the continent. It may fairly be predicted that 1905 will eclipse all others in the magnitude of the undertaking, and the excellence of the attractions. The fine set of buildings which are now grouped together in Exhibition Park are ready for service, and the staff of officials, under the efficient management of Mr. J. O. Orr, are speedily completing arrangements for the entertainment of the coming crowds.

The Attendance.

The ordinary person does not stop to consider the greatness of the numbers of visitors to Toronto during the two weeks that the Exhibition is in progress. When we say that a hundred thousand or more a day visit the grounds during the fortnight, we express more than appears on the surface. One hundred thousand inquiring people from all over the country, though chiefly from Ontario, coming to Toronto each day and returning to disseminate the information they have received throughout their town or village, are a mighty educative force. Every side of human activity is exemplified in the many buildings and departments which go to make up the whole.

Educational Features.

Before referring to the attractions in the way of amusements, mention should be made of the exhibits, which form the essential part of the Exhibition. The progress of manufactures at home and abroad, the development of science and art, and the improvement in farm produce and live stock, are all represented in their highest form. The farmer carries home with him ideas on modern and time-saving farm implements, and information on breeds and relative qualities of live stock. Above all, he carries away with him higher ideals of excellence. Having seen the best that the country can produce, he is fired with the ambition to equal or better that showing. So with manufacturers. They see the best that human ingenuity has devised, and they straightway speculate on the possibility of applying what they have seen to their own business. More than anyone else, the business man is benefitted by such an exhibition. He sees the goods which he sells in course of manufacture in the Process of Manufacture Building, and he is fitted as never before to buy intelligently and to sell intelligently, because he knows whereof he is talking.

Exhibit of Manufactures.

That manufacturers recognize Canada as being the country of the future is shown by the large demand for floor space in the Manufacturers' Building. Never has there been such a complete display of manufactures as there will be this year. The big building, with its 165,000 square feet of floor space, will be taxed to its uttermost capacity. The Canadian manufacturers, fresh from their triumphs in the Old Country, are preparing to take the home market by storm. Canada has passed the stage of being purely an agricultural country, and the countless specimens of manufactured goods which will be on exhibition will be a telling proof of the progress of manufacturers here.

The Liberal Arts.

Nor are the finer elements of modern civilization at all backward. From simple and humble beginnings the arts and sciences have advanced in Canada till now we have a sturdy Canadian art. Sculpture and paintings will be on exhibition in the spacious new art gallery, which is admirably located for securing the best effects. Domestic art in needle work and fancy work has improved each year in skillfulness and beauty, and the prospects are that the showing this year will be of the highest order.

THE LIVE STOCK ARENA—Canadian National Exhibition.

Special Attractions.

The management is to be congratulated on the excellence of its special attractions. The two features which will outrank all else in attractiveness will be the magnificent art exhibit, including the wonderfully fine painting by Edwin Abbey of the Coronation of King Edward VII. (which was painted at the command of the King, and is worthy of the magnificent subject of which it treats) and the Irish Guards' Band.

Other paintings and art creations of exceptional merit have been loaned by the Corporation of London, the Government of France, the South Kensington Museum, and Lord Strathcona. The collection loaned from the South Kensington Museum will comprise ten or twelve cases of the richest art treasures in the world, covering a period extending over five or six centuries. No other collection in existence probably rivals this in interest and historical value. Gathered from the plate of the great English, Scotch and Irish universities, the wealth and ancient corporations of London (such as the Barbers' Surgeons' Co., the Broderers Co., the Clothworkers' and Goldsmiths' Companies, etc.) and a number of provincial corporations, the whole history of English silver-working, from the earliest times to the present day, will be traceable, while some extraordinary mosaic work, textiles of the middle ages, ivories of the first century and pottery of the sixteenth century down to the present day are also included.

THE IRISH GUARDS' BAND—Canadian National Exhibition.

The Irish Guards' Band.

What is known as the finest military musical organization in the Empire will give two concerts daily on the grounds. The Irish Guards are a battalion who need no introduction to the public. The Irish Guards' Band has been awarded the palm for excellence by all the highest musical authorities in Great Britain, and is the favorite household band of His Majesty the King, who, whenever possible, selects it to play at the royal levees, drawing rooms and dinners, in fact on all state occasions. It was with much difficulty, and only as a special favor to Canada, that His Majesty would consent to the band leaving British shores, permission to extend the visit to the States being positively refused. It will be remembered that the Irish Guards, of whom Field Marshal Lord Roberts, V.C., is honorary colonel, were organized in the final years of Her Most Gracious Majesty the late Queen Victoria, in commemoration of Her Majesty's enthusiastic reception on her last visit to Ireland. It is the only regiment in all the Empire recruiting for which is confined to one nationality, one of the requirements being that the member shall be an Irishman or born of Irish parents.

Reduced Railway Rates.

Reduced rates will be in force on all Canadian railways. Besides the regular reduction, which makes a trip to Ontario's capital an inexpensive outing, there will be a number of one-day special excursions at exceptionally low rates. In Toronto seventy new street cars have been added for the Exhibition crowds, so that the over-crowded cars which have been objectionable in previous years will be eliminated. The places of amusement within the city iteslf are increasing each year in numbers and interest. The island, to which there is easy access by the ferry boats, provides fine parks and other attractions. Hanlan's Point has all the amusements of a Summer garden, while Centre Island is an ideal resting place, with its pavilions, lagoons and walks. At both ends of the city there are large public parks, which are readily accessible by street car. For those who enjoy sports there will be lacrosse and baseball matches. It would be impossible to choose a place where such a complete list of attractions are at the disposal of the tourist.

About Your Business.

Merchants who come to Toronto during Exhibition will want to combine some business with their pleasure. The afternoons and evenings may well be devoted to sight seeing, leaving the mornings free for visiting the wholesale houses. We again cordially invite the grocerymen of the country to make the offices of The Canadian Grocer their headquarters, while in the city. You can have your mail directed here and facilities are provided for letter-writing and telephoning. If you have a friend to meet, or an appointment to keep, you will find no more central or suitable place than at 10 Front street east, just off Yonge.

FORMALIN AS A FLY POISON.

It is said that formalin is a capital poison for flies. It seems that a weak solution of formalin left about in a saucer will attract and poison flies readily. The liquid is rendered somewhat more attractive if a little sugar is added. The flies readily sip the liquid, and only get a few feet away from the vessel when they fall dead.

IT is easy to buy canned PEAS now at cost; also very easy to criticise them, but it takes a lot of study and hard work to produce a satisfactory canned pea. We hope that every Packer is producing the best pea possible. This will do more to increase the consumption than the cost prices. We are doing our best to make the "AUTUMN LEAF BRAND" just right. We have a few thousand cases more of the medium grade peas to offer at prices that will forever eliminate the Hawker in that line.

He has a thorough technical knowledge as well as the practical experience of all these years, with and at the head of some of the oldest and largest Packers in the U.S., as well as with the most important Packer in Canada. TORONTO BRANCH C.M.A.

AN increase of 102 in membership for the year was reported at the annual meeting of the Toronto branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, held on August 10. The membership now comprises 497 manufacturers, and the influence of the body is growing in proportion to its increasing size.

The report of Chairman Donald who, by the way, was until lately the manager of the Pure Gold Mfg Co., was a painstaking and important document, dealing with many questions of first importance to the City of Toronto. Under the heads: "The Trunk Sewer," "Straightening of the Don," "The Radial Railway," "Front Street Expropriation," "The City Beautiful," Mr. Donald touched upon civic affairs and arraigned the city authorities on several charges of laxity and dilatoriness. The delay in providing better sewage disposal and the delay in straightening out the Don were subjects of comment.

With regard to the question of radials, he said: "The matter of incoming radial railways is very important, and no opportunity should be lost on encouraging these desirable adjuncts to modern city and suburban life. At the same time no greedy corporation should by any means obtain rights which eventually are to be used as a lever to render more valuable interests which at present are clearly defined."

He blamed all concerned for the delay in securing the Front street station site. It was a shame, he said, that a year and a half should pass without some tangible results. Could not some method be evolved whereby this reproach of delay in bridges, wharves, shelters and every convenience, could be done away with?

He was pleased to say that the transmission lines from Niagara were now complete, and that power would be available in a few months.

The report was made that nothing had been accomplished as yet in regard to securing special arrangements with the railways for traders' weekly excursions to Toronto, similar to those prevailing in the States.

Regarding the parliamentary inquiry with respect to the telephone service of Canada, the branch expressed itself as follows: That municipalities should have an absolute right to control the placing of wires within the city. That the trunk telephone lines should be owned by the Government. That all citizens resident in a municipality in which any company has established a telephone system, and who are prepared to pay for services, should be provided with a telephone at whatever rate is established, and the same rate shall apply to all. That all telephone companies should have equal rights in all railway stations.

The branch had passed resolutions approving of the immediate construction of a trunk sewer in Toronto, requesting the Government to put express companies under the jurisdiction of the Railway Commission, and approving of the $300,000 by-law for improvements to the Toronto Exhibition.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Chairman, W. B. Tindall; vice-chairman, John Firstbrook; committee, H. W. Beatty, S. B. Brush, C. N. Candee, J. W. Cowan, P. W. Ellis, Ed. J. Freyseng, S. R. Hart, A. Jephcott, J. S. King, J. S. McKinnon, R. E. Menzie, W. H. D. Miller, John Northway, A. S. Rogers, Frank A. Rolph.

A HINT.

A common error in advertising is to stop if one doesn't get immediate returns, or because "business is dull." In the first case, one is disappointed without reason, for not sufficient time has been given to yield results. Those who look for prompt returns must think that the public has been just waiting for their advertisements to appear, and directly will make a headlong rush for the goods advertised. Stopping one's advertisement in dull times only helps to increase the dullness. Trade would be brisker, says an American paper, if everyone kept on trying to make it brisker.

FETE CHAMPETRE.

Three thousand people attended the Montreal retail grocery clerks' "fete champetre" at Mikado Park last Sunday, Aug. 13. It proved to be a success from beginning to end. All the games, postponed at the Plattsburg excursion and later on at Lariviere Park, were run off. In the evening a concert, fireworks and other performances were given, but the crowd was attracted there specially by a balloon ascension, which took place in the afternoon. The clerks declare themselves satisfied with the result and are now back hard at work until next year's outing. The prizes won at the different games will be distributed on Sunday, Aug. 20, at the meeting hall, 149 Berri street.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Aug. 17, 1905.

THE situation on cheese on this side of the Atlantic is certainly remarkably firm and steady, in spite of the most "bearish" reports from all the markets in the United Kingdom; in fact, if our friends, the British importers, would give us the slightest backing or encouragement, we would be ready for another sharp advance, but we are told that prices are too high and have been too high all the season. Prices are beyond the six-penny cut, which will curtail consumption, and there are many other expressions of opinion and arguments why prices should decline.

Against this, what do we actually find? For some time buyers here have made agreements not to pay above a certain price at country points, with the result that some party outside of such agreement raised this price of the combination and, not to lose his "regulars," every buyer fell in line and paid the advanced price, which clearly demonstrates that the goods are wanted, notwithstanding the discouraging reports and "bear" arguments.

The fact is that the new season started with bare boards, and no, or hardly any, stocks left over from last season. Last season's make, together with a considerable balance from the previous season's make, was consumed, and new goods had to be provided for the current consumption. The production was cut short by an increased make of butter and early shrinkage in the flow of milk, caused by hot weather conditions. Shipments so far this season are in excess of last year's shipments to date, while the receipts show a decrease as compared with last year, and stocks, both here and in the United Kingdom, are considerably less than at this time last year. These being all acknowledged facts, how could it be possible to expect a low level of prices when it is further conceded that trade conditions in Great Britain are much improved over those of last year?

Prices are high, but at the moment there is nothing in sight to warrant any decline, and only a slightly increased demand would cause a further advance. Farmers, getting high prices for their milk, do everything in their power to produce as much milk as they possibly can by extra feeding, but the extreme hot weather this season has seriously interfered with the condition of the cows as well as with the quality of their natural Summer feed, as the grass is lacking in nourishment and in spite of extra feeding, the flow of milk is shrinking every week. If there were a prospect of a large production during the Fall or Autumn this year the situation might be considered dangerous, but, so far at least, there is no such prospect, and it seems inevitable that high prices will prevail for the balance of the season.

In butter, the situation is very similar, prices are too high to induce free buying, but the supplies on British markets are not sufficient for the demand and, as our prices are now considerably below the price of Danish butter, there will continue to be a demand for our product, as the quality of our butter is good enough for the palate of the not over fastidious consumer. In fact, the average consumer in the United Kingdom will notice no difference between our butter and the Danish product and at a reduction of one penny per pound will take the cheaper article and be well satisfied.

Dairy butter continues to be very scarce and consequently unreasonably high in price. Meanwhile, however, as long as the present conditions in Russia exist, there seems to be no chance for a change to lower prices.

PRESERVATIVES IN FOODSTUFFS.

AT a recent meeting of the Society of Chemical Industry in Ottawa, A. McGill, of the Inland Revenue Department, read a comprehensive paper on preservatives in foodstuffs. A few of Mr. McGill's ideas are reproduced for the information of readers of The Grocer as follows:

"It is the nature of food material to be perishable; and any means of keeping it in sound condition, while not interfering with its digestibility and nourishing qualities, should be welcomed by everyone. Certain methods of preserving food have been recognized so long and employed so largely, that the safety of using them scarcely comes into question. Such are refrigeration, hermetical sealing in vacuo, the use of common salt, or vinegar, sugar, alcohol; the smoking of meats, etc. When a new thing like borax or formalin or salicylic acid is offered to the public, it should be required to demonstrate the harmlessness of such articles. The onus of proof of harmlessness should rest upon the user of any new preservative.

"It will be conceded by anyone who reads the subject carefully, that the balance of evidence is decidedly against the use of any preservative in food. At the same time it must be granted that there are degrees of danger to health among the chemical substances which find favor as preservatives among manufacturers and vendors of food; and it may be that in certain cases less harm may result from the preservative than would result from deterioration of the foodstuff, were this kept for a length of time without an antiseptic. In order to decide the question as to whether, in certain cases, such as long voyages, traveling in out-of-the-way regions, supplying stores to soldiers on the march, mining camps, etc., as well as in the distribution of foodstuffs to the great centres of population, far removed from the places where such foods are produced, it might not be preferable to employ chemical preservatives rather than consume food which had suffered natural decomposition or pay the high prices necessitated by quick transit, or such costly methods as cold storage, hermetical sealing, etc., it is evident that experiment must determine the extent of the injury to health which results from the use of food preserved from decomposition by antiseptic chemicals.

"In regard to legistation, prohibition of the use of chemical preservatives and aniline dye stuffs as coloring agents for liquors is almost universal, while the employment of all foreign coloring matter is often prohibited. The use of chemical preservatives and foreign coloring matter with beer is usually prohibited. The sale of foods containing saccharin, sucrol, and similar preparations is prohibited in Belgium, France, Germany, Italy and Roumania. The importation of saccharin, except for medicinal use and under prescribed conditions, is prohibited by Belgium and Greece. All countries permit the dyeing of confections and similar articles which are themselves colorless, but are customarily colored artificially. Belgium permits mustard to be colored artificially when properly labelled. Salicylic acid and boric acid have been used so much more commonly than other preservatives, that legislation is usually directed against them, whilst local bodies often extend the prohibitions to benzoic acid and other substances as they come into use. The sale of foods containing preservatives is prohibited in Austria, France, Hungary and Roumania, and that of beverages containing preservatives in Belgium, German and Switzerland. The addition of salicylic acid to food is prohibited in France. Holland does not permit the sale of beer containing salicylic acid, and Spain forbids its addition to wine. Italy permits the addition of 0.2 per cent. of boric acid to butter, but forbids the use of other preservatives.

"Canada is behind other countries in this matter; and, with the simple exception of salicylic acid in potable liquors, tion of salicylic acid in portable liquors, which is specifically forbidden, leaves ths onus of proving the harmfulness of any preservative upon the complainant. There can be little doubt, however, that our courts would find a verdict in accordance with the recommendations of the English Parliamentary Committee of 1901."

The British Government, through Lord Strathcona, is sending to Canada forms of tender for supplying Malta and Gozo with fresh meat.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

TORONTO.

Provisions—The market in provisions has been on a fairly steady basis during the past week. Hogs have been coming in slowly, scarcely sufficient to keep demand satisfied; heavy mess pork has stiffened to a slight advance. Lard products all through have advanced about 1-2c., and are still firming up. Beef is slow to hand, but quite sufficient to meet consumption, with somewhat weakening prices.

Cheese—The home market in cheese is falling to a steady basis, and prices are consequently ruling more normal. The foreign market has been slower, the high prices ruling at recent date, showed advance on those ruling on other side, so that European buyers favored the U. S. on that account, but with steadier prices, trade is expected to again advance. Arrivals are not coming to hand readily enough to warrant revised quotations. We quote:

Provisions—Provision market steady. Live hogs scarce and tone of market strong, with sellers asking $7.50 to $7.75 per 100 lbs. for selected lots. Packers disinclined to pay these prices, market not warranting these figures. The recent advance in foreign markets, even will not permit of paying these prices. Packers figures are $7.00 to $7.25. No change in abattoir fresh killed dressed hogs. Demand limited at $9.75 to $10 per 100 lbs. Trade in smoked meats, bacon and hams fairly good and prices firm.

Butter—Better feeling in market this week. Inquiries continue from abroad and though little has been doing in export lately, English buyers are forced to buy now on account of the high price of Danish butter, and scarcity of the Russian. The local demand is strong and prices are firm. No decline of any figure is looked forward to, owing to the singular condition prevailing in Great Britain.

Eggs—Eggs are steady with receipts only moderate. Straight receipts, 17c. to 17 1-2c., and selected 20c. Firmness is the characteristic feature of the market. Local requirements are heavy and good prices obtained by holders.

Cheese—Cheese, which weakened slightly during latter part of week, is firm again at 11c. to 11 1-8c. for Ontario, and 10 7-8c. for townships and 10 5-8c. to 10 3-4c. for Quebec. An attempt was made by several large dealers to break the price at the cheese board, but it failed and the prices are firm as above.

NEWS OF THE TRADE.

Hamelin Bros. & Co., Arcola, Assa., are installing a butter department in the basement of their store.

A company has been organized in Winnipeg to establish a large meat canning factory on the plan of Armour's, Chicago. The capital stock is half a million dollars.

Four or five millions sterling are about to be spent by the British Government on increased shipping and cargo accommodation at the Liverpool docks. Extra facilities for cold storage of Canadian products will also be provided at Liverpool.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS

SOME interest is being taken just now in the new set of rules which is to govern the use of freight cars and charges therefor. The Canadian car service bureau has prepared a new set of rules and these have been submitted to the Railway Commission for approval. For some time there have been numerous complaints and grievances aired before the commission respecting delays in transportation, demurrage, etc., and at a meeting of the parties interested, held in Montreal, the matter was discussed and the agreement reached. All the leading railways and manufacturers' and millers' associations were represented, while some of the commission officials were present. The regulations for which approval is now sought are much more liberal to shippers than those heretofore in vogue, and are calculated to remove the cause of numerous complaints.

New freight engines of the largest type, built by the company's works in Montreal, are being sent to Fort William to meet the expected heavy traffic in the Autumn. The wharfage rates in the harbor of Montreal have been reduced by fifty per cent. as compared with what they were some years ago. Montreal shipping men claim that on many articles the rates are still too high in comparison with what they are in other ports, the result being that in certain lines business is driven away from the port. The shipping federation have recently addressed a communication on the subject to Ottawa, and this will later come up before the Harbor Commissioners.

The commissioners are willing to reduce the rates or even take off the wharfage rates provided that the Ottawa Government will take the responsibility.

Regarding the reported shortage of cars on the line of the C.P.R., Mr. McNicol said: "There are more cars and there is more line out there than ever before."

These rates are for general information only, and are subject to change at any time without notice; it is therefore important that all contracts must be reported by wire and confirmation obtained before closing with shippers, and unless specifically stated to be prompt shipment, or shipped within ten days after date of contract from the west.

The above rates are exchanged on basis of $4.80 to £1 Stg., excepting that when freight is prepaid, the ocean proportion of the through rate must be collected on basis of $4.86 to the pound sterling.

If freight is offered other than specified above, on which steamship connections are accustomed to quote a weight or measurement rate at their option, prompt replies will be facilitated by giving, when applying for rate, the relative weight and measurement of the merchandise.

It is understood that when reporting Sack Flour engagements, a carload is considered 28,000 lbs.

It is also important that shipper's name be given for every engagement made.

* Rates quoted in cents are per 100 lbs. † Per 2240 lbs, No Primage via Montreal.

THE ORIGIN OF GELATINE.

GELATINE — what is it? — is the question often raised by the purchaser of this very useful article. The housewife uses it—the clerk sells it—the grocer buys it—and the commercial man handles it, but few can answer the question when asked, what is it! Well, gelatine is really animal glutin, pure and simple, and when properly prepared, becomes a very useful article of diet. It forms a convenient base for such things as jellies, and a multitude of dainty and attractive confections, and has the advantage of being a valuable nutrient, and extremely easy of assimilation, and is therefore an indispensible adjunct to household economy.

Pure gelatine is transparent, usually in thin plates, of a yellowish-white color, it has neither taste, nor smell, and is neutral to vegetable color. In contact with cold water, it swells up, but does not dissolve, and will absorb from 5 to 10 times its weight in water, according to circumstances and length of immersion.

It contains about 50 per cent. carbon, 6.6 hydrogen, 18.4 nitrogen and in pure state no sulphur. In hot water it is easily soluble, but quickly "sets" again when cooled.

Gelatine, although an animal product, does not exist in the form known to the commercial world, but is obtained by treating certain animal substances, such as bones, skins, tendrones, etc., with dilute hydrochloric acid, but chiefly the bones of oxen, calves and sheep. The hydrochloric acid dissolves the mineral constituents, and leaves the bone cartilage; this, when boiled for a long time with water, dissolves and forms gelatine, which can be purified by dissolving in hot water and precipitating by alcohol. A very pure variety is obtained from the swimming-bladder of the sturgeon, and similar species of fish. Moist gelatine, exposed to the air, rapidly putrifies, the liquid becoming first acid, but afterward it gives off ammonia. Dry gelatine is unaltered by contact with air.

Impure gelatine—called glue—is prepared by a simple process of boiling down hides, horns, hoofs, and cartilage, with water under pressure, and subjecting to heat. This product, however, is employed only as an adhesive medium for such things as wood, leather, paper, etc.. and is by no wise fit for food.

Gelatine first came into prominence during the period of the Napoleonic wars, when it was found necessary to obtain a cheap and plentiful supply of food. It was originally produced in Paris and at the beginning of the nineteenth century had secured a large market.

THE CANNED GOODS SITUATION.

Editor The Canadian Grocer:

The canned goods situation for 1905 and the outlook for a large or small pack has been uppermost in the minds of all packers, as also the wholesale and retail trade of the country. The canned goods trade is growing to be an important factor and the volume of business will now reach upwards of five million dollars in the country's trade and turnover. The packing season is now well on. Strawberries, raspberries, cherries, peas and string beans have all been disappointing to the canners owing to scarcity and high prices. Peas and string beans are the most promising of the lot, and owing to a large pack last year, as well as the high prices ruling for tomatoes and corn, which checked consumption, the pack in these lines has been curtailed and prices have been marked down below the cost of production. And notwithstanding buyers do not take hold with any snap.

In the matter of the staple articles of fruit, namely, peaches, pears and plums, the orchards promise an abundant crop for all canning needs. It is to be regretted that the same cannot be said of that great staple article of fruit—apples. The staple varieties are this season a failure in the United States and Canada owing to heavy frosts in the early part of the season which injured the blossoms. In the apple-bearing districts of Nova Scotia, where the crop is usually about 600,000 barrels, the yield will not be more than 200,000 barrels; so that gallon apples will thus prove a profitable article for the export trade as well as for the home market. For the last two years these have been a glut on the market. One is reminded of the old adage that a glutted market makes provisions cheap, which, by the way, has been so strongly exemplified in the acts of the Canadian canners in their selling terms for peas.

However, the two staple commodities are yet in the ground—tomatoes and corn—and it is the opinion of the most competent judges that great disappointment will follow as to the bearing crop in the ground and volume of pack therefrom. The tomato vines never looked better, but, owing to late planting and too much moisture, they have not fruited, and will require a late and prolonging season in order to bring them to maturity. An early frost would ruin the crop. Add to this a decreased acreage, of which a large proportion is of the early varieties, which are unfit for canning purposes. The same may be said of the corn crop; in some sections it is very promising, while in others poor seed and cold nights have very much decreased the crop.

The policy of the United Canners since amalgamation has been to decrease production and advance prices. Many of the old and popular factories are closed down and many others not running full. This has afforded an excellent opportunity for the encouragement and growth of new factories. Already there are many and they have been nursed with indulgence and strengthened with the growth of years.

In the matter of prices, which is the most important factor to the community at large, the united factories are daily placing orders subject to conditions of price later on according to pack; this is anything but satisfactory to the trade. The outside, independent canner is also placing orders on the same basis, and is quite content to abide his time until final announcements are made by the large mergers. This state of affairs may go on for a short period, but the day will dawn very soon when every factory will be compelled to make known their price at an earlier period of the year and stand by it. Competition is the life of trade and expansion will take place with the growth and development of the country and will scoff at acts which have a tendency to stifle trade by unduly advancing the price of staple commodities to the consumer, inflating them to famine prices. Last season the price was set for tomatoes at $1.15 per doz. and $1.10 for corn, while our American neighbors to the south of us, with a pack of tomatoes of ten million cases, went begging at 62½c. per doz., and corn at 65c. per doz.

The policy of such extremes is sure to fail when the canners' terms for peas are cut down to 65c. per doz. with 10 per cent. off cash discount and freight paid, placing them below the cost of production. It would have been much wiser for the canners to have made a minimum of 75c. per doz. for the vegetables so that they could have reached the consumer at three cans for 25c. This would leave 10c. for the trade and 15c. for the retailer. If it was his wish to dispose of them in that manner, this would largely increase consumption and secure the market from United States competition, which of late has shown marked signs of making inroads on our market.

It is common report that orders for future delivery of tomatoes by all the packers are upwards of six hundred thousand cases, and corn on the same basis, while the crop in the ground will not pack more than from 450,000 to 500,000 cases. It would be much more prudent for the canners to act in a spirit of fairness to themselves, and for consumers at large not to adhere to extortionate prices, as it is sure to end in disaster to the canning industry of the Dominion of Canada.

TEA AT £2 A POUND.

The pick of the China tea crop is sent to Russia, and experts say that one does not know what good tea is till one has tasted the picks sent to the Muscovite. Certain qualities sell readily at £2 a pound, and they are worth it. The secret of the excellence of the Russian tea (says the Grocers' Monthly) lies in the fact that it is conveyed from the gardens to the market by caravan, and not by ship. This mode of transit preserves for the tea its original flavor, preventing its being interfered with or changed through contact with other merchandise. Carriage by ship, on the other hand, impairs its delicate flavor and aroma. It is claimed that good Russian tea, with its small, black, crisp, clean leaves, is the best non-alcholic drink in the world. Of course, it is expensive, but it only takes a half teaspoonful to make a big pot of it, say six cups. The dry leaves of Russian tea have no flavor whatever, but after the hot water is poured over them the odor is delightful.

RICE CROP OF JAPAN.

The rice crop for 1904 is now announced to be 51,402,999 koku (263,692,255 bush.), an increase of 4,928,699 koku (25,284,226 bush.), or 16 per cent., as compared with that af the previous year. The figures also show an increase of 9,105,061 koku (46,708,963 bush.), or 21½ per cent., in comparison with an average for the past seven years, from which the most favorable year and the poorest year are deducted, the average being taken from the remaining five years. This unprecedented yield is due to the prevalence of good weather in the country generally since the planting out and to many agricultural improvements being made by farmers.—Japan Gazette.

BUILT OF STEEL AND CONCRETE

Looks substantial, doesn't it? No indications of hesitation, uncertainty, lack of capital, or experience.

The OLD HOMESTEAD people knew just what they wanted. They went ahead and produced it; the result the finest equipped and most conveniently located canning factory in Canada. Everything about it ship shape, clean, attractive, open for inspection all the time.

The RESULT as they had foreseen was SUCCESS. They turned out "the perfection" of canned fruits and vegetables. The same principles applied to processing made OLD HOMESTEAD canned goods as much superior to the ordinary pack, as the OLD HOMESTEAD factory is to the average canning factory throughout the country.

Try them for yourself.

A small order, Mr. Grocer, will convince you. Insist on getting the OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND. They are bound to give satisfaction to your most particular customers and will increase your sales largely.

The label may be a small thing, but an attractive one helps to make the first sale. OLD HOMESTEAD labels are the handsomest on the market. Drop a card for samples.

Why is a Horse with its head hanging down like Monday?

Because its neck's weak. And, by the way, next week will pretty well see the end of the holiday season. We have received rather more than our share of the mail order business during the travellers' vacation and look to good steady business from now up to Christmas time.

Remember that "BOSTON LUXURY COFFEE" is our special line and is guaranteed to give satisfaction.

BUNGLING OFFICIALS.

THROUGH official bungling the Canadian Summer route to Great Britain was deprived of an opportunity recently of establishing a new record for the delivery of mails on the American continent.

The steamer Virginian, one of the Allan Co.'s new turbine steamers, crossed the ocean from land to land in the fastest time on record, there being only three complete days on which the passengers did not see land. This was particularly gratifying in view of the fact that, owing to an accident to the Majestic, she was carrying the United States as well as the Canadian mails, something never hitherto done by a Canadian steamer. In less than five days after leaving Moville, the mails were landed at Rimouski and should have been distributed in New York the following day. But mismanagement designed otherwise.

After reaching land it took no less than four hours to get the mails on the special trains. The fault for this obviously lies with the post office authorities. They must certainly have known that the Virginian was carrying an extra large mail and should, therefore, have provided proper facilities for the prompt handling of it.

Then upon this came troubles with the Intercolonial Railway. Instead of running the train through, as would have been done in Great Britain or the United States under similar circumstances, the special was side-tracked for nearly everything on the line, while on top of all there were three breakdowns.

On account of this mismanagement and delays Montreal was not reached till 2 o'clock Friday morning instead of on the evening of the previous day, thus spoiling the opportunity of making a large decrease in the transatlantic mail carrying record, and incidentally giving the Canadian Summer transatlantic route the renown it deserved.

Both the post office authorities and the Intercolonial Railway officials evidently require a few lessons in the art of grasping opportunities. In other words, they need to wake up.

AMERICANS EXPLOITING CANADA.

THE development of Cobalt is another example of how our enterprising southern neighbors step in and capture the cream of Canada's rich resources before Canadians realize their value. In the Kootenays, the Yukon, the Alberta oil fields, at Sudbury and the "Soo," at Niagara, in our lumber industry, and in the power plants of Quebec and New Brunswick, the Yankees have been in the van in exploiting Canada's wealth.

In the new mining centre it is the same story. Visitors to this, our latest "nine days' wonder," report that American prospectors have already succeeded in securing a lion's share of the ground. For instance, the Nipissing Mining Co., said to be controlled by John D. Rockefeller, recently purchased a tract of no less than 1,600 acres.

Owing to the lack of smelting plants in Ontario, New Jersey smelters have, up to the present, had a monopoly of this important industry. As soon as ever talk began of establishing a smelter at Toronto, the Americans controlling the copper industry of Algoma arranged to build a smelter at Copper Cliff to handle the Cobalt ores.

Every credit must be given our American cousins for their enterprise, but we desire to draw the attention of Canadians to the necessity of having boundless faith in the future development of Canada's riches, and to the advisability of such development being kept in the hands of our own citizens. We cannot expect the Government to erect a high fence to exclude American enterprise; the only safeguard lies in developing an enterprising individuality in our own people.

VALUE OF TRADE NEWSPAPERS.

THE merchant or manufacturer, the industrial or professional, the manager or operator, who assumes to "get on" without the trade newspapers, directly or collaterally bearing on his particular specialty, is seriously handicapped in the stress of competitive strife, says the Boston Herald. Wilfully, though perhaps not wittingly, he deprives himself of sources of information and material for progress and profit, lack of which must inevitably leave him in the lurch. The managing head of every "house," no matter how large the concern, should above all things see to it that each department head, and so many of the working force as by their intelligent interest show that they would profit by technical and professional information—that all these men are provided with the trade papers best fitted to promote the advancement of each in efficiency. This at the expense of the firm, of course, since the firm, in turn, cannot fail largely to profit by such policy. And don't commit the folly of balking at the preponderance of advertising pages. The information that these contain is never less, and often far more, valuable than that found in the "reading matter."

WHAT ARE FAIR PROFITS?

WHAT is a legitimate profit? That depends on the article, the community, and other conditions. It also depends to a large extent upon the merchant himself. Some merchants will get a bigger profit than others on the same article and under the same conditions. At the same time their standing with the trade will be better than that of the merchant who is selling on a smaller margin.
